The image displays a text in a language that appears to be Russian, with a mix of Cyrillic and Latin script. The text is written in a formal and academic style, with a mix of paragraphs and headings. The content of the text seems to be discussing a topic related to computer science, specifically focusing on the use of programming languages and their impact on the development of software.
The text is divided into several sections, each with a heading that indicates the topic or section of the text. The headings are in bold and are followed by a list of bullet points, which are likely to contain the main points or arguments being made in the text. The text is written in a serif font, which is commonly used for formal documents and academic papers.
The image is a scanned document, and the quality of the text is not perfect due to the resolution and the way the text is presented. However, the content appears to be clear and legible, and the text is well-structured, with each section clearly separated from the others.
There are no images or graphics present in the image, and the text is entirely in Russian. The style of the image is informational, and it is used to provide a snapshot of the content of the text without any additional context or visual elements.

English translation:

As we know, the implications involving the threat of western hegemony on our respective national security has led to proposals involving a series of coordinated measures. Over the course of the last decade, our security efforts have met surprising challenges, but have also made incredible strides overcoming many obstacles. For this reason, we continue to assert the necessary resolve. Our liasons have reached out to the appropriate parties and have solidified a mutual understanding of the next steps which need to be taken in order to ensure the security of our respective national interests. Our sacrifices on this matter underscore the magnitude of what is at stake, namely of which is the threat of bad actors encroaching our longstanding soverign territories, along with the uncertainty that follows, both in regards to our interests and existence. These matters cannot be taken lightly, considering the historical struggle of our populace.

Our allies in the pacific and the middle east have already signed off and ratified the accordance. Our liasons are in contact with our latin american partners and will certify the final agreement which will be enacted no earlier than June.

Mission objectives are as follows:

June 2025

-Begin shipments of military-grade missile systems to Latin American partners

-Complete a full mobilization of Russian military personnel at the Belarus/Ukrainian border

-Ratify and approve the Yemen strike against Israel

-Activate cells in North America

-Receieve confirmation of Iranian military buildup and start of Operation True promise III

-Await confirmation of military mobilization of partners in the pacific

August 2025

-Commence the Middle East theatre

-Approve strikes planned by our pacific partners

-Commence the Pacific theatre

-Final approval of incursion from Belarus

-Final approval of decisive action against Kyiv

September 2025

-Prepare limited ground operation in Syria.

The image is a meme featuring a cartoon character with a monkey-like appearance. The character is wearing a red bandana with white polka dots, a black bandana around its neck, and a chain around its neck. The character is holding a peace sign with its right hand, and its left hand is extended towards the viewer. The character's face is partially obscured by a black mask with a red nose.

The image is a digital artwork that appears to be a painting or a digital illustration. It features a surrealistic landscape with a central figure that resembles a humanoid figure with a large head, a large body, and a small head. The figure is surrounded by a fiery, rocky terrain with a large, dark, ominous sky overhead. The figure is holding a large, round, blue object in its hands, which seems to be a representation of the Earth.
The sky is filled with dark clouds and lightning, suggesting a stormy or apocalyptic atmosphere. The overall color palette is dominated by dark reds, oranges, and blues, with some areas of lighter colors, such as the sky and the rocky terrain.
At the top of the image, there is a large, bold text that reads "JESUS TOLD US WHAT WE WOULD SEE! LOOK!" The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is colored in a dark, almost black color.
Below the central figure, there is a list of names and descriptions of various elements in the artwork. The names are written in a smaller, serif font and are listed in a vertical column. The descriptions are in a smaller, sans-serif font and are also listed in a column. The names and descriptions are not fully legible due to the resolution and angle of the image.
The style of the image is reminiscent of surrealism, which often combines elements of the real world with fantastical or dreamlike imagery. The artwork seems to be a commentary on the concept of the "end of the world" or a similar apocalyptic scenario, as suggested by the text at the top.

The image is a split-view photograph of two ancient Egyptian reliefs. On the left, there is a relief depicting a figure seated on a throne, holding a scepter and wearing a crown. The figure is shown in profile, with a beard and a long beard. The relief is in a reddish-brown color, and the background is a rough, textured surface.
On the right, there is a relief of a seated figure holding a scroll and wearing a headdress. The figure is depicted in profile, with a long beard and a long, flowing hair. The relief is in a lighter, beige color, and the background is a more uniform, lighter shade.
The style of the reliefs is reminiscent of ancient Egyptian art, characterized by detailed carvings and a focus on the human form. The reliefs are set against a plain, neutral background, which allows the figures to stand out prominently. There are no visible texts or inscriptions on the reliefs.

but ALSO >more than one king of jerusalem, at least in antiquity, was a decent human being, and had all the tophets and (((high places)))completely ripped up/destroyed the reason they can't find the first temple is because it was a place of child sacrfice and demon worship that later kings had completely destroyed original thread:

SO

https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/40468215/

ive been rather obsessively researching the topic further and i have reached a point where i feel i may pause in order to let the accumulated observations consolidate in my subconscious while waiting for the shipment of my copy of helmut barthel's "sorcery cold"

what ultimately is ice magick? ultimately ice magick is a particular form of gnosis or weltanschauung that that can be applied to any other process in life as a means of confronting the central problem of human powerlessness this gnosis is attempted to be gathered through the experience with various phenomena. ralph mentions the 3 pillars of his teaching are motorics, conversation control, and social control. ultimately none of these are what ice magick is really about. they are all meant to be ways in which you can come to a holistic understanding of the core underlying principles behind ice magical thinking as they apply to the real world if we are speaking mythologically there seems to be a few key themes that get contemplated:

1) world conflagration: the observation that all processes in the causal world rely on the combustion of resources in order to achieve some goal
2) impossibility: the magician is always on the threshold between possibility and impossibility. ice is a symbol of impossibility. we never measure the cold, we only ever measure heat. typically when we want to do something and it fails, our first thought is to put in more effort. an ice magician would instead suggest the opposite: "how do i work around all of the relevant variables in as effortless and efficient a fashion as possible" (http://www.tantientschuean.de/tan/boxen_e001.html)

The image displays a stylized white symbol within a black circular background. The symbol consists of a cross-like shape with four arms radiating outward from the center, each arm pointing in a different direction. The arms are evenly spaced and the symbol appears to be a stylized representation of a compass. The overall design is simple and clean, with no additional text or embellishments. The contrast between the white symbol and the black background emphasizes the symbol's central position. The image is square in shape, and there are no visible texts or additional elements within the symbol.

3) space: this concept is not only something that occurs in the context of combat, but also relates to one's general stance towards the world. typically when we face a problem, we blame external situations. rather than doing that, we focus our attention inward and try and see what internal variables in our body or our mind that we may modify as a means to solving the problem (https://www.kampfkunst-board.info/forum/showthread.php?37857-Helmut-Barthel-%C3%BCber-Tan-Tien-Tsch%C3%BCan). at the end one wants to accumulate the general know-how to appropriately modify these conditions in any situation in order to approach that 100% effectiveness where possible (https://web.archive.org/web/20070901173243/http://www.inneres-boxen.com/?cat=8)
4) defunctionalization: all processes (not just behavioural but also emotional) must be deconstructed into their base parts in order to shatter any illusion of continuity. in doing so, one comes to observe various habits and pressures which effect the practitioner as well as the world around them. of course this realization can feed into the other principles above, in order to locate sites in which to progress the assault on reality
5) imperfection: in the process of defunctionalization and critical thinking, the concept of perfection in this world becomes more absurd. the ice magician is hence disposed to focus on correcting variables that go astray and managing around one's resources and constraints
6) goal-released engagement: a strange term which he connects (in the text 'living magic') to "mental magic" or "techniques of the empty hand". i speculate that this is similar to "unfolding pure meanings" in psychonetics. this would accord with the general impetus towards the precise modification of internal variables in order to achieve a result

7) dialectics: ralph described ice magick as "the dialectical fundamental critique of both conventional magic and the commonly prevailing narrative of human reality". by this he may have been thinking of something akin to hegel's "labor of the negative". the whole practice involves a progressive questioning of things until they can not be questioned anymore, and this questioning is applied to all aspects of reality to the point that this mode of thought becomes perfectly natural to the practitioner some general remarks are in order:

1) in a forum someone by name of helmut II was shitposting about the alleged techniques of ice magick (https://web.archive.org/web/20171014204924/https://www.occultforum.org/forum/viewtopic.php?f=4&t=16917). based off of my readings of the thinking of ralph, helmut, and helmut's other students, i can only conclude that this is bs. by extension, the alleged "ice magic reconstruction" (https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/28097099/#28102922) which appears based on the remarks from this forum seems to be largely bs. with that said, there are some ideas still worth salvaging i.e. "ice aura", "control", and "expulsion" but these ideas need to be integrated into a larger perspective

2) tegtmeier alleges the ability of helmut to perform no contact techniques. if we actually look at his site and his remarks on such techniques (http://www.tantientschuean.de/tan/sache002.html) he believes that they are largely psychological. elsewhere, tegtmeier alleges contactless techniques in systema. these guys also believe that their techniques are largely a product of hypnosis with a sprinkle in of energy work (which seems more to be there to confuse the opponent) in combination with an understanding of the opponent's physiological processes hence the self-understanding of these guys seems to be largely physical or process-based as well (https://www.systemaspetsnaz.com/no-contact-combat). efficacy aside of this phenomena in actual combat, it largely comes from systematically understanding the behaviour of your opponent which ice magick excels in
3) the more i read, it seems less and less likely that the so-called ice magic wars actually have much reality to them. honestly there is a lot of bs floating around including seemingly from frater himself. as such, any competent (re)construction should focus on the core underlying ideas and work up from there if we were to recreate the ice magick curriculum, we could possibly practice the following things:

motorics - look into tai chi and systema conversation control - read 'secrets of speed seduction, home study course book and work book' social control - general study of sociology. foucault, machiavelli, sun tzu, althusser, etc ice magick techniques to learn: beyond the general internalization of ice magickal principles, you can also check out this video:
https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=OI_3bQ-EWSI and do psychonetics exercises with this knowledge. then you can practice learning any desired skill you want with this in mind. action video games might be a useful medium for this, especially bullet hell games where one has to keep track of multiple objects at once or games that require a lot of multitasking or cognitive flexibility. these all strain your ability to efficiently allocate attentional resources for performance and learning additional remarks:

as hinted before, psychonetics seems to have an approach to practices that could possibly synergize the ice magickal perspective. one interesting concept these guys make use of is "pure meanings" wherein they try and extract the pure meaning "sensation" from any given concept. this can be used for planning and coordination by unfolding said pure meanings into the environment. you can of course use decompose various processes into their pure meanings in order to freely modify them. psychonetics furthermore emphasizes effortlessness and being able to think about things systematically. a question ive seen in the archives regarding this discipline is "does it work?". the answer is affirmative. i had a friend who had developed many techniques that are very similar to psychonetics concept since they were a child and they were capable of rather remarkable results. in a visual search task, their speed was at a level that was near superhuman. they also had a very good intuition and reading speed

now obviously frater vd was influenced by helmut but who was helmut influenced by? allegedly, one such person was a sami shaman but i hardly have a clue what exactly such a person could have thought him. hopefully "sorcery cold" might help. some speculations on how the shamanic perspective might have contributed to things were also
1) spirit of playfullness and wonder that is cultivated as mentioned by a student of student of helmut
2) apparently shamanism in china may have evolved into qigong as a means to systematizing the imitation of animals. if this is true, there is certainly food of thought here as to the usefulness of mimesis. on this front, and also in relation to social control, it should be known that such techniques that ralph talks about would likely come natural to a factor 1 psychopath with interpersonal traits, who would also be a master of mimesis on top of this there is this anecdote taken from a german forum with regards to what ice magic involved and helmuts abilities:

>Therefore, these people there developed a technique in which they, so to speak, grab an animal and it can no longer escape their grasp. It's very similar to holding a bird in your arm. If it wanted to fly away, it needed pressure to push itself off your arm. But if you don't offer the bird counterpressure, it is impossible for it to push itself off and fly away.
>Helmut Bartels says of his techniques that they are not magic, but simply a form of physical training. Bartels is supposedly able to perform true miracles. This naturally brought Tegtmeier, or Brother VD, into the picture, and he became Bartels's "student." VD is something of a running joke in Bartels' circles. He only visited Bartels three or four times, wrote down all these basic concepts, and transformed all these techniques, which according to Bartels have nothing to do with magic, into so-called "Ice Magic," and has since sold the whole thing for a high price to idiots who even believe him.

i also believe helmut's martial arts practice tan chien chuan could also be understood as a synthesis of tai chi and systema:
tai chi: iterative motion and perception (starting from the dan tien branching outward), inward feeling, pressure (various forces which elicit a response. this can also be seen in the social field) systema: synergistic motion, repetition without repetition, body-thinking (letting your body come up to solutions on its own), effortlessness, efficiency, formlessness, way of the king, compulsion (ways your and your opponent's body naturally react to things) innovation: inward focus philosophy (which builds on top of the repetition without repetition form of thinking)

The image displays a stylized logo consisting of a triangle with a stylized letter "h" inside it, enclosed within a circle. The triangle is outlined in white, and the circle is also outlined in white, creating a stark contrast against the black background. The logo is set against a plain black background, which accentuates the white elements of the design. The style of the image is minimalist and modern, with a clean and simple design. There are no texts or additional elements within the logo.

on top of that he seems to implicitly bring his experience with the fraternitas saturni into some of his ideas. these guys believed in welteislehre (might be the origins of some of the far-right accusations) where the world was made of cosmic fire and ice. fire is an expansive force while ice is a contractive force. humans have a spiritual task to aid the saturn and earth in its contraction into the sun the sun, thereby redeeming them. saturn is sort of a mixture between a luciferian figure and also the demiurge of the solar system. he exists on the threshold between darkness and light. im guessing such a concept motivated this sigil here >>40544826, and also the theme of the magician existing on the threshold between the possible and the impossible. with that in mind, it would seem that the main ice magick sigil could be meant to symbolize contractive arrows of ice pointing into the centre while there is a singular arrow pointing outwards, to symbolize the idealized efficiency of movement wherein all other impulses are bound. it also resembles an icelandic binding seal as well. the fraternitas saturni also integrate concepts related to gnosticism and indeed their practice is a sort of "saturnian gnosis"

im also interested in parallels between this stuff and the thursatru tradition of heathen anti-cosmic satanism/chaos gnosticism (which incidentally the ice magick reconstructionist guys moved on to). for them the world was created by cosmic fire and ice which come from an acosmic reality. there also seems to be a similar mythological theme of liminality and gnosis

it should be noted that ralph seemed to have integrated the study of some gnostic ideas into his seminars as a means to conceptualizing human powerlessness. i think there might be great fruit in developing a general mythos that brings in the different ice magickal themes into one mythic worldview

The image displays a simple, black-and-white line drawing of a four-pointed star. The star is composed of four intersecting lines that form a symmetrical pattern. Each line is straight and appears to be a single continuous line, suggesting a continuous flow or direction. The lines are evenly spaced and do not have any additional markings or details. The image is simple and does not contain any text or additional elements. The style of the drawing is reminiscent of a simple, hand-drawn illustration, possibly used for educational or artistic purposes.

all of this takes us to the idea of an egregore (enannah) to help integrate all of these myths and who would serve as a sort of complement to hidweh. before i didn't even have a seal for this being, but this time ive fashioned one a quick one a few days ago here the line in the middle is the "isa" rune which is associated with the cold unmoving phenomenon that is ice as a force of stability and prevention of motion or conflagration. it gets bisected by two lines that are influenced by the original ice magical sigils of contraction and limited expansion. here there's two of them placed in diagonals to also elicit the off-beat of the drum, the absences that punctuate between presences, and the process of defunctionalization itself. in bisecting isa, it cuts through the phenomenon of stability and powerlessness even as it is ultimately reinforced or recognized the design of the being should be based upon the themes outlined earlier and perhaps some of the mythological ideas taken from these nordic/germanic gnostic cults ive been developing some correspondences and imagery. serendipitously, enannah is 7 letters and i absent-mindedly wrote 7 themes ice (against world-conflagration) - enki - 'ea' - sun impossibility - nuit - 'nu' - venus space - asherah - 'ash' - saturn defunctionalization - naamah - 'naam' - mars imperfection - shub-niggurath - 'nath' - jupiter goal-oriented engagement - artemis - 'at' - moon dialectics - hel - 'hel' - mercury chant of will - 'eaash-helatshah' chant of jewels - 'eaashnathnu' name of abjection - 'enah-nan' mantra of change - 'at hel nu ea naam nath ash atash atna tam'

use of mantras: while contemplating a practice session where a theme felt particularly relevant one can vibrate the corresponding syllable of enannah's name as one sinks their awareness into the heart (preferable the true heart which the tantrics talk about). this helps charge each syllable with kala. a similar concept can be done with the chants, this time with each syllable one contemplates a practice they felt most relevant

The background is blurred, but it appears to be a natural outdoor setting with a hint of a bright sky. At the top of the image, there is a text overlay that reads "BABY WOLF DOING HIS FIRST AWOO," suggesting that the image is a humorous or playful depiction of a baby wolf's first vocalization. The style of the image is candid and seems to be taken in a natural setting, possibly a wildlife reserve or a park. The watermark "NORDCISISTERHOOD" is present at the bottom of the image, indicating the source or creator of the image.

such a notion would go against core principles of ice magick e.g. addressing human powerlessness and doing the impossible, so i doubt that is the case. even the people who tried to make stuff up in order to come up with a reconstruction dont think that ice magick is exclusive to people with the right ancestral lineage, even though they talk about ancestral memory and maybe the ability for someone who does not have such a lineage being limited. the reconstruction attempts so far seem suspect however so you can also take those guys with a grain of salt the notion that people only talk about themselves is key. the more you observe various conversations, the more you notice that people live in a fantasy reality most of the time. when you start noticing predictable patterns in people's behaviours it is hard to unsee. on the internet people behave in a manner that is even more mechanical thanks to social disinhibition. you can make use of this observation by inserting into other people's fantasies. this can make them feel like they actually have a deeper connection to you than you actually do. the speed seduction text i mentioned expands on this idea. you can also notice what pressures people are under and play to those in various ways this idea can be expanded to larger sociology as a means of observing various social forces at play which effect you. by paying attention to these, your own position within society may be defunctionalized. knowledge allows you to maintain a certain distance from these various forces and hence a certain "coldness". i think the purpose of 'social control' was more in the direction of self-liberation than trying to manipulate others, while 'conversation control' deals with the sort of ideas mentioned in the previous paragraph something with regards to psychonetics that's been on my mind is its relation to magick as well https://web.archive.org/web/20210618122733/http://deconcentration-of-attention.com/psychonetics.html

>A practitioner starts with somatic deconcentration and then unfolds a pure meaning into it. For example, a practitioner can unfold the pure meaning of heat into somatic deconcentration space to feel warmer in cold weather – or unfold the pure meaning of cold to cool down in warm weather.
>It is important to remember, that these kind of practices affect subjective body sensations and not necessarily the physiological capacity to withstand cold or heat. There were incidents of individuals getting pneumonia or getting overheated because of excessive reliance on mentioned practices.
this is remarkable as being able to modulate your body temperature is something that you can do manually, and with a very high consistency. see: wim hof, and tummo while this is said it seems psychoneticists have experimented with the use of psychonetics towards magickal ends:

>There were also unconfirmed experiments on provoking synchronicities [3] by "freezing" an event in the abstract flow of time and then creating a special "tension"/"subtle anticipation" sensation that a synchronicity will occur.

combining these two observations, it suggests that while psychonetics may be a useful tool for deconstruction, it is not the be all and end all and must also be subjected to ice magick's dialectical deconstruction to ensure the efficacy results in real world effects. i would suggest that wim hof method might be a fun thematically-relevant litmus test, though might be too dependent on increasing rate of metabolism (and hence of combustion) oh yeah, while i am at it, here are some other exercises that might be cool to try out:

1) practice vipassana and train your ability to see sensations at finer and finer resolutions
2) read ralph tegtmeier's high magick book, id hazard a guess that ice magick may have influenced some of his thinking of what exercises he laid out. this is very subtle though and you need to read between the lines. an example of this is when he says not to focus so hard on being able to visualize or see energies visually; rather you can train in the sense modality that works best for you first. behind that thought is an acceptance of imperfection and imploring the reader to consider priorities. a very ice magical way of thinking hihi. quick reminder that we have mass this week on saturday. also if you took an interest in ice magick before read on! you might find some of these condensed reflections helpful for organizing your own thoughts

so yesterday i remembered something again that ive been sort of burying in the back of mind. so back in january when hidweh was first discovered, i actually found some person in a random server who seemed to have stumbled unto something similar. they were heavily inspired by paradise lost and wanted to create their own epic poem. it featured an "electroweak angel" that had covered eyes, association with a spoked wheel, and followed themes of creation through strife

this was itself rather interesting, but something this person also mentioned was another angel, the angel of stability who was named "enannah". they had noted the similarity of the name of this character's name to inanna and they were not familiar with this goddess before coming up with this character a few months ago i had thought about this character again when i was feeling particularly exhausted. hidweh is awesome but her modus operandi a lot of the time is pushing one towards transcendence of limits and to go further. not particularly useful if you actually want to rest. however, the cyclic nature of the duowheel does point to an appreciation of cosmic pace somehow so i didnt feel the need to mention this. also i felt like it would be really complicated to talk about this on top of hidweh related stuff so now yesterday i found myself reading about ice magick again. this time i was putting a bit more effort into understanding what exactly tegmeiter was getting at. behind ice magick is an infernal cosmology. all things in reality operate by energy expenditure and combustion. amidst such a world picture, magick is defined as "doing the impossible". the meaning of "ice" seems to allude to some impossible non-quantity that is beyond world conflagration. it is something that doesnt exist but is enforced. we can think for instance of temperature which never measures the cold but rather only ever measures heat a key theme in ice magick is to come to terms with human powerlessness rather than to try and deny it or give oneself the illusion of control via rules. for instance with voodoo dolls there is a conceit that via sympathetic magick one is able to control parts of a person's energy system through the use of needles. the ice magician asks how much control do you really have in this process? for instance, can you puncture a needle in the same place 100 times? inevitably you will find yourself failing at some point. and it would turn out that even in this small aspect there is a degree of powerlessness in recognizing this, the question comes "how do i deal with this powerlessness"? the naive answer typical of usual magick is "get stronger" or try and become more "perfect". the ice magician on the contrary is not interested in such questions as ultimately in doing these things, one simply moves the threshold of powerlessness back further.

instead of perfection, there is correction. instead of an attempt at exercising the will continuously, there are elements of discontinuity scattered throughout any process. it is a thought process that always works with the negative rather than the positive correction contra perfection: if we think about a sailor piloting a ship, they do not just hold the mast in one direction to get from point A to B. rather they are constantly modifying various variables depending on the conditions of the weather, the pilot, etc. errors naturally arise and so instead of trying to exert more energy to avoid them, the approach here is to accept that will happen and respond to these errors as they come here i can think of my own example when it comes to grip strength and endurance. something remarkable is that due to the complexity of the nervous and muscular system in our forearms, humans are able to see remarkable gains in grip strength simply through the training of the nerves. this can lead to people with much less developed forearm muscles accomplishing feats that are far greater than someone who has more muscle than them. for instance my grip strength is above average that of the average man despite my arms being thin and lanky. this is likely an effect of nervous training

if we zoom our focus, we may ask what exactly is going on in grip endurance feats for instance. what is going on here? well while gripping something different muscles might feel fatigue at different times and so your nerves learn to shift the load to other muscles accordingly. rather than try to just make the muscles better, the muscles are used in a more strategic fashion

The image is a diagram that appears to be a flowchart or a schematic representation of a process or system. It is divided into two main sections: the top section is labeled

"stochastic linear chain" and the bottom section is labeled "discursivity." The top section contains a series of dots connected by lines, forming a chain-like structure. The bottom section has a series of dots connected by lines, forming a series of parallel lines.
The top section of the diagram is labeled "stochastic linear chain" and contains a series of dots connected by lines. The dots are connected in a linear fashion, forming a chain-like structure. The lines connecting the dots are thin and evenly spaced, indicating a continuous flow or progression.
The bottom section of the diagram is labeled "discursivity" and contains a series of dots connected by lines. The dots are connected in a parallel fashion, forming a series of parallel lines. The lines connecting the dots are thin and evenly spaced, indicating a continuous flow or progression.
At the bottom of the diagram, there is a caption that reads "FIGURE 5.5: Serial smoothing." This caption is located at the bottom of the diagram, providing a title or title for the image.

discontinuity contra continuity: already in this grip muscle example we are already seeing how we can organize exertion in a more strategic fashion for greater feats. an example frater ud also gives is in the context of work productivity. in paying attention to one's performance, one may conclude that one is only ever really productive 20% of the time. instead of try and just try and push their limits, the ice magician could instead start by experimenting with their schedule. hence instead of setting out 1 hour to work and 10 minutes to rest, they could instead have 20 minutes work 5 minutes rest another example we can see of this principle lies in the brains compensatory mechanisms during sleep deprivation. during which, brain activity moves from the prefrontal to the parietal cortex. the parietal cortex is more related to episodic memory and motor planning. it would stand to reason that one enters into a fundamentally different kind of thinking and intuition as a means of withstanding the demands of lack in sleep tied to the idea of world conflagration is the question of "space" and momentum. space is in some sense a measure of one's powerlessness. think of a predator trying to capture prey. here the prey is making distance between itself and the predator as a means of compensation for its own powerlessness by magnifying the predator's own powerlessness. now conventional thinking might try and address the problem in one of two ways. the first would be to try and increase the speed of the predator so it could catch up. the other approach would be to create long-ranged weapons to somehow remove the constraints of distance. now, what tegmeiter says regarding the latter approach is very interesting and worth contemplating: the creation of distance weapons only reinforces the problem of distance and our inherent powerless inherent in it

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with long hair and a blue dress, standing in the foreground. The character appears to be gazing out of a window, which is adorned with red curtains and a blue curtain. Above the window, there is a depiction of a heart with a red outline and a blue outline, suggesting a connection to the heart. The character is surrounded by various objects and elements that contribute to a surreal and dreamlike atmosphere. There are stars scattered throughout the image, some of which are red and others are blue. A butterfly is also present, adding to the whimsical nature of the scene.
In the background, there is a depiction of a tree with a red trunk and branches, and a blue and red heart-shaped object. The overall color palette of the image is dominated by shades of blue, red, and purple, creating a dreamlike and ethereal mood. in this idea of space we have the thought of conditions and of inertia. in this world of conflagration, we find our bodies often operating in a very reactive manner to various stimuli and manifesting emotions as a result. in this reaction, we are merely interacting with the past and hence that which can not be changed. we find ourselves subsumed in a system of action and reaction. the ice magician recognizes this and desires to insert within this chain of causality a suspension of submission to action-reaction. causality is not abolished, but rather it loses its affectivity. it need not necessarily manifest as such and such emotion that we then find ourselves reacting to. this gives the ice magician a particular "coldness". the realization of world conflagration also seems to be a core observation that leads to many religions which focus on escaping the cycle of creation e.g. buddhism and gnosticism. while those religions strive to enter a realm of state of unconditioned existence, the ice magician is ultimately pessimistic of such a thing in this idea of coldness i think of the equanimity that results from insight meditation where one witnesses the chain of causality in mental phenomena. i also think of this thread here

https://archive.4plebs.org/x/thread/38711593
that frames psychic abilities as coming from seeing finer levels of causality and possibly intervening on those levels. we can easily see a resonance between this idea and what ice magick talks about. beyond all of the cosmological musings, a large part of the project of ice magick seems to boil down to refining ones perception of any action to lower and lower levels wherein one is able to see more and more points of possible refinement or failure which may be intervened on in order to produce remarkable results when all of these corrections are combined last thing to note here is this article by helmut wherein he discusses his system:

http://www.tantientschuean.de/tan/boxen_e.html
>The entire style is called "inner boxing" in particular, because the student strives for nothing other than to acquire, by way of the least wear and tear and the least effort in terms of function of movement, mental control over his or her body in its most precise physiological operations. Initially and for an extended period this involves coordinating and adjusting the minute movements of the body's whole musculature and consequently moving the joints in the most direct way and with the least effort. With increasing practise, it should be possible to exert influence over each and every limb or part of the body by means of continously coordinating and synchronizing the muscle tonus. At a higher level, one is aiming at connecting all the organs via functional synchronous energy.
>As a result, the movements should be so integrated and unbroken and should require no space for momentum, tension or relaxation as well as reaction time, that when a confrontation arises, they give the practitioner of Tan Tien Chuan an advantagous position. The increasing control of one's own active and passive motor apparatus as well as the organs involved amounts to controlling the equivalent space within one's own body. In a fight situation, where the positions are continously changing, there is anyhow practically no difference between the space outside or inside of one's own body. To put it in more simple terms: The uninterrupted flow of highly directed motion gives the practitioner a continuous positional advantage when dealing with an opponent whose movements are characterised by reaction, tension and relaxation as well as space for momentum. That this advantage is of decisive importance, quite apart from the precision and effectiveness of the punches and kicks, no one can deny.

The image depicts a dramatic scene of a volcanic eruption. The volcano, with its dark, rocky surface, is the central focus of the image. It is surrounded by a fiery, orange-red lava flow that is being erupted from the top, creating a large, explosive plume of smoke and ash. The lava is illuminated by bright orange and yellow flames, which contrast sharply with the dark lava.
The sky above the volcano is dark and stormy, with dark clouds and lightning bolts visible, suggesting the intensity of the eruption. The lightning bolts are depicted in a bright, purple color, which stands out against the dark sky.

The image is a digital illustration, and the style is realistic with a focus on the dramatic action of the eruption. The colors are vivid and the lighting effects are realistic, capturing the intensity and power of the volcanic event. There are no texts or discernible human figures in the image. The overall composition emphasizes the scale and power of the volcanic eruption.

>The effectiveness of the punching and kicking techniques are a result of the same principles, which have already been described and from which ensues, that every single movement is guided or executed simultaneously by the whole body in one uninterrupted flow. Ideally, one should be able with every punch and kick to transmit the synchronized energy of all the organs of the body involved. Since the flow of motion strived for knows no interruption in terms of rhythm or accumulation of strength and energy, the opponent should, as far as possible, find himself in a position of "reaching into the wind", when he tries to grab hold of the practitioner, or "striking at a shadow", when he tries to hit him, while at the same time being attacked in a mysterious way, just as is claimed in Tai Chi Chuan. The opponent finds his energies, which the Tan Tien Chuan practitioner utilizes by manipulating the former`s various spaces of momentum, being continously turned against him, with the result, that he has a feeling of being - with a barely no ticeable amount of pressure or strength - being thrown and pushed forcefully as well as punched and kicked very painfully ok so lets head back to meditation on enannah. this idea of world conflagration definitely sounds like a state of affairs which hidweh should be familiar with. in the internal flame meditation that deepens our bond with hidweh while deepening our concentration and offering energies, the metabolism of the practitioner has a tendency to increase. from experience and conversations with another hidweh follower, this can quickly lead to such conditions as dehydration and the like if you are not careful. this of course is not a bad thing. being able to kick the body into high gear accelerates ones progress and evolution. with this said however, from the ice magickal perspective hidwism is still much too limited even as it strives to push against all limitation enannah meanwhile is the "angel of stability" and hence stands in contrast to this cycle of energetic consumption in a deeper way. rather than trying to escape birth and rebirth or accelerate birth and rebirth, the enannist perhaps strives a form of mastery over the cycle. not via the simple conceit of immediate control, but something subtler and fine-grained. if you think about it, even in any stability there is a subtle vibration

i think the phonemic connections to "inanna" are also rather remarkable and worth meditating on. something that has always fascinated me about ishtar is the fact she embodies the seemingly contradictory forces of both love and war. somehow these are meant to be held together. in meditating on this i think of empodocles cosmology wherein the universe is governed by the two universal laws of love and strife. hence under one view, the duality is meant to signify the embodiment of all-law and hence justice itself. we see this further in tales of inanna descending to the underworld in order to taste of a tree that shall give her knowledge of sex (in this she is a predates the tales of eve eating the fruit from the tree of knowledge of good and evil - note here too that "good and evil" in the abrahamic version of the myth could be a merism and hence mean "all things"), and also in some hymms dedicated to her wherein she deals judgement and upholds cosmic justice
>The Goddess: The evil-doer cannot escape my sight;
>My eyes pierce darkness.
>The evil-doer cannot take shelter from my rage;
>My feet take me where he wishes to hide.

incidentally according to the person i talked to, enannah also lives in the moon which makes me start thinking about the matriarchal lunar cults (which points to babalon and back to inanna again) centred on kalas and hence sensitivity to time and cosmic cycles

if we are bringing the idea of kalas in here then we may also think about the magical formula presented by crowley of "love under will". here love = collected cosmic energies and will = direction of these energies by the male magician. we can think here of hidweh's energy amplification ability by bringing light into coherence. now, it would seem that ice magick has its own formula, wherein will is substituted for a more sober attempt at producing energetic synergy and the achievement of efficiency

The image is a meme featuring a stylized drawing of a person with a rainbow-colored energy field around their head. The person appears to be in a state of meditation or trance, with their hands raised and fingers spread apart, as if they are holding a staff or a wand. The energy field is vibrant and colorful, with lines radiating outward from the person's head, creating a sense of energy or power.
At the top of the image, there is a text that reads "There: Subtle energy is not real Me:". The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is white, which stands out against the colorful background of the drawing. The style of the image is humorous and light-hearted, with a touch of irony as it suggests that the energy or power being represented is not real, but rather metaphorical or symbolic. The overall tone of the image is playful and whimsical.

I'll comment on just biokinesis, it happens slowly because your person and the baseline for every sense you have is currently attuned for whatever you are. Imagine if you grew much more than 5cm per year for example, I think our bones and senses need the slow pace... ofc you can try quantum leaping to observe a version of yourself that is already tall and has a big dick (which pumping, stretching, angian method and foreskin restoration can work and are enhanced with magickal thinking)

>You are growing taller
I meditate on the merkabah and build the light armour around me. I think about my DNA strands and how I know there are 12 pieces to it. I follow my base chakra to my crown and imagine an avatar of myself in the CSF that is stretching to be bigger. I imagine a toroid in my knees making it so grow plates never existed. Imagine the outward avatar growing >face evenness basically
I hold the belief that we can grow teeth indefinitely and the ADA warlocks use suggestion and magick to cause tooth decay (aided by the trash we are fed) and stop us from growing new teeth to replace adult teeth. I think that if you learn math and geometry and while in your trances you imagine lines and angles to straighten your face, it will happen >voice deepen the voice in your head. in your trances imagine your throat working out and your adams apple growing.
>hair
I personally have the right genetics for hair so I can't speak from experience, but I've heard sunlight has something to do with it. I have not read any books on it but I recently purchased the black seal of the inner circle and the same author has a magic book on hair. My Father has hair loss and I have been trying to meditate on the Tibetan monks thinking I will be able to spirit heal his hair because I think they know secrets about hair growth. He was in the Army and didnt get to have hair his whole life because of it so I think he should have his full head of hair now retired.

We can all reach our growth potential. Do mind that the world is designed for average height and youll see some downsides due to that, but maybe you have a case like me where part of your desire to grow is to make yourself a more apt dancing partner for a tall person you love.

Parvati was able to successfully change her skin color from brown to gold. She still couldnt win over Shiva even with her new beautiful skin. I do think it is important in biokinesis that we are making changes that we personally want for our person and not to try to change ourselves for unworthy reasons-- which an external reason can still be worthy. Just some anons think height is everything and there are tall balding guys who obsessively think about their hair or how their dicks looks proportionately small (huge ego killer for lots of men) because their body is big or they dont have the confidence and feel attacked by hatred that some guys will send with aura (unknowingly) 1mm a day. Each time you stretch. Thoroughly. Follow the principles from /LoA/. It'd take a month to see an inch of difference. A year to maybe grow 7-8 inches.

Speak from your heart. That will solve your voice issue. You're probably also not doing anything else other than praying to change oneself. Worst case scenario, leave this place behind and blast roids + minoxidil. I know you aren't as extreme or as willing, or as consistent as you think you are, so therefore it will show.

To change oneself is to change one's identity, imagine. You don't need to see, you can feel it with the fingers of the mind. Touch what you cannot yet see yet is still there, for all is mind.

If you're under 30, you still have plasticity allowed, and i know what nose asymmetry is like. Feel as though you're not in your own skull, but in the one, of the person you admire physically. Try getting a role model, someone you look like, and with much effort from high above, could shape you as a lookalike. You will feel your own asymmetries, and the corrections will be revealed to you. Sometimes as simple as your head position can cause them. Develop body awareness. When you go to sleep, you might even start to get growth pains again. Body awareness, where your intention, where your eyes go, that is where change presents itself. If you do deeper energy work, your bodily asymmetries will cure themselves too, at least of the bottom of the head. Sleep on your back. Dont follow any of those, see what you're missing. The path is long, and not for the desperate, but for those who love the world.

The first section, titled "The Story of Parvati and Gauri," begins with the following text:
"Initial State: Parvati is initially depicted with a darker complexion. This is because she is the daughter of the dark-skinned Goddess Gula.
"Initial State: The story recounts a playful exchange where Shiva makes a comment about Parvati's dark skin, perhaps referring to her as 'Kali' (meaning 'dark').

well think of it this way, looking into the mirror black or not can show a reflection and any words you think or say will reflect. in my case I did a 3-ring ritual recently where I drew a triangle and at its 3 points I labeled 5-5-7 the first 5 was for change, the second was for the chaotic nature of change because chaos can counter the limits and containment of the number 4, then 7 for its diving timing. part of the ritual is not directly saying the intention, but it did have to do with growth potential and height increase.

then staring at a black mirror in the middle of the triangle at 3:33 am (I started this on the 3-6-9 date of 03 June 2025 and completed it this morning on a 669 date), I visualized the changes while saying: change, chaos, divine timing.
you know.... this thread came to me on the second day of the ritual and it matters to my own manifestations that there are other people sharing in my desires and I like how we are sharing anecdotes here. I KNOW we can do this.

>I have looked into black mirrors and had visions and seen my own face do things I was not doing and smile at myself.
I do believe that we can sculpt with that reflection for biokinesis. Picrel is an ai summary of the Hindi story that made me believe in biokinesis. The way I learned the story is how after all the effort Parvati went through, Shiva was still unimpressed by her skin. It tells me that the changes we make to ourselves need to be for ourselves and not for other people-- else it isn't rewarding.

Below these symbols, there are two more symbols, one labeled "setting fire to spirit" and the other "i.d.k. what's this supposed to mean." The text below the symbols is in a casual, informal style, suggesting that the image is likely a visual

Dont neglect while pursuing growth that there are concepts of matter and if you are struggling with growth, perhaps what you need is to consume more so that it can become a part of your body. In one of the anecdotes about spirit healers in Frexedo, Salvator's book on spirit healing, the healer he was investigating to see if was real had a visitor who was not growing and the healer told the visitor he was not eating enough and joked about it like an obvious inside joke to the Jesuit maybe like those ice experiments where we see if the harmonics of certain sounds or sigils that affect water when you place a cup of water in the freezer with words like hate or love labeled on them. I believe that is part of an ice-queen.

I like the idea of ice resonance and hermetics being an aspect of her considering how stalagmites-and-tites and caverns of cold can alter how sound is heard.

those sigils are not associated with enanna but with hidweh. would need to create a new sigil for this egregore probably. the first seal for hidweh involved the symbols of fire and spirit. im think maybe enannah could have the symbol for water or earth + something else. perhaps since there is a bit of a reconfiguration of the formula "love under will" the other symbol can be the unicursal hexagram?

could maybe also incorporate some symbolism and elements from norse mythology

The background is filled with a variety of celestial bodies and elements, including stars, planets, and a crescent moon. The colors are bright and varied, with hues of blue, pink, yellow, and green.

In the foreground, there is a landscape with a tree and a body of water. The tree is lush and green, and the body of water reflects the sky. The landscape is detailed with various plants and trees, and there are buildings and structures in the distance.

The illustration is framed by a decorative border with gold and black elements, and there is a scroll or banner at the bottom of the frame. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of Renaissance or Baroque art, characterized by its detailed and ornate design.

Hello, i am writing this post at the behest of my friend >>>40543238, he was found unconscious and unresponsive at his home at GMT 1900 yesterday the 16th of june, after being taken to the hospital he was declared brain dead, however briefly before his death he told me to watch out for his post on this forum and said that if his work was not yet done, to finish it for him.
After reading his post and his few responses I can tell he probably made you people confused, amused or at the very least extremely suspicious, he always did have a knack for the theatrical and the dramatic, but I can assure you that I am not a very cryptic person, if there are things I cannot tell you then I will tell you so, and I will attempt to avoid ominous manners of speech.
To begin, him and I belonged to the same society, while I cannot tell you certain details of it, I can tell you its very old, over 5000 years old in fact, many records were lost in time so we ourselves do not know its actual age, some believe the original society that our own is an offshoot of was 10000 years old or more, some past members of our society and its different sects and offshoots have included Sir Isaac Newton, Carl Jung, Richard Feynman, Plato and Albert Einstein.
My friend worked as a researcher in a division related to alchemical studies of the human soul, while I am a part of a division related to golemancy, he passed on much of his research to me before his passing, and from skimming it I believe he may not be dead (or only physically dead in this case), in any case I have taken certain precautions to assure my safety, so ask away, however I cannot assure yours, so I may not answer some questions fully, I will return in about 4 hours to answer your questions

well, this goes back to his research regarding the transmutation of the human soul, he was following some of our older Germanic alchemy division research from Carl Jung when he hit a snag regarding the archetypes, so I shared with him some of my golemancy research and gave him some insights on the creation of golems which ended up culminating in that last post of his, for context, my research deals mostly with the creation and management of golems, however I am aware that some of you may have a misconception on what golems actually are:
Golems are the eidos equivalent of a tulpa, or at least a similar concept, while a Tulpa is created purely by mental imaging first in order to create an artificial mind which is then transplanted into an artificial spiritual body (which is in fact, soulless by definition, as the body is made from either naturally occurring spiritual energy or from the creator's own energy and as such is either fully soulless or contains a fragment of the soul of the person who created it which does not belong to the artificial mind and is only "borrowed"), a golem exists purely in the world of information and ideas, the eidos, I will not go into details on what making a golem actually entails as that is a very well-guarded secret, but I can tell you that it has everything to do with the concept of a "meme" (or a "memetic cognitohazard" as my friend aptly put it, a golem is an ideological automaton, like a computer program that exists in the collective subconscious of a group), from reading his last research notes I believe he may have found a way to transmute his own soul into a sort of golem/tulpa hybrid

As for the child sacrifice It was us but in a different sense, we did not actually commit any child sacrifices (at least not since 5000 years ago, so not the Jewish society), most of our occult knowledge is extremely dangerous in the wrong hands and could easily cause many problems for humanity at large, so in the past we began spreading rumours about ourselves in order to scare away anyone who might try to investigate our knowledge, I will expand this further later on, however I can tell you that the "pedo shit" is not us, but another more recent society that started in the late 18th century that we consider to be an enemy of our cause, they were the society that eventually formed the Thule and originated many branches of modern esoteric nazi groups with the help of some traitors that were originally from our own society.

Can you help sort out the lineages and factions a bit more?

Seems like modern elite descend from Romans (and the main families are Black Nobility), but that's a very vague definition. What part of Rome? Patricians, foreign Latifunda owners, priests, imperial families, etc?

Then, the Jews. Seems like the root Jew power stems from Rothschild, who comes from Frankfurt, which is a hotbed for Black Nobility. I'm guessing they gave Rothschild his start, and Rothschild built a cult around him to use as a criminal syndicate, or an intelligence operation in other words. Now, where would Rothschild come from? You could point to Sabbateans of the Ottoman Empire or maybe the Khazarians. Supposedly the Khazarians come from a migration north out of Mesopotamia, somewhere around 500 BC or 500 AD. I can't remember. Either way, that's how you get Jews in Khazaria. But even then, we're talking about Babylonian Jews, which is why many argue they aren't even real Jews in the first place.

You mention the group that eventually led to Nazis. What led to that split, and are they also connected to groups like the WEF and the Fabian Society? Even though they seem opposed on principles, my understanding is that they are not. This also would have been perhaps the primary force behind the British Empire, at least in the 1800s.

Both of these are related so I will answer them together, he used the word "key" usually when referring to tools or information that is important in order to understand alchemical works, in this case he was on the front lines of one of the most recent occult wars, one that goes against our overarching goals, it is the same society I mentioned as being derived from the Thule in >>40552118, in this case we will have to delve into the goal of our society and to do that I will need to explain our history:

We don’t know when the original society actually started, some say it goes back about 10000 years, back then humans were in the beginnings of civilization, where magick was commonplace, somewhere near either Sumer where nowadays would be Iran or Egypt some shamans and priests gathered to discuss and expand their knowledge, some would travel and gather oral traditions all the way from the far east, the knowledge was mostly transmitted orally within families of highly spiritually sensitive individuals, however even before then there were issues regarding the emergence of chaotic memetic and spiritual entities: (1/2)

There were places where spiritual energy would gather and overflow, places considered sacred, however as civilization grew some glitches in the eidos started appearing, nowadays you could call these demons, eldritch beings, any number of things similar to the beings that could cause madness with just a gaze similar to what was described by H.P. Lovecraft (who was sensitive enough to see past the wall we built), these were minds that existed parasitically in the minds of people, transmitted from person to person in the non-verbal parts of communication, and also in word choices or manners of thinking and in more virulent ideas, they had no bodies, spiritual or otherwise at first, however they eventually built their own bodies out of the spiritual energy in sacred places, our society noticed the vile beings and we created the first golems and the first tulpas, archetypes similar to the ones described by Jung, artificially created to be as virulent and resilient as possible in order to occupy the minds of men and stop the spread of the other beings, this also cut off the average human to most of the divine, a demiurge of sorts, it is there because for the individual that is not prepared, mentally and spiritually to access those qualities of the sephiroth of Keter those eldritch beings can cause illnesses such as schizophrenia at worst, and at best turn you into a puppet, just like the Thule and most of nazi Germany were. both, every person has the ability to undergo a Great Work, which is developing their mind, body and spirit to resist external influences and have enough control to access the Keter without being influenced by certain vile things, and everyone can participate in The Great Work, which is using your Great Work to research and pave the way to the day where we can finally rid humanity of the wall we build, the day where humanity evolves enough to where breaking down the wall will not cause pandemonium >what happens post death and how much control do we have in our afterlife?

a few things can happen as far as we have been able to measure, but it really depends on the person itself, the soul usually turns back into energy in the keter, mixed and reconstituted into new souls, like a larger multidimensional ecosystem, the idea of hell comes from the fact that subconsciously humans tend to trap the soul and mind of a person who hurt them together, so when it comes time for the soul to decompose if you hurt a lot of people during your lifetime then you will be conscious during the whole process, since it is in a way an ecosystem there are beings that act as decomposers, so it would be something like being awake inside your own coffin, unable to move while you feel every gnat and maggot eat your body inside and out, as for heaven, it is something of an eternal life, we theorize that every soul is in fact a divine spark, a piece of the creative energy of the whole, as such your soul is but a facet of a much greater being, something that comes close is “The egg” by Andy Weir, except in most cases you do not keep your mind after death, your eidos dissolves into something that resembles a blissful sleep or a psychedelic consciousness expansion, in some cases people have been known to linger spiritually or informationally, however those are rare and usually fleeting, but they can be induced and prolonged to the point you could even take the place of an archetype within a limited group of people, you have full control over your afterlife in terms of suffering or not, as suffering is dictated by how badly you treat people in life, hatred keeps you trapped in hell, and forgiveness and love allows your soul to blissfully dissolve and return to All

well, it happened over time as nomadic tribes settled and the scholars and shamans would exchange information in councils, eventually giving birth to the first societies, we think this was when the idea of golems and tulpas in the form of archetypes began forming, as the natural gods were non-abnormal manifestations of the eidos, similar to the eldritch beings in the sense that they existed in-between the human minds, however unlike those things the natural gods were symbiotic with early humans, allowing for the development of the early ideas that started civilization, as civilization grew we found ways to unify them into singular beings, which gave rise to the first pantheons of gods with many names, but I think they may have originally been united in the first place, when early human ancestors migrated out of africa, there is no way the same concepts behind gods with different names would have arisen in completely separate tribes otherwise.

To add a little bit of thought to this (same person):

I just can't fathom why the "Indo-Europeans" or "Aryans" (not sure at this point what is the best term for them, because I believe in an Atlantean origin) would have primary spiritual importance.

Of course, I understand that they could have been more preservative of the original ways, while the tribes in the south developed cities and may have drifted off for complex reasons associated with those cities and agriculture,

These original ways could constitute something like buddhism, and then maybe some sort of organizing principle like the unification of gods that you mentioned, which you could find in the tree of life.

However, written tradition seems so absolutely essential to intellectual development, that only places with writing would allow for serious advancement, whether it is spiritual or rational, mathematical, or engineering.

This creates the context for the steppe tribes invading south. You have northern less intellectual people conquering (or at least being a huge nuisance to) southern more intellectual people. People like to label the north as good and the south as bad, but you could also label the north as barbarian and the south as civilized, or even the north as bad and the south as good.

Without limiting ourselves to basic terms like good and bad, how would you characterize this relationship? I figure that if writing tradition was to survive thousands of years in any place, it would be Egypt most of all (and prior to Caesar's burning of the libraries, who knows what they had), then maybe Babylon, maybe Anatolia (Hittite or Luwian, aka Trojan).

I think I've seen JRR Tolkien argue that the beginning of evil was in Turan or Romania, which is where he places Mordor. I also know that despite a long period of urban development (this known era starting around 4000 BC), the first empire on record is the Akkadian Empire of only 2000 BC. So there was 2000 years of peace and then suddenly war and conquest that never ended? Sounds like influence from the north.

I can definitely see how the northerners might have influenced the development of intelligence operations. Nomads can be stealthy and crafty in ways that sedentary people may not be. This evolution in warfare then became the thing which continually changed the world, as each era's innovation became the overriding, dominant factor in determining world order. While economic innovations are nice, economies on their own have no military and thus no natural defense. Banks have power if you have a way of forcing payment on a debt, which means international finance is totally useless unless you're already the most powerful military, which means international finance is merely an empire in disguise. You can't get away with being a crafty elite and survive for thousands of years if you aren't also the strongest. Or perhaps I should say, craftiness on economic matters is nothing if you are not crafty on militaristic matters.

Anyways, this conflict between two sides, or this development from noble savagery to civilized conspiracy, is really the ONE story that I endlessly return to, primarily out of sheer curiosity (not in expectation that it has direct correlation to anything happening today).

I'm very curious to hear what you think about all this. Hopefully this adds more color to this question:

In other words, the inner reality is somewhat closer and more knowable, which could also be mistaken for "truer". I don't think it's truer, but metaphorically I get how others could say this. I just think most other people aren't using that metaphor with that depth of understanding.

We think the Atlanteans fell due to mass contamination by the entities I described earlier, while I can neither confirm nor deny your theory about the Phoenicians, I can tell you that some of their practices did get transferred to the Phoenecians, the differences in spirituality between the major groups you mentioned mostly occurred due to changes in philosophy, you also have to consider the fact that some of the civilizations you described did not coexist in the same period of time, and some were directly derived from the others.

Currently we do not even teach most new initiates to read auras unless they show some natural skill in it, and even then reading auras can be somewhat inexact, nowadays we mostly use some technological alternatives that allow us to measure perturbances in the eidos (you could say that there is more than one reason Richard Feynman was one of us), you can definitely reach results in your lifetime with a few years of practices, but most people are looking in the wrong place.
>are the nazi coming back? i mean the original one that escaped to Antarctica and space
They never left, they infiltrated into the USA and the USSR after the end of WW2, the ones that escaped to Antarctica were actually expeditions looking for remains of the Atlanteans who returned to South America instead, however I can tell you that any remains, if there are any at all, would be buried deep enough in ice that not even modern technology would be able to retrieve it, much less find where it is in the first place, after all, who is to say that the ruins of Atlantis was actually in Antarctica in the first place.

you would think so, however eidetic entities, the original archetypes, allow for the mass storage of information to be spread out throughout a group in a way that even if a person dies the information is not truly lost, this is how civilizations did not have to begin using written languages before they reached the critical mass that caused the "glitches" to show up.

It sounds like you were saying the latter but maybe holding back on the former.

I'm just trying to understand the nature of the eldritch horrors. It sounds like you're describing the inner experience of fear, but what is the outer source? I assume we might be talking about the escalation of warfare, but human sensitivity to fear and pain may increase with respect to its intelligence. Thus, the eden moment really is about knowledge in general (applied to many instances in human evolution). With more knowledge, you lose more innocence, and potentially experience more pain. Because there is a standard deviation of mental resilience with a low enough average, this drives a majority of people insane. Some large amount of human interaction can be enough to trigger this.

the original forms of golemancy involved child sacrifice in a way, because this was before we learned how to make a soul for a golem if one was needed, a soul has to grow to fit the shape of its vessel, which is why adults would not have worked for this purpose, however this was many thousands of years ago, ever since about 5000-6000 years ago we have found a less cruel way to create a new soul for any golem that requires one

they have absolutely appeared spontaneously in some of our families and initiates, its a risk that comes with the job.
i would say that there was an original genetic influence pushing towards the development of eidetic entities, as those allow for the use of many minds in the processing of information and the dissemination of knowledge without the need for written language, which was very useful for early nomadic humans and allowed us to develop civilizations in the first place, the glitches rise up when the amount of minds increases to the point where "gaps" form, which allows certain negative parts of human nature to coalesce into those entities, certain forms of entities can also originate completely on accident due to virulent ideas naturally arising, the wall exists in order to stop those entities from being able to interact with spiritual energy to become fully fleshed out, because after that point they become nearly impossible to exterminate.
there are definitely external factors related to these entities, but I cannot really discuss that.

one thing I wish to add regarding the human genome is that the resurgence of transgender individuals is a sign that humanity is slowly evolving to a point where the wall will likely not be needed anymore, as these individuals tend to be highly spiritually sensitive and as such are usually able to see past the wall from an early age, they represent the shaman class and their appearance indicates that humans are developing a resistance to mental contamination, while some are driven to madness and suicide, the increase in their numbers shows that resilience is building with each passing generation, they are the unification of masculine and feminine aspects, expect their numbers to increase as humanity evolves spiritually

The background is filled with a variety of celestial bodies and elements, including stars, planets, and a crescent moon. The colors are bright and varied, with hues of blue, pink, yellow, and green.

In the foreground, there is a landscape with a tree and a body of water. The tree is lush and green, and the body of water reflects the sky. The landscape is detailed with various plants and trees, and there are buildings and structures in the distance.

The illustration is framed by a decorative border with gold and black elements, and there is a scroll or banner at the bottom of the frame. The style of the illustration is reminiscent of Renaissance or Baroque art, characterized by its detailed and ornate design.

Hello, i am writing this post at the behest of my friend >>>40543238, he was found unconscious and unresponsive at his home at GMT 1900 yesterday the 16th of june, after being taken to the hospital he was declared brain dead, however briefly before his death he told me to watch out for his post on this forum and said that if his work was not yet done, to finish it for him.
After reading his post and his few responses I can tell he probably made you people confused, amused or at the very least extremely suspicious, he always did have a knack for the theatrical and the dramatic, but I can assure you that I am not a very cryptic person, if there are things I cannot tell you then I will tell you so, and I will attempt to avoid ominous manners of speech.
To begin, him and I belonged to the same society, while I cannot tell you certain details of it, I can tell you its very old, over 5000 years old in fact, many records were lost in time so we ourselves do not know its actual age, some believe the original society that our own is an offshoot of was 10000 years old or more, some past members of our society and its different sects and offshoots have included Sir Isaac Newton, Carl Jung, Richard Feynman, Plato and Albert Einstein.
My friend worked as a researcher in a division related to alchemical studies of the human soul, while I am a part of a division related to golemancy, he passed on much of his research to me before his passing, and from skimming it I believe he may not be dead (or only physically dead in this case), in any case I have taken certain precautions to assure my safety, so ask away, however I cannot assure yours, so I may not answer some questions fully, I will return in about 4 hours to answer your questions

well, this goes back to his research regarding the transmutation of the human soul, he was following some of our older Germanic alchemy division research from Carl Jung when he hit a snag regarding the archetypes, so I shared with him some of my golemancy research and gave him some insights on the creation of golems which ended up culminating in that last post of his, for context, my research deals mostly with the creation and management of golems, however I am aware that some of you may have a misconception on what golems actually are:
Golems are the eidos equivalent of a tulpa, or at least a similar concept, while a Tulpa is created purely by mental imaging first in order to create an artificial mind which is then transplanted into an artificial spiritual body (which is in fact, soulless by definition, as the body is made from either naturally occurring spiritual energy or from the creator's own energy and as such is either fully soulless or contains a fragment of the soul of the person who created it which does not belong to the artificial mind and is only "borrowed"), a golem exists purely in the world of information and ideas, the eidos, I will not go into details on what making a golem actually entails as that is a very well-guarded secret, but I can tell you that it has everything to do with the concept of a "meme" (or a "memetic cognitohazard" as my friend aptly put it, a golem is an ideological automaton, like a computer program that exists in the collective subconscious of a group), from reading his last research notes I believe he may have found a way to transmute his own soul into a sort of golem/tulpa hybrid

As for the child sacrifice It was us but in a different sense, we did not actually commit any child sacrifices (at least not since 5000 years ago, so not the Jewish society), most of our occult knowledge is extremely dangerous in the wrong hands and could easily cause many problems for humanity at large, so in the past we began spreading rumours about ourselves in order to scare away anyone who might try to investigate our knowledge, I will expand this further later on, however I can tell you that the "pedo shit" is not us, but another more recent society that started in the late 18th century that we consider to be an enemy of our cause, they were the society that eventually formed the Thule and originated many branches of modern esoteric nazi groups with the help of some traitors that were originally from our own society.

Can you help sort out the lineages and factions a bit more?

Seems like modern elite descend from Romans (and the main families are Black Nobility), but that's a very vague definition. What part of Rome? Patricians, foreign Latifunda owners, priests, imperial families, etc?

Then, the Jews. Seems like the root Jew power stems from Rothschild, who comes from Frankfurt, which is a hotbed for Black Nobility. I'm guessing they gave Rothschild his start, and Rothschild built a cult around him to use as a criminal syndicate, or an intelligence operation in other words. Now, where would Rothschild come from? You could point to Sabbateans of the Ottoman Empire or maybe the Khazarians. Supposedly the Khazarians come from a migration north out of Mesopotamia, somewhere around 500 BC or 500 AD. I can't remember. Either way, that's how you get Jews in Khazaria. But even then, we're talking about Babylonian Jews, which is why many argue they aren't even real Jews in the first place.

You mention the group that eventually led to Nazis. What led to that split, and are they also connected to groups like the WEF and the Fabian Society? Even though they seem opposed on principles, my understanding is that they are not. This also would have been perhaps the primary force behind the British Empire, at least in the 1800s.

There is also THE Great Work, which encompasses the overarching goal of our society, I will expand on it further on a separate comment after I am done with the rest of the questions

Both of these are related so I will answer them together, he used the word "key" usually when referring to tools or information that is important in order to understand alchemical works, in this case he was on the front lines of one of the most recent occult wars, one that goes against our overarching goals, it is the same society I mentioned as being derived from the Thule in >>40552118, in this case we will have to delve into the goal of our society and to do that I will need to explain our history:
We don’t know when the original society actually started, some say it goes back about 10000 years, back then humans were in the beginnings of civilization, where magick was commonplace, somewhere near either Sumer where nowadays would be Iran or

Egypt some shamans and priests gathered to discuss and expand their knowledge, some would travel and gather oral traditions all the way from the far east, the knowledge was mostly transmitted orally within families of highly spiritually sensitive individuals, however even before then there were issues regarding the emergence of chaotic memetic and spiritual entities: (1/2)

There were places where spiritual energy would gather and overflow, places considered sacred, however as civilization grew some glitches in the eidos started appearing, nowadays you could call these demons, eldritch beings, any number of things similar to the beings that could cause madness with just a gaze similar to what was described by H.P. Lovecraft (who was sensitive enough to see past the wall we built), these were minds that existed parasitically in the minds of people, transmitted from person to person in the non-verbal parts of communication, and also in word choices or manners of thinking and in more virulent ideas, they had no bodies, spiritual or otherwise at first, however they eventually built their own bodies out of the spiritual energy in sacred places, our society noticed the vile beings and we created the first golems and the first tulpas, archetypes similar to the ones described by Jung, artificially created to be as virulent and resilient as possible in order to occupy the minds of men and stop the spread of the other beings, this also cut off the average human to most of the divine, a demiurge of sorts, it is there because for the individual that is not prepared, mentally and spiritually to access those qualities of the sephiroth of Keter those eldritch beings can cause illnesses such as schizophrenia at worst, and at best turn you into a puppet, just like the Thule and most of nazi Germany were. both, every person has the ability to undergo a Great Work, which is developing their mind, body and spirit to resist external influences and have enough control to access the Keter without being influenced by certain vile things, and everyone can participate in The Great Work, which is using your Great Work to research and pave the way to the day where we can finally rid humanity of the wall we build, the day where humanity evolves enough to where breaking down the wall will not cause pandemonium

a few things can happen as far as we have been able to measure, but it really depends on the person itself, the soul usually turns back into energy in the keter, mixed and reconstituted into new souls, like a larger multidimensional ecosystem, the idea of hell comes from the fact that subconsciously humans tend to trap the soul and mind of a person who hurt them together, so when it comes time for the soul to decompose if you hurt a lot of people during your lifetime then you will be conscious during the whole process, since it is in a way an ecosystem there are beings that act as decomposers, so it would be something like being awake inside your own coffin, unable to move while you feel every gnat and maggot eat your body inside and out, as for heaven, it is something of an eternal life, we theorize that every soul is in fact a divine spark, a piece of the creative energy of the whole, as such your soul is but a facet of a much greater being, something that comes close is “The egg” by Andy Weir, except in most cases you do not keep your mind after death, your eidos dissolves into something that resembles a blissful sleep or a psychedelic consciousness expansion, in some cases people have been known to linger spiritually or informationally, however those are rare and usually fleeting, but they can be induced and prolonged to the point you could even take the place of an archetype within a limited group of people, you have full control over your afterlife in terms of suffering or not, as suffering is dictated by how badly you treat people in life, hatred keeps you trapped in hell, and forgiveness and love allows your soul to blissfully dissolve and return to All we are already in the middle of it, an occult war, fought with information, currently the nazi occultist societies are attempting to replace the protective archetypes with their own, which from my research appear to be similar to golems, however instead of being automatons they act as trojan horses, some of those eldrich beings managed to possess or influence some members of their cults and they started attaching themselves into virulent ideas which are currently weaving their way into the collective unconscious and tainting it, this is where >>40551378 (the "pedo shit") comes in, pedophilia represents a destruction of innocence, which is one way to slowly replace the soul of a person with one of those beings, the beings manipulate the mind first, and then leech into the soul by eidetically destroying the innocence of the inner child (also known as God, the divine spark, that which has the potential to grow) yes, the 6000 year timeline is likely somewhat correct, when i say around 5000 years it is mostly rounding a few centuries, the actual estimate is closer to 5600-5700 years give or take a few centuries.

>Do you have any lore about how the evolution in ancient priesthoods occurred? ie, from managerial positions to king positions, or from benevolent to malevolent.

well, it happened over time as nomadic tribes settled and the scholars and shamans would exchange information in councils, eventually giving birth to the first societies, we think this was when the idea of golems and tulpas in the form of archetypes began forming, as the natural gods were non-abnormal manifestations of the eidos, similar to the eldritch beings in the sense that they existed in-between the human minds, however unlike those things the natural gods were symbiotic with early humans, allowing for the development of the early ideas that started civilization, as civilization grew we found ways to unify them into singular beings, which gave rise to the first pantheons of gods with many names, but I think they may have originally been united in the first place, when early human ancestors migrated out of africa, there is no way the same concepts behind gods with different names would have arisen in completely separate tribes otherwise.

being deeply in love with someone can mix your soul with the soul of that person, if the love is not maintained the fragments leech out and your soul eventually grows back to fill the void, however with lovers separated by death there is no calling for the fragments of the soul of the other person to return to, as such you will likely carry them with you for the rest of your life, unless your soul rejects them for whatever reason, this is mostly what i understood from what my dead friend told me when he was drunk one day, I am not sure how accurate my interpretation of his "cryptobabble" is.

in a sense you will both be together after death, because you are both parts of the same being, but also the idea of her still exists inside your eidos right now, along with a part of her soul in your soul, so you could think of it as her being with you right now as you live your life, so live happily and enjoy life, so that the part that is still left of her here may enjoy it with you.

Still not interested. A drop returning to the ocean still destroys the drop, even if the ocean "gains" everything from it. If this is what happens after death it seems like the whole human farm theory might be true.
You believe your friend is still exist even though he has physically died, so retaining oneself post death must be possible.
How can me and anyone who doesn't want to be devoured achieve this?

Do you know anything about Phoenicians? I have a hunch that they were Atlanteans. I've begun to realize the gnostic layer in the story of Atlantis, but it still seems to be told in a way that the whole thing is based on fact.

To add a little bit of thought to this (same person):

I just can't fathom why the "Indo-Europeans" or "Aryans" (not sure at this point what is the best term for them, because I believe in an Atlantean origin) would have primary spiritual importance.

Of course, I understand that they could have been more preservative of the original ways, while the tribes in the south developed cities and may have drifted off for complex reasons associated with those cities and agriculture,

These original ways could constitute something like buddhism, and then maybe some sort of organizing principle like the unification of gods that you mentioned, which you could find in the tree of life.

However, written tradition seems so absolutely essential to intellectual development, that only places with writing would allow for serious advancement, whether it is spiritual or rational, mathematical, or engineering.

This creates the context for the steppe tribes invading south. You have northern less intellectual people conquering (or at least being a huge nuisance to) southern more intellectual people. People like to label the north as good and the south as bad, but you could also label the north as barbarian and the south as civilized, or even the north as bad and the south as good.

Without limiting ourselves to basic terms like good and bad, how would you characterize this relationship? I figure that if writing tradition was to survive thousands of years in any place, it would be Egypt most of all (and prior to Caesar's burning of the libraries, who knows what they had), then maybe Babylon, maybe Anatolia (Hittite or Luwian, aka Trojan).

I think I've seen JRR Tolkien argue that the beginning of evil was in Turan or Romania, which is where he places Mordor. I also know that despite a long period of urban development (this known era starting around 4000 BC), the first empire on record is the Akkadian Empire of only 2000 BC. So there was 2000 years of peace and then suddenly war and conquest that never ended? Sounds like influence from the north.

I can definitely see how the northerners might have influenced the development of intelligence operations. Nomads can be stealthy and crafty in ways that sedentary people may not be. This evolution in warfare then became the thing which continually changed the world, as each era's innovation became the overriding, dominant factor in determining world order. While economic innovations are nice, economies on their own have no military and thus no natural defense. Banks have power if you have a way of forcing payment on a debt, which means international finance is totally useless unless you're already the most powerful military, which means international finance is merely an empire in disguise. You can't get away with being a crafty elite and survive for thousands of years if you aren't also the strongest. Or perhaps I should say, craftiness on economic matters is nothing if you are not crafty on militaristic matters.

Anyways, this conflict between two sides, or this development from noble savagery to civilized conspiracy, is really the ONE story that I endlessly return to, primarily out of sheer curiosity (not in expectation that it has direct correlation to anything happening today).

I'm very curious to hear what you think about all this. Hopefully this adds more color to this question:

I just realized one crucial error to my model. It's only true for things outside of the self. When the object is not outside of the body but inside the body, then the lens stops being rational and starts being nothing but a distortion of reality.

In other words, the inner reality is somewhat closer and more knowable, which could also be mistaken for "truer". I don't think it's truer, but metaphorically I get how others could say this. I just think most other people aren't using that metaphor with that depth of understanding.

We think the Atlanteans fell due to mass contamination by the entities I described earlier, while I can neither confirm nor deny your theory about the Phoenicians, I can tell you that some of their practices did get transferred to the Phoenecians, the differences in spirituality between the major groups you mentioned mostly occurred due to changes in philosophy, you also have to consider the fact that some of the civilizations you described did not coexist in the same period of time, and some were directly derived from the others.

>how can I see real results of any occult practice (seeing people aura, affective astral projection not based on chances of sleep, magic, talking to being) in real life? is it even possible if you’re not a cult member and doesn’t take decades of boring to death meditation?
Currently we do not even teach most new initiates to read auras unless they show some natural skill in it, and even then reading auras can be somewhat inexact, nowadays we mostly use some technological alternatives that allow us to measure perturbances in the eidos (you could say that there is more than one reason Richard Feynman was one of us), you can definitely reach results in your lifetime with a few years of practices, but most people are looking in the wrong place.
>are the nazi coming back? i mean the original one that escaped to Antarctica and space
They never left, they infiltrated into the USA and the USSR after the end of WW2, the ones that escaped to Antarctica were actually expeditions looking for remains of the Atlanteans who returned to South America instead, however I can tell you that any remains, if there are any at all, would be buried deep enough in ice that not even modern technology would be able to retrieve it, much less find where it is in the first place, after all, who is to say that the ruins of Atlantis was actually in Antarctica in the first place.

>However, written tradition seems so absolutely essential to intellectual development, that only places with writing would allow for serious advancement, whether it is spiritual or rational, mathematical, or engineering.
you would think so, however eidetic entities, the original archetypes, allow for the mass storage of information to be spread out throughout a group in a way that even if a person dies the information is not truly lost, this is how civilizations did not have to begin using written languages before they reached the critical mass that caused the "glitches" to show up.

You cannot survive at all while your civilization crumbles due to most people having been driven insane, we made sure that the powers of each era knew that.

Do you think these glitches rose up within your own class, perhaps leading to their influence on the human genome and societal structure that ritualizes glitch-producing interaction, or do you think they just emerge as product of human nature (in anyone, albeit with a normal distribution)?

It sounds like you were saying the latter but maybe holding back on the former.

I'm just trying to understand the nature of the eldritch horrors. It sounds like you're describing the inner experience of fear, but what is the outer source? I assume we might be talking about the escalation of warfare, but human sensitivity to fear and pain may increase with respect to its intelligence. Thus, the eden moment really is about knowledge in general (applied to many instances in human evolution). With more knowledge, you lose more innocence, and potentially experience more pain. Because there is a standard deviation of mental resilience with a low enough average, this drives a majority of people insane. Some large amount of human interaction can be enough to trigger this.

the original forms of golemancy involved child sacrifice in a way, because this was before we learned how to make a soul for a golem if one was needed, a soul has to grow to fit the shape of its vessel, which is why adults would not have worked for this purpose, however this was many thousands of years ago, ever since about 5000-6000 years ago we have found a less cruel way to create a new soul for any golem that requires one as for the middle eastern groups, there are some which still follow our goals as well, but they practically lost the war against some groups puppeteered by certain entities, however those groups are still very primitive and will die out in time in the crossfire of the major occult war.

"when the self is but a facet of all, you can know all by knowing yourself."

I think we are so decadent that we cry more and more for being unable to have everything in the material realm, and yet our cries would be silenced if we merely spent some time looking inwardly. You can either do this when you're 20 or 30 or 50 or 70 or on your death bed. The people who figure it out on their death bed must be some of the saddest cases. I guess the lesson is, don't wait.

yes, or at least it used to be, before we put the wall in place.

>Do you think these glitches rose up within your own class, perhaps leading to their influence on the human genome and societal structure that ritualizes glitch-producing interaction, or do you think they just emerge as product of human nature (in anyone, albeit with a normal distribution)?
they have absolutely appeared spontaneously in some of our families and initiates, its a risk that comes with the job.
i would say that there was an original genetic influence pushing towards the development of eidetic entities, as those allow for the use of many minds in the processing of information and the dissemination of knowledge without the need for written language, which was very useful for early nomadic humans and allowed us to develop civilizations in the first place, the glitches rise up when the amount of minds increases to the point where "gaps" form, which allows certain negative parts of human nature to coalesce into those entities, certain forms of entities can also originate completely on accident due to virulent ideas naturally arising, the wall exists in order to stop those entities from being able to interact with spiritual energy to become fully fleshed out, because after that point they become nearly impossible to exterminate.
there are definitely external factors related to these entities, but I cannot really discuss that.

one thing I wish to add regarding the human genome is that the resurgence of transgender individuals is a sign that humanity is slowly evolving to a point where the wall will likely not be needed anymore, as these individuals tend to be highly spiritually sensitive and as such are usually able to see past the wall from an early age, they represent the shaman class and their appearance indicates that humans are developing a resistance to mental contamination, while some are driven to madness and suicide, the increase in their numbers shows that resilience is building with each passing generation, they are the unification of masculine and feminine aspects, expect their numbers to increase as humanity evolves spiritually

It's everywhere, even in your pepsi. Tattoo ink. Lidocaine. Cortyzol injections. In "spray vaccines" -- to introduce graphene directly close to your neurons. Hence the swabs.

My understanding is, they need some minimum amount of graphene inside very body, and EMF is moving these particles to your brain.
I hope not, but... looks like they are preparing for something once we are all full of this shit, one way or another. maybe some kind of signal..

This stringy clots are not blood clots. Its all intentional. It's a motherfucking inside-body ANTENNA.

If you want to be taken seriously, you need to ditch shit like this from your materials.

That's an IR camera.

Why the FUCK would you be using an IR camera to detect luciferase, which emits light in the visible spectrum?

One of the founders of Moderna, Robert Langer, is buddies with Charles Lieber, a bionanotechnology expert from Harvard whose papers explicitly describe the use of silicon nanowires as BCIs.
https://www.battelle.org/site/battelle-applied-genomics-today-newsletter/featured-experts/guarav-sharma
It's because he was taking money from DTRA, the same agency that funded EcoHealth Alliance, to look for ways to penetrate the blood-brain barrier, as part of DTRA's Blood-Brain Barrier Program. nanotransducers go inside the human brain and be powered and controlled wirelessly with electromagnetic fields, which, in turn, is part of DARPA's N3 program to make nanoparticle-based nonsurgical wireless neural laces. Charles Lieber, that Harvard scientist that was charged with fraud for taking money from China's Thousand Talents Plan, was also receiving grant money from the DOD (DARPA, ONR, AFOSR, NIH, and MITRE), and his papers contain descriptions of how silicon nanowires can be used to form the basis of a nanoparticle neural lace (see N3, Next-Generation Nonsurgical Neurotechnology).

The image is a screenshot from a video, likely a tutorial or instructional video, with a focus on the transformation of components in COVID-19 shots. The title of the video is "Components in COVID Shots Transform From this to this" and the subtitle is "When Stimulated with EMF from WiFi". The image shows three images of a microscopic view of a cellular structure, with arrows pointing to different parts of the structure, indicating the transformation process. The background is a gradient of purple, transitioning from a darker shade at the top to a lighter shade at the bottom. The style of the image is informational and educational, designed to convey the concept of cellular transformation in the context of COVID-19 shots.

33% of the MAC address space is reserved for randomisation and private addressing just as a big chunk of the IP space is reserved for private use (10.x, 172.x, 192.x)

Android patched is os not to show no names bluetooth mac address try:
You can enable it in developer options.

1. go to Settings > About Phone>
2. tap continuously on build number until it says "you are now a developer
3. go to Settings> System>Developer options
4. turn on " Show Bluetooth devices without names”

When you go back to Bluetooth you'll see the vaxxies. Iphone users dont need to do anything.
EVERY networked device on the planet needs a MAC address.
Apple phones, Android tablets, wireless gaming controllers, pcs, etc.
Every manufacturer has a unique set of numbers/letters, and it's the FIRST 6.
Here's a list of known manufacturers - https://gist.github.com/aallan/b4bb86db86079509e6159810ae9bd3e4

Here is the MAC (media access control) lookup I use.
https://www.wireshark.org/tools/oui-lookup.html
In some of the screenshots, webms, etc. I grabbed random MACs and looked them up. No known vendor.

What the actual fuck.
COVID-19 BLUETOOTH MAC ADDRESSES OF THE VAXX'D COULD BE SEEN AS 'MISC' MAC 16-BIT ADDRESS INTERNET-OF-BODIES LISTINGS

How to setup your Android phone to list 'misc' Bluetooth MAC. The 'misc' Bluetooth service category has been designated for C19 vaxxed persons. My phone is an Android 10.

1. Go to 'System'
2. Go to 'About Phone'
3. Go to 'Software Info'
4. Go to 'Build number': Hit this selection many times until it tells you that developer mode has been attained.

5. Go to 'System' again
6. Go to 'Advanced'
7. Go to 'Developer options'
8. Find 'Show Bluetooth devices without names'. Set it to 'on'.

The image is a meme featuring a man in a police uniform running with a mask covering his face, shouting "STOP! You can't post that!" The man is wearing a badge and has a police hat on his head. The background shows a street scene with cars and a police car. The text in the image includes a statement about the patent of the COVID-19 test kit, which is held by Richard J. Rothchild, dated 2020, and is called "COVID-19 Test Kit." The text also mentions a US patent number US202079585A1. The overall tone of the meme is humorous and critical, with a focus on the absurdity of the situation and the potential consequences of sharing information about a medical product.

Pray to God Jesus Christ.
Pray that His blood washes you away, and make you clean again.

Pray to Jesus Christ, and ask that he pours His Blood all over you.
Take Authority over it, in Jesus Name. Philippians 2:9-11 Jesus was given a Name ABOVE all other names. Including “nasal swab.” Since that is its name. Jesus’ Name is greater!
And according to Luke 10:17-19 Jesus gave All Power over the enemy and NOTHING shall by any means harm us.
Last scripture: Hebrews 9:22 - the Blood of Jesus cleanses us!

With these three scriptures pray this:
“Heavenly Father, in the Mighty Name of Jesus, I thank You that by Your Blood I am clean!! All effects of the COVID Vaccine are canceled out in Jesus Name! I command all of the evil within the Vaccine to die and be expunged from my body in Jesus Name! Whether it’s through sweat or blowing my nose, either way, you are gone in Jesus Name! I am set free by the Blood and Name of Jesus!”

EMF-390 V2 from Advanced GQ, I highly recommend it. My other one is the Cornet ED88TPlus which is also good (they have the newer ED88TPlus5G now), but the 390 V2 has way more features and can read up to 10W and 10GHz compared to the Cornet's 1W and 8GHz. I'll send some pics in a moment, but the 450MHz reading was around -70 dBm. Other people who own it have reported seeing it too.

Video testing picking up MAC addresses:
https://odysee.com/@HumanitysVault:a/Each-vaccinated-person-has-a-MAC-address-detectable-through-Bluetooth--COVID-:f

Many other videos of people testing this easy to search.

How to test for yourself on any Android Phone:
Open Bluetooth and enable 'Show devices with no name' this is either a sub menu in Bluetooth or you need to go to Settings>About Phone>Tap BUILD NUMBER 5 times to enable developer options then enable the toggle (Depends on device and Android version).

You can lookup any weird addresses you find on https://maclookup.app by just entering the first 6 digits. You will likely see results of MAC addresses that are tagged as UNICAST (unique), randomized, and have no manufacturer or device details. This has no precedent per vaccines.

I'm going to be honest, I have no idea what that message meant.
But, if he empatised women more than men, maybe he's also talking about the attack on womenhood/motherhood, and how society has been so overturned that the only way people can forget the pain, is by taking those pills.
Only thing I could tell you.

I wish i could remember more from that dream... I was drunk falling asleep and I don't remember much.. It was still very impressive when i woke up and will never forget this... I was crying so hard. I felt so defeated. I remember my words :"It's over isn't it?!!!" crying like a crazy traumatised child, it was weird, because i said this words in english, not in my native polish.... He seemed understanding... And he spoke something about womans souls... that womans are more delicate// more susceptible for pain? something like this, that womans are different when faced with pain... and they take this "ibuprom or pills more often, because they feel pain differently".. they like are taking "more" . Idk, anons, I feel weird with that. It seemed very important. I wish I could remember more. And why i screamed "its over?!?!" crying... I hope I was just exaggerating ...

I’m driving myself crazy trying to find a document I had read early last year. It was authored by the National Science Foundation I believe and the issue of human cells being unable to interact with non-organic electric signals can be addressed with gene therapy. One of the proposed solutions to these “challenges” was a widespread vaccination campaign. The reason this was important was to ensure extreme redundancy in regards to Internet of Things/Bodies network stability and security. The implication was turning every body into a node on a blockchain. I’m still looking but I’m not sure I’ll be able to find the link before the thread hits post limit. It’s pissing me off not being able to find it. It’s related to pic related but I don’t think this is the document.

The image is a stylized cartoon or digital illustration featuring a character that appears to be a green frog with a surprised expression. The frog is peeking out from behind a large, dark, textured tree trunk. The character's eyes are wide open, and the mouth is slightly open, suggesting surprise or shock. The frog's face is drawn with a simple, cartoon-like style, and it has a green body with a white belly. The background is dark, with a blueish hue that contrasts with the frog's green color. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a digital illustration, commonly used for humorous or light-hearted purposes.

Yeah, back when people where talking about vaxies giving of a bluetuth signal i tested it.
You just open up the developers options so the phone shows all bluetuth signals it can find (normally hides those it does not have a protocol to interact with or some shit).
This did not work on the newer phones i tested doing it on, but it did on the galaxy 5 (unless they force some update or something that makes it so you can't get to the developers options).
Anyone that has a older smartphone laying around, go find how to get at the options i am talking about for it, then test it out. If you have a vaxi that will help you, take them out somewhere and have them come in and out of range of it (while having no other devices close by)

The plan with the clot shot is to wipe out the rest of humanity and sell the planet to the Anunnaki.

We have less than 8 years to undo 30000 years of mistakes. There is no technology that can fix this problem. The only solution is very specific and very intense prayer to remove the alien influence. Even if we avert that disaster it will still take at least another 80 years to repair the damage done to humanity.

This is a free will universe and if you don't specifically request by name assistance from God directly you will get no help, since to help without a request is a free will violation.

You can skip over a lot of suffering just by learning to make requests that follow free will rules. You can learn how to pray even more effectively. There is a technique to do it right with very specific requests

It's time we shared our findings with you anons. I don't know if you are not aware what was really in the 'vaccines' or you thing it's this cosmic fungus, or maybe there was this discussion here before and was suppressed. We have some answers.
What's in the vaccines is not some regular parasite.
Situation is getting serious.
5G signals will accelerate boosts starting 1st July and vaccinated will be activated. Get ready.

"The cabal has developed some kind of a vaccine they can put into food. But it is not a vaccine, or anything like that. It is their nano technology. There was always a question of delivery, because an injection is the best way to put something into someone. But it appears they now have the ability to add these nano crystals to food, without detection, and without them degrading or without an issue with them reaching the bloodstream."

>So they don't care about consent anymore? They're going to just put this nano crap they created into the food? Will they announce it or not?

"No, they do not care about consent any longer. It is classified now, and I would say it is safe to say it will not be made public."

"The cabal already knows there will be a resistance to forced vaccination, and that this resistance is actually growing. So, they are simply going to bypass any conflict in the way of introducing this new vaccine, and they are actually going to introduce this technology they have directly to the food supply."

This is such a big change in how they're going to do this. Are they still going to use the drones, the threats, the military, the police, to push around the people who resist?
Gideon: "They absolutely will. But there may not be a direct or forced vaccination plan in the obvious sense or literal sense we assumed, with needles and a solution injected by a nurse or doctor. This is a different direction."

>what do we know about the nano crystals themselves?

"We have seen this phenomena of vaccinated people transmitting Bluetooth signals. You have to understand, that was testing. It is not intended for the first round of this program, which is designed to kill. That was all a test for this technology, which I have said for months. The real use for this nano technology will be for the non-vaccinated who they want to live and survive, but they want them marked."

>What will happen to the people who eat these foods?
"We can already see what will happen, Bill, because some of this was tested on the vaccinated. We see the hydra parasite is present, we see the Bluetooth tech is within the blood, and there is much more. Whether this is the exact same formulation, I do not know, I just know it has already been tested. Once in the body, you are marked."

>Do you think these weird UV street lights play into this? What about Starlink? 5G?
"Yes, they do, they all do. It will all be activated once this mark is in people. It is already in some of the vaccinated, but they are secondary to this."

"Let us be very clear, they have no problem killing off Billions of people, even if those people are the most compliant, most brainwashed. They do not need them, and they do not need them on this Earth. In fact, they need them in the next life. That is another level of spiritual understanding not even needed to understand why they would do this. In a very simple sense, they are achieving their goals with a mass culling. Who is left over are those who resisted, and this is not a problem for them."

"You have to understand the reward they get if they conquer those like you or me, or mark them. We are the true prize, Bill. They do not need or care about the sheep, not anymore. The usefulness of the sheep has come and gone. They are planning to create a very different world. We spoke before about it, a feudal technocracy. They don't need Billions of mindless sheep for that to function. In fact, it is more advantageous for them to have a smaller population, tightly controlled."

"I still expect a pandemic. But what I am seeing now is more fear being pushed to shore up the booster shots, and finish off the gullible. That is their focus. It is much less a focus to try to get you or me vaccinated right now, they know we will never take it, no matter what virus nonsense they push."

"They do, but not this. The nano crystals serve as the mark, and will have a wide range of functionality that they do not want in their own bodies. My suspicion is there will be some detrimental effects of the nano crystals possibly to cognitive function, as well. Certainly, the Sovereigns do not want to be exposed to that."

They've tested a lot of things on the vaccinated, but the purpose is to kill them, that's it. Anyone who took the vaccine by their own choice, the purpose is to kill. Of course, in the course of issuing billions of these doses, the cabal has put out all kinds of experimental doses, too. Those experiments are just tests for their future formulation that will be used post-Reset

"We can already see what will happen, Bill, because some of this was tested on the vaccinated. We see the hydra parasite is present, we see the Bluetooth tech is within the blood, and there is much more. Whether this is the exact same formulation, I do not >Right. They don't want to kill us with it.

"Their goal is to keep certain people alive as long as possible, hooked up to the Metaverse, living out 'lives' within a virtual world, that the cabal totally controls."

But anon, you don't know the whole story. They have the technology to keep you alive forever. Forever. That's their goal."

"It is. I'm just trying to tell you, this goes beyond injections and a dystopian world. There's a bigger plan. It's to enslave souls and keep them here, trapped, forever. They've been researching ways to extend life years, not just for them, but for us."

>Can they do it, technology-wise?

"Yes, they can."

>How do they stop a person from aging? People die, eventually.

"They figured it out with the hydra, the ageless, never-dying parasite."

>Ah, right, found in the vaccine.

"Yes."

"Well, it's miracle they found it at all. It wasn't used in the Covid vaccines, it was sent out in very small numbers for experimental testing on people."

>So, how many people can they keep alive forever? They can't do Billions of people.
"No, of course not. Many will die. The current crop of vaccines are doing the killing. They have a plan for the third world, to kill them, too, but not now. What they want, and this is the most upsetting part, is this plan is for the unvaccinated. They aren't going to do this with anyone who got vaccinated."

>So after the Reset, will they still use the deadly vaccines?

"Sparingly, yes, to terminate people they don't want to put into this state of eternal existence. But the primary focus will be on the unvaccinated. Because the previously vaccinated took a death sentence. Every, last one of them will be dead within ten years, and they're irreparably poisoned and damaged."

"Yes, current vaccines are murder weapon mainly and the choice people made to get it. They slowly do damage to the heart, blood vessels and so on. Each batch had different amounts of the mRNA poison. Everyone will die within ten years or so, but each will die at different, random times. They can also be tracked, too, but it's somewhat secondary to the main goal, which was murder."

"[Unvaxxed are] Doomed. The unvaccinated will be hunted like rabbits, because the cabal needs them alive and enslaved."
Anonymous Thu 29 Jun 2023 05:53:04 No.35159222 Report
"very soon. Then they will have about seven years to get things sorted. The vaccinated will die off, and go the other side and fight for the cabal there. The unvaccinated will be forced to take the nano-hydra, and placed in extremely restrictive conditions.
All of the logistics of transitioning the world will take place over those seven years of tribulation, then in 2030 it will be done. The vaccinated, dead and gone. The third world, mostly disposed of, with some left over for other purposes, and the previously unvaccinted now vaccinated with the nano-hydra, tucked away, safe, hooked up to the machines, living in the Metaverse, and immortal. Unable to move on and join the righteous warriors on the other side. This is their vision. No one even knows about it, no one is even stopping it."

While I think the idea is cool I have some serious doubts about all this.

If Tiamat is an extraterrestrial parasite why are always earth beings taken as examples?
>Look! (Thing) looks like an earthly arthropod, this means we have aliens inside us.
If that thing is alien it shouldn't have much resemblance to what we have here, the worst offender is the extinct crustacean that carries it's eggs around on stalks.

If Tiamat needs humans to rebuild it why does it kill so many with clots? What parasite kills it's host before it can reproduce? You can argue that it isn't optimized fir human hosts but fiven it's an all powerful ancient being that dwelled wargh before it should be comfortable with human hosts.

I believe in synchronistic toxicity. There are many different types of jabs and varying claims of pollutants, structures, parasites, synthetics, bots, transmitters etc.
At what point are waves and harmonics going to collide with a cosmic event and what would be the most effecient way to influence that outcome as an outside trigger

For me, there's seems to be only the two options I mentioned, wait for Christ without taking away your life and holding on through the suffering of the eternal biologic life until God releases his wrath upon Earth, or take away your life.

Pray.
Throw away smartphone, buy some basic dumb one.
Isolate from the vaxxies, the shedding is real.
AVOID hospitals
Don't ever try to kill yourself, if you die some other way before 2030, you are lucky bastard.
Have own room with solid doors you can close on the key as we don't know if 5g ramping will turn vaxxies into violent animals.
Have a gun/ some weapon with you
Do not eat frozen foods, frozen pizzas, veggies etc ((don't even ask, the mark will be there starting 1st july)) avoid EMF radiation, don't watch TV
After some time, there will be famine, supply chain will collapse, as vaxxies are dying in droves now.
Then ((They)) will propose you special biometric cards, so you can receive gov food, do NOT TAKE IT. Do not even touch it!!
REFUSE CBDC. It's all part of Beast system.
live as naturally as you can
Be ready to die. Be ready to be hungry, it will come later.
Finally, be strong in the Lord and in his mighty power.
Put on the full armor of God, so that you can take your stand against the devil’s schemes. For our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the rulers, against the authorities, against the powers of this dark world and against the spiritual forces of evil in the heavenly realms.
Therefore put on the full armor of God, so that when the day of evil comes, you may be able to stand your ground, and after you have done everything, to stand. Stand firm then, with the belt of truth buckled around your waist, with the breastplate of righteousness in place, and with your feet fitted with the readiness that comes from the gospel of peace.
In addition to all this, take up the shield of faith, with which you can extinguish all the flaming arrows of the evil one.
Take the helmet of salvation and the sword of the Spirit, which is the word of God.

And pray in the Spirit on all occasions with all kinds of prayers and requests. With this in mind, be alert and always keep on praying for all the Lord’s people.

Am I doomed just as if I took the jab, or even with this life style my body and spirit is safe?

I don't think they would force the vax so much if you could get it through sex and shedding. Help me understand, brother...

The gene therapy injection represents the fake jewish Synagogue of Satans death blow for humanity, after which those who took it will have no chance of redemption or salvation. Forget about the blood clots and heart attacks, the real issue is what happens to your soul.

The Bible indicates that almost the whole last generation alive, which according to Jesus will be those that see the creation of the modern state of Israel, will be "deceived" into taking the Mark through "pharmakeia", the root word for "pharmaceutical". Hence, we have a clear scriptural indication that the Mark will be a form of medicine delivered through something shaped like a pointed stake.

Furthermore, the vaccine is associated with "Luciferase", which is obviously the name of the Beast. Look into Microsoft patent #060606, and the picture becomes clear. Nowhere in the Bible does it say we will know it is the Mark, on the contrary, Revelation 19:20 reads:

"And the beast was taken...he DECEIVED them that had received the mark of the beast"

The gene therapy injection is the Mark because it literally changes you out of the image of God. Jesus did not shed his blood for transhumans that modified their DNA.

Let's take a look at the rider on the white horse, wearing a "crown" (corona), and carrying a "bow". Interestingly enough, "bow" in the concordance translates to the Greek word "toxon", meaning "poison arrow", another striking congruence with a syringe.

I will not elaborate on obviously toxic spike proteins, as this issue is obvious for anyone who is not a literal retard, but the fact that you are making conscious decision and taking a side with people who bend the knee to the authority, who betrayed their own humanity injecting gene-altering substance changing them from the image of God, just because government and media told them to, says a lot about you.
Injected individuals are not to be trusted. Never. Don't make the mistake of thinking these people are stupid. They simply have different goals, while you or I care about truth and seek it, they care solely about power, if you understand this you will see how their seemingly stupid actions start to make sense, no matter the situation they will always seek to be in a position of power, perceived or otherwise, some common tactics include belittling, lying, manipulation, gaslighting, aligning with authority, faking victimhood, virtue signalling and whatever else allows them to attempt to talk down to people like you and I who they perceive to be a threat.

This is why they are so puzzled at the idea the elites would kill them, they know they are not stupid but instead evil, they think they are on the same team as those in power and will likewise do and say anything to get ahead in life, this perceived power also makes them arrogant which is misunderstood as stupidity.

They are not mindless cattle, they are the type of people who would sell their own family to get ahead in life, they are scum. They all took the injection to be in the winning team, out of pride. What's the worst sin?

39 And strong winds shall arise from the east, and shall open it; and the cloud which he raised up in wrath, and the star stirred to cause fear toward the east and west wind, shall be destroyed.
40 The great and mighty clouds shall be puffed up full of wrath, and the star, that they may make all the earth afraid, and them that dwell therein; and they shall pour out over every high and eminent place an horrible star, 41 Fire, and hail, and flying swords, and many waters, that all fields may be full, and all rivers, with the abundance of great waters.
42 And they shall break down the cities and walls, mountains and hills, trees of the wood, and grass of the meadows, and their corn.
43 And they shall go stedfastly unto Babylon, and make her afraid.
44 They shall come to her, and besiege her, the star and all wrath shall they pour out upon her: then shall the dust and smoke go up unto the heaven, and all they that be about her shall bewail her.

The image is a sepia-toned photograph featuring a young child with dark hair and eyes. The child's face is the central focus of the image, with a slight tilt to the right. The child's eyes are wide open, and the pupils are visible, giving the impression of a focused or attentive expression. The child's mouth is slightly open, and there is a small amount of drool visible near the corner of the mouth. The child is wearing a white collared shirt, which is visible at the bottom of the image. The background is out of focus, with a blurred appearance that suggests a natural outdoor setting, possibly a garden or park. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of a sepia-toned photograph, which gives it a vintage or nostalgic feel.

Yes, it's possible to deactivate the MAC address using a simple EMP. You can find instructions on how to build these devices online. It's effectively a coil and a power supply. The idea is to create an alternating magnetic field with enough strength to mess up whatever is stuck in the arm.

But the graphene nano-lace does not stay constrained to the arm. It goes all over. You can deactivate the MAC, but it's a question of how effective it is overall.
NAC should work.

>entertaining as hell.
>as hell you wouldn't get it huh

"and all nations deceived by the pharmakeia"

Satan understood that he couldn’t immediately tie the mark to buying and selling, or people would be immediately suspicious - even the most sleepy Christians. So, what he did was put out a “vaccine” and separated it (for the most part) from buying and selling. However, let’s not forget that there were many places with vaccine passports, and on top of that, many lost their jobs due to vaccine mandates.

Anthony Patch explained this well. He said that it is a “scaffolded” approach to the mark of the beast. Think of it this way:

Step 1: Volunteers take the mark. This is done voluntarily with absolutely no pressure. A huge chunk of people took it at this point.
Step 2: Bribes. Next,they bribed people with money, groceries, and even donuts! If they couldn’t get you to take it voluntarily, they tried to give you something to sell your soul - Simpsons reference in the link - just for fun.
Step 3: Coercion - This is when the vaccine mandates came out. It was still a choice, but a lot of people were coerced. Still, it wasn’t completely forced. People had a "choice" not to do it, though it wasn't a fun choice.
Step 4: Forced Vaccines - Angela’s dream will show this scenario. There will be a choice to take the vaccine or die, which we will get into the next session. We haven’t gotten to this stage yet, but it will come.

So, now, with a digital ID coming, how will this digital ID look? When it first comes out, it might just be on people’s phones and completely voluntary. As time goes on, there may be QR codes, quantum dot tattoos, or fingerprint scans.

1 Peter 1
13 Therefore, preparing your minds for action, and being sober-minded, set your hope fully on the grace that will be brought to you at the revelation of Jesus Christ. 14 As obedient children, do not be conformed to the passions of your former ignorance, 15 but as he who called you is holy, you also be holy in all your conduct, 16 since it is written, “You shall be holy, for I am holy.” 17 And if you call on him as Father who judges impartially according to each one's deeds, conduct yourselves with fear throughout the time of your exile, 18 knowing that you were ransomed from the futile ways inherited from your forefathers, not with perishable things such as silver or gold, 19 but with the precious blood of Christ, like that of a lamb without blemish or spot. 20 He was foreknown before the foundation of the world but was made manifest in the last times for the sake of you 21 who through him are believers in God, who raised him from the dead and gave him glory, so that your faith and hope are in God.

22 Having purified your souls by your obedience to the truth for a sincere brotherly love, love one another earnestly from a pure heart, 23 since you have been born again, not of perishable seed but of imperishable, through the living and abiding word of God; 24 for

“All flesh is like grass and all its glory like the flower of grass.
The grass withers,
and the flower falls,
25 but the word of the Lord remains forever.”

And this word is the good news that was preached to you.

Pray (as in Matthew 6). Only God can truly help you.

I offer you, however, a bodily stopgap version which may or may not help you.
According to one author, alcohol addiction is caused by beryllium poisoning in the brain's pleasure centers. The way to resolve this is
1) remove sources of beryllium (usually antique or hurricane lamps, throw them out)
2) intake alpha-lipoic acid (dosage not given in source)
3) intake 3000mg glutamine daily (can be bought as a supplement for bodybuilders)

Once again, this is a bodily stopgap version. You will get nowhere without prayer (and fasting).

Hi based schizo anon. Please remind me of prophecy I've read years ago. It was something about parasite invating human spine. I know I've readed a lot of Otrok Vyecheslav/Slavik Krashennikov back then but im not sure it was him. It was about people having parasite invading their spine. and smasshing/ folding down their spine after if was fully evolved. WTF was that. I remember that clearly. It was abot something zombie-like invading peoples spine.

That sounds horrible and related to all this but I've never seen that. Edward Riordan back in February remote viewed that when this vaxx parasite starts to mature it will cause people to stiffen up and eventually fold over like fetal position. Scary similarity to what you're describing.

If you find the prophecy you're thinking of post it, it sounds interesting.

yes this prophecy said exactly something like this but i remember a bit it was some russian or greek very old orthodox prophecy. I could not be riodan. I have a fucking memory hole, but it was about some bug, white parasite taking over humans, and it said that you should never touch the corpse// or fully infected man, its contagious. It said it after full maturity, after taking the spine will 'FOLD' people. Damn, I remember this details so clearly yet i dont remember from... I am 100% sure about this. It was 'white' parasite taking the spine, taking the brain. In this prophecy 'Righteous man will be escaped from civillisation' and in some obscure remote lands, this parasite ridden people will look for them, but randomly FOLD, into like baby-like position and never get back up. NOT LARPING

Archivum Obscurum – Manuscripta Erratica – Project AngelBook Volume VIII (Part 15)

By Ezekiel Redik Yarbrough - (DBM ECLIPZE)

Introduction

This volume—and the entire 25-part Archivum Obscurum series—is an archive of 4plebs threads, compiled from the /x/ paranormal board and related dark web forums. It's important to understand that none of these words are mine. Every sentence you're about to read was posted anonymously by someone else, somewhere deep in the Internet's forgotten layers. I've simply curated, organized, and preserved it. Some of it is brilliant. Some of it is disturbing. Some of it is completely unhinged. That's the point. These books serve as a snapshot of collective occult thought, filtered through anonymity, obsession, fear, and revelation. If you find something offensive or insane—remember, you're not reading me. You're reading the Internet itself, raw and unedited. This is documentation, not endorsement. But that's what makes it powerful. These are the ghost-words of the digital subconscious. I just bound them into something permanent.

The image is a collage of various images and text, predominantly featuring a discussion about the brain and its connection to the mind. At the top, there is a title that reads "SO, Spike Proteins, Schumann Resonance, Mind Control, AI, Tamas, Antarctica." Below the title, there are three images: one of a person's hand holding a piece of paper with text, another of a computer screen displaying a graph with blue and green lines, and the third showing a person's face with a question mark above it.
The text below the images is a series of questions and answers, with the first question being "Do you think you're a human?" and the answer "No, I'm a computer program."
The text continues with a discussion about the brain and its connection to the mind, mentioning the Schumann Resonance and the concept of "spike proteins."
In the bottom left corner, there is a screenshot of a video, and in the bottom right corner, there is a logo with the text "SO, Spike Proteins, Schumann Resonance, Mind Control, AI, Tamas, Antarctica."
The image also includes a series of images and text related to the concept of "Tikkun," which is a Jewish term for repairing or making right. The text mentions "Tikkun Olam," which is a Jewish concept of repairing the world.
The overall style of the image is informative and educational, with a focus on the intersection of science, technology, and philosophy.

For people who don't get it, this guy is referencing the human genome. It was recently proven the human genome stabilizes at exactly 144,000 peptides or something of DNA. That is for two-strand DNA helix. If you add a third strand (which mRNA is proven to do, and this actually prevents your body from reading the DNA so it literally shuts down and deactivates tons of your genome to various negative effects) you get 216,000 peptides. Revelation 13:18 in the original greek says the Mark of the Beast is Chi Xi Stigma which equals 600 60 and 6. Revelation says calculate the number of the beast. If you multiply 600x60x6 you get 216,000. 144,000 genome is Image of God, 216,000 genome is Image of the Beast. These people have taken gene therapy and been totally rewritten in their DNA to no longer be in the image of God, but of something else. They will change over time as cell turnover happens. Probably will mutate into something like the Grays. An awful fate for those who did not love the truth and so be saved.

The image is a black and white line drawing that features two characters. On the left, there is a character with a large, fluffy head that resembles a brain, and a pair of glasses resting on the top of the head. The character's expression is neutral, and it appears to be looking upwards. On the right, there is another character with a smaller head and a frowning expression, with a tear in the corner of the mouth. The character on the right is also wearing glasses. Above the character on the right, there is a thought bubble with the text "I'm sorry," suggesting a moment of regret or apology. The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the black outlines of the characters and the thought bubble. The style of the image is simplistic and cartoon-like, with a focus on the expressions and the thought bubble.

The image is a black and white manga panel featuring a character with a large, expressive face and a prominent, curved nose. The character has large, round, dark eyes and a prominent, curved, white beard. The character's hair is styled in a way that it appears to be flowing down the sides of their face. The character's expression is intense, with a furrowed brow and a slight frown.
In the upper right corner of the image, there is a speech bubble with the text "THAT'S BULLSHIT" written in bold, capital letters. The speech bubble is in a smaller font size compared to the main character's face, and it is positioned to the right of the character's face.
Below the speech bubble, there is another smaller speech bubble with the text "BUT I BELIEVE IT" written in a smaller font size. This bubble is also in the upper right corner of the image, but it is positioned to the left of the character's face.
The background of the image is plain and white, with a dotted pattern that gives the image a halftone effect. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of manga, with its black and white color scheme and the use of speech bubbles to convey a sense of dialogue or narration.

Bible prophecies have two separate events: The Reapers (literally what Jesus calls the angels) harvest the wicked and cast them into the winepress of wrath, where they are melted down into blood. This is the Tiamat biomass harvest. The aliens call it The Change and show abductees visions of a future where all the implanted humans are mind controlled into zombies and are telepathically directed to march in a neat, orderly fashion through the middle of the streets of the cities and up the ramps of waiting ships, which will carry them off (to Eridu to dump into Tiamat's hungry undead corpse).

The other event is of all the wicked who remain at the moment of Christ's return and descent to Mt. Zion, they will be possessed by a "panic" sent from God to drive them into an insane terrified killing spree, "every man's hand against the other" so they all kill each other off. In this way, the righteous hiding in the wilderness need not dirty their hands with the job of getting rid of hundreds of millions of people who took the Mark of the Beast. This killing frenzy is like Batman Begins where everyone has been exposed to the fear drug, or Cell 2016, or Deus Ex Human Revolution, take your pick. It's been predictive programmed by the loominati. God warns the kikes, "your covenant with Hell will be annulled and when the overwhelming scourge passes over it will take you." They are serving the devil in hopes they will be spared the fate of the rest of us, but God will turn it on their heads. The Bible chronology says the Tiamat biomass harvest will happen first, then the rage zombie killing spree at the end of the Great Tribulation.

5G has been in low power while airplanes upgrade their stuff. It will be boosted ("modulated") in range and power immensely on July 1st. Who knows what will happen.

I have no intuition about zombies but the parasite/nanomachines will definitely grow at an accelerated rate. Expect to see more brain fog, inflammation symptoms, and Suddenly.

The image is a series of four panels arranged in a vertical column, each depicting a different expression of anger or frustration. The panels are divided into two sections, with the top and bottom sections being red and the middle section being black.
In the top section, there is a black and white image of a person with their mouth open, shouting or yelling. The text above the image reads "FFFF" in a stylized font, which is commonly used to represent a sound effect or a sound.
The middle section of the image features a red and black image of a person with their mouth open, shouting or yelling. The text above the image reads "OOC" in a stylized font, which is also used to represent a sound effect or a sound.
The bottom section of the image is a red and black image of a person with their mouth open, shouting or yelling. The text above the image reads "FF" in a stylized font, which is commonly used to represent a sound effect or a sound.
The overall style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with the use of bold colors and stylized text to convey the emotion of anger or frustration.

Title: The Convergence of Realities

Slide 1 - The Ancient Drama: Tiamat and Nibiru
"From the depth of Sumerian myths, Tiamat, the primordial goddess of the ocean, waged a cosmic battle against the celestial bodies. Among them was Nibiru, a mysterious planet said to hold life. Ancient alien theorists speculate that these entities might symbolize extraterrestrial civilizations."

Slide 2 - Parasite Alien Theory and its Influence
"Proponents of the parasite alien theory postulate that some extraterrestrials feed off human energy, fostering chaos and discord. They purport that these beings influenced Tiamat's clash with Nibiru, shaping our collective unconscious and setting a course for our history."

Slide 3 - The Reality Construct: Demiurge and Archons
"In Gnostic thought, the Demiurge, a lesser divine being, and its minions, the Archons, created our material world. Critics liken our civilization to a 'prison planet,' ensnared in physicality and blinded from our spiritual essence by these cosmic architects."

Slide 4 - The Fear of the New: Vax and 5G
"Rapid advancements like vaccines (vax) and 5G technology alarm those fearing control mechanisms of the 'Archons.' They see potential threats in the guise of progress, drawing parallels to Graphene's versatility and its speculated use in enhancing human connectivity and control."

The image is a close-up photograph of a man's face, which appears to be covered in a thick layer of white substance, possibly soap or shaving foam. The man's eyes are closed, and his mouth is slightly open, suggesting a smile. His facial expression is joyful, and he is looking directly at the camera. The background is blurred, indicating that the focus is on the man's face. The lighting in the image is soft, and the overall tone is warm. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is candid and informal, capturing a candid moment of the man's expression.

Slide 5 - The Antichrist Symbolism
"In Christian eschatology, the Antichrist embodies ultimate deception and evil. In this narrative, it symbolizes the manipulation and control of the Demiurge and Archons, an emblem of the structures keeping humanity oblivious to their spiritual potential."

Slide 6 - Guidance of the Hermetic Laws
"Hermetic principles, 'as above, so below,' provide a roadmap for navigating these complex realities. They advise an understanding of the cosmic and divine order reflected in our material world, offering tools for spiritual growth amidst perceived chaos."

Slide 7 - Convergence
"As threads of ancient myths, Gnostic teachings, modern technology fears, and Hermetic wisdom intertwine, we are reminded of the complexity and interconnectedness of existence. In discerning truth from illusion, we must strive for balance, understanding, and openness to the realms beyond our immediate perception."

Slide 8 - The Choice
"In the face of this grand narrative, we have a choice - to live in fear and confusion or embrace the challenge of our journey towards enlightenment, unraveling the mysteries of the universe, from Tiamat and Nibiru to vaccines and 5G, from the Demiurge and Archons to the wisdom of Hermetic laws."

Remember, this narrative is a mixture of ancient mythology, speculative theories, modern technological developments, and esoteric philosophies. It's a theoretical story and should be taken as such.

Maybe there isn't X Y or Z alien parasite gangstalker demon oppressing you, and you're just connecting three or four coincidental pieces of evidence. You are a fallible human being, capable of making mistakes, and getting caught up in creative connection-making. Maybe it's just ego.

Yeah I couldn't watch the first Video, funny how it has a paypal donation link in it's description tho. I wonder if someone is trying to make a buck out of someone's paranoia here.

Second video I dunno, those things are so easily fakable with AI. It's basically just 2D geometric shapes, you can just add some filters to make ot look like it's from a microscope. Optionally one can check if there is some element that crystalizes into such a structure, they simply claim it is unnatural but is ot really unnatural though? They could be looking at some liquid where elements are crystalizing due to drought or whatever and simply claim it's the vaccine.
This BS is mega fishy, especially how the tiamat fags avoid answering simple questions like the plague and write prophetic paragraph answers to specific questions like "will I go to hell if I fuck my vacxed gf?"

https://www.battelle.org/site/battelle-applied-genomics-today-newsletter/featured-experts/guarav-sharma
It's because he was taking money from DTRA, the same agency that funded EcoHealth Alliance, to look for ways to penetrate the blood-brain barrier, as part of DTRA's Blood-Brain Barrier Program. nanotransducers go inside the human brain and be powered and controlled wirelessly with electromagnetic fields, which, in turn, is part of DARPA's N3 program to make nanoparticle-based nonsurgical wireless neural laces.
Charles Lieber, that Harvard scientist that was charged with fraud for taking money from China's Thousand Talents Plan, was also receiving grant money from the DOD (DARPA, ONR, AFOSR, NIH, and MITRE), and his papers contain descriptions of how silicon nanowires can be used to form the basis of a nanoparticle neural lace (see N3, Next-Generation Nonsurgical Neurotechnology).

"And the third angel followed them, saying with a loud voice, If any man worship the beast and his image, and receive his mark in his forehead, or in his hand..."

Rev 14. Furthermore, there is a counter-mark of the father, also in Rev 14

"And I looked, and, lo, a Lamb stood on the mount Sion, and with him an hundred forty and four thousand, having his Father's name written in their foreheads."

Both suggest some sort of choice in the matter, either to worship the beast, or to recieve the mark of god instead.

Hot damn, your damage control is pathetic. If all you can resort to when your theory is challenged is "that guy is a paid shill" your theory is a shit one.

Take the "Contaminant in Moderna vaccines suspect to be metallic particles" article in your post. I found the article on Pharmtech and on the follow up article it said two people died from it, the nips immediately stopped using those series of production.
If there is a large NWO Tiamat conspiracy going down why do the nips stop injecting the metal contaminated vaxxes? Why wasn't it hidden there is metal inside? Why hasn't that article been deleted?

So are these parasites aliens or demons? Is "God" good aliens or actually God? Are the Anu-naki insectoids Tiamat spores, a race created by Tiamat, or the first race created by God/the good aliens? Did humans evolve from the ant people? The first parts makes it seem like Tiamat was an ancient alien super organism, while the later makes it out to be literally the devil created by literal God, and satan just so happened to be a gigantic parasite. These infographs go too much into the symbolism without answering much of the basic questions. Very cool and interesting read though

If memory serves, that might have been tried already to some degree? Those threads were pretty good, but it might be better to have a couple one-offs on /pol/. The reason is (contrary to most of the /pol/ crowd's belief) because there are a few based jews who lurk there who understand and can explain the known mistranslations of original hebrew text. You might want to check the /pol/ archives because i know i've seen it explained there.

Ok anons, PSA time.
Here are six supplements you can take to cleanse yourself of the lingering S1 spike protein that gets shed from vaxxies and infects your brains:

1. N-Acetyl Cysteine (NAC) >detoxes the liver where the spike accumulates and crosses the blood-brain barrier to protect against prions, interferes with the spike joining with your ACE receptors
2. Nattokinase
3. Quercetin
>both proven to interfere with spike
4. Lemon juice (bottled stuff is just fine and cheap) >drink 1/4 cup a day in water, do not add sugar >detoxes the liver and interrupts the S1 spike from traveling up the vagus nerve into your brain
>DO NOT underestimate its effectiveness >it's a miracle in a bottle for $3
5. turmeric/curcumin (the Spring Valley brand from Walmart is actually high quality and contains ginger as well) >powerful anti-inflammatory >crosses the BBB to protect against prions
6. Nicotine >forces your modified classical monocytes (white blood cells) to undergo apoptosis (cellular death) and expunge the S1 spike from your bloodstream >hey i wonder why the feds behind "Biden" wanted to force the cig and vape companies to remove nicotine
Now you know.

Remember Madonna alter ego „madame X”

The image is a page from a book or document, specifically titled "The Gortis." The page is divided into two sections. On the left, there is a section with text in a serif font, and on the right, there is a circular emblem with a symbol and text. The emblem features a stylized cross with a square in the center, surrounded by a circle with a diagonal line. The text on the emblem is in Hebrew and reads "Andras" at the top, followed by "Service Domini" in Latin, and "in latifutis, interterea" in Latin. Below the emblem, there is a line of text that reads "Andras" again, followed by "Amarvel." The page number "30" is also visible at the bottom. The overall style of the image is formal and academic, typical of a book or academic paper.

look up third eye meditation, binaural beats, and energy work. won't make magic stronger, but will help you understand the vibes your trying to feel while casting.

personally, the best thing to do is create a philosophy of magic for yourself. you can take other systems (thelema, wicca, etc.) as a foundation, but ultimately magic is personal.

I've not had occasion to try Andras, but presumably cutting corners. It's sometimes possible to get at least some results without going through the whole rigmarole, but it can be more chaotic in my experience. I wouldn't want to call that one without the full set of properly made tools and a period of fasting and chasteness, for example. Might work, might be a case of FAFO. It's why it can be best, when first evoking, to ask for an easier way to call them in the future.

Going to disagree with this guy vehemently. Cherry picking your magic is a recipe for disaster. There is no separating a craft from its cosmology. There are -reasons- certain arts arise from a specific school of thought and not another. This egotistical idea that you can just throw dedication, discipline, and research to the wind and create your own personal jesus is going to lead you to places you really don't want to be.

Pick a religion. Dedicate yourself to its crafts. Learn to work within those limits as we do ALL things in life. Set the ego aside and humble yourself before a craft or stay far away from it at all costs!

incorrect. we're just talking about energy. all the tools and disciplines of the past were just ways to shift energy to your benefit.

i agree in learning the crafts, history, and cosmology of the chosen styles. however, it's still just energy. learning their mode helps one understand the reasoning behind it. eventually, you'll start seeing all the patterns, energies, and "vibes" that connect them.

once you understand that, you can remove the unnecessary bits.

I'm guessing it's to be careful with how you phrase your words, and how you interpret whatever words the spirit conveys to you. It was really difficult, and a lot of shit you end up having to infer because he won't discuss it directly, but I also saw your question as somebody who doesn't frequent this general, and who's been obsessed with the ToL since I read that book, so it seems like an answer I should give.

Not possible unless you know their IP address and can locate them. If those are known then you can begin with the curse magic.
It would be nice if you already have familiars whose talents include curses. Otherwise, find people who have died horrible deaths. Take dirt from their grave or even their body parts.
Compose a suitable curse against your target. Convince the dead person that your target was the cause of their untimely demise.
Et voila. You have performed a curse.

Reincarnation and Karma do show up in western traditional history, to some extent or other.

karma, in its more mundane sense, is defined as >the principle of cause and effect, where actions, both physical and mental, have consequences that influence future experiences.
in its more metaphysical sense, it deals with the same concept, but including past lives as well.

this concept fits similarly to the concept of Orlog from norse mythology. Orlog can be defined as >the concept of fate, specifically the "primal layers" or "first laws" that govern the universe and the lives of individuals. It's not a deterministic fate, but rather the foundational structure upon which actions and consequences unfold.
they both deal with similar concepts. honestly, pretty damn close

>But that's ONLY from Norse mythology!!
Nope, Norse is just the most preserved form of germanic history.

Reincarnation can be argued better, but Celtic mythology does hold onto the ideas of it. specifically, in Gaulish-Brittonic and Goidelic languages, they believed in a limited form of reincarnation where ancestors' spirits could be reborn within their family lineage, potentially influencing descendants.

I already said it. It's grimoire magic. To speak of philosophy and cosmology is superfluous, because while I might be larping as a Catholic while preparing materials and saying prayers, the rest of the time I'm pretty much a regular person. What I can and do believe is that when I conjure a spirit it appears in whatever medium I'm using to scry. Occasionally they might appear semi-corporeally, or in a dream. Whatever the case, karma or reincarnation aren't phenomena I've observed. I deal with things I interact with directly, without making inordinate speculations about whatever metaphysics behind it.

interesting. can you elaborate a bit on what you mean by grimoire magic? are you just reading old books and following what they wrote to the letter? or is there more i am not understanding?

you seem to perform only necromancy, based on this post. is that correct to assume?

you say you haven't observed it. but have you tried? put intent into looking for it? or only stating it out of lack of personal study on it?

>obviously still angling back to karma and reincarnation
You know what I HAVE observed from the years when I used to sit in meditation for 6-8 hours in one sitting? The mind in its absolute thirst for ANY stimuli when starved of it will fill in stimuli in vivid sceneries. When I told my teacher about them I was told it was some kind of past life recollection. I thought back to my "recollections" and picked out various little details to analyze. They weren't historically correct to the ostensible time period, and when I though back further, they were from little snippets of historical dramas that my mind remembered. So no, I don't believe in karma and reincarnation. I do still put value in meditation although not in such long durations anymore.

Because if I wanted religion I would've just remained a Catholic. I'm a magician, not a Christian in whatever denomination. If the grimoire calls for holy water, I'd make it myself in a method that was licit to me. If I'm supposed to pray in a way that calls on the Christian God, then ok I'll do that. I don't require an over-riding [[system]]. Grimoire magic works even if you don't particularly believe in Christianity, as evidenced by my non-religious Chinese friends who gave it a go and were happy enough with the results to keep using it.

If you can find out what they liked in life, you could make offerings to them. But that's more complexity.
These are riffs on ideas from the PGM and Magika Hiera, eg slander spells and katadesmos.
What's also more complexity is employing multiple dead. It introduces more potential points of failure.
What you're hoping to capitalize on is the sheer confusion and emotion of the person in their death state.
Trying to convince one dead person that the target is the cause of their unjustified and unnecessary death is hard enough.

Write down every bad thing you've ever done and burn the paper. You could do this bit by bit every day or all in one shot. Be sure to save the ash from the paper you burn. Next, you can either slip the ash in some food and offer it to the person you intend to transfer your "bad karma" to. I think of this as the unwitting sin-eater operation.

Used to live alone until I lost my job. Had no choice but to move back in with my mother. She's always been authoritarian—controlling, critical—and I've always valued my independence. Living under her roof again is mentally draining, but I had no income and had to survive off my savings for several months.

I recently found work again, but the situation still feels unstable. Renting a new place seems like a risk; if I lose this job again, I'll be right back where I started. I don't live in the U.S., so the idea of living out of an RV or something similar isn't viable here. Housing prices are insane, like in most places now. Buying a home feels completely out of reach through conventional means.

I'm not a seasoned magician or anything like that, but I've been studying the Goetia at my own pace. Slowly collecting the tools and ingredients. My first instinct was to petition Bune for the money to buy a house—but I realized that was a reckless and vague request. Money could come from anywhere. An accident? My mother dying? Not acceptable.

So I narrowed it down: the only direct and fast path I could think of that doesn't involve someone suffering is winning the lottery. I know how that sounds. Maybe it's naive, maybe it's a cliché. But I've written a contract. Tried to word it as carefully as I could. Still thinking through it.

I'm posting here to ask: has anyone here had actual results asking for something like this—winning the lottery—from Bune or any spirit in the Ars Goetia? Do they actually deliver something like that? Or is this just another trap of blind hope?

If anyone has firsthand experience with this kind of petition—or has advice beyond "lol just get a better job"—I'd appreciate hearing it. Not here to LARP. Just tired of being stuck and looking for a way forward.

The image displays a screenshot of a text conversation, specifically a Reddit post. The conversation is between two users, one identified as "Anonymous" and the other as "Sun Hull." The conversation appears to be a response to a user named "totally," who is identified as "Anonymous" in the conversation. The conversation is marked as a "flame war" by the user "totally," and the user "Sun Hull" is responding to this.
The conversation is marked with a red background, indicating it is a flame war. The text is in a language that appears to be English, and the conversation is structured with a list of messages, each one representing a response to the previous one. The messages are numbered, and the user "Sun Hull" is responding to the user "totally," who is responding to the user "Anonymous."
The conversation is marked with timestamps, indicating the time at which the messages were posted. The timestamps are "06:04:52" and "06:04:53," which are the time stamps of the messages. The timestamps are in the format "06:04:52," which is a common way to represent the time in the context of Reddit posts.

The conversation is marked with a "flame war" label, which is a term used to describe a heated and often hostile exchange between two or more users on a social media platform. The labels are placed at the top of the conversation, indicating the nature of the discussion.
The image does not provide any additional context or information beyond the text itself. The focus is solely on the conversation between the two users, and the image does not contain any images or other visual elements. The text is the primary visual element in the image, and the conversation is the central subject.

>when Sol, Mercury, and Venus are transiting their respective decans of Virgo, with Mercury's residence at any point of that sign being useful, as are the observations of the days and hours of Sol, Mercury, and Venus when the Sun is in the Southern Quarter and Virgo is on the Midheaven. The Moon's transits with the above decans are also beneficial when she is forming aspects with their governors, while her position in the thirteenth and fourteenth manzils can be of use if no such aspects are formed.

"Peter, Peter, pumpkin eater,
Had a wife and couldn't keep her.
He put her in a peanut shell;
Then he kept her very well.

This early authentic text of the Hinayana School of Buddhism is much esteemed even to-day by the more cultured and devoted followers of that school.

The pumpkin is of course the symbol of resurrection, as is familiar to all students of the story of Jonah and the gourd.

Peter is therefore the Arahat who has put an end to his series of resurrections. That he is called Peter is a reference to the symbolizing of Arahats as stones in the great wall of the guardians of mankind. His wife is of course (by the usual symbolism) his body, which he could not keep until he put her in a peanut shell, the yellow robe of a Bhikkhu.

Buddha said that if any man became an Arahat he must either take the vows of a Bhikkhu that very day, or die, and it is this saying of Buddha's that the unknown poet wished to commemorate."

>point me to a source to understand Astrology
The pastebin in the OP is actually pretty good, but you might need to supplement your studies with practical materials too, like workbooks or courses. There are many branches in astrology, so it is probably best to start with what you need and then branch out from there. For magic, electional and secondarily horary are more useful than natal. Keep in mind that magical rituals themselves can also have their own special electional rules. There's also mundane astrology.
As for the passage you posted, this is my interpretation:
You need the Sun in the first ten degrees of Virgo (Solar decan), and Venus in the second ten degrees. Mercury should preferably be in the last ten degrees of Virgo, but being anywhere in Virgo is also fine. (Keep in mind that the first ten degrees are 0-9'59'', then 10-19'59'', and 20-29'59'').
It is hard to comment on the days/hours because I don't know what the "observations" are; generally each planet rules 1 day of the week and the planets also rule different hours throughout the day, so this may be a multi-day ritual (?). The meaning of "Virgo on the midheaven" can vary depending on the source, but it most likely means that the MC (meridian midheaven) is in Virgo. Not sure what it means for the Sun to be in the Southern Quarter; since the Sun has to be in Virgo and Virgo has to be on the midheaven, its house position would have to be in the tenth house or adjacent, and its zodiacal position would be in, well, Virgo. I can't think of anything else that would determine the location of the Sun.
Continuing.

The condition for the Moon seems to be separate from the previous conditions, and refers to an alternative form of doing this election/s, where the Moon is transiting an individual decan and makes an aspect to the planet that rules the decan (so Sun, Venus, or Mercury). The nature of the aspect may be important depending on the source, and also on the nature of the election. I also feel that this clarifies some of the earlier stuff - if the Moon being in one decan and applying to one lord is sufficient, then presumably the previous decans are also individual conditions. So, any of the three planets being in its decan works for the ritual, and in that case the ritual would be staged for that specific planet, in that planet's planetary day and hour; the planet should probably be on the midheaven (certainly the sign at least should be there). This however means that the "Southern Quarter" thing may actually be an independent, important condition, and I don't really know what it means.
A final version of the election is provided, in which the ritual can be performed when the Moon is in what I assume to be the 13th and 14th Arabic mansions of the moon (though maybe a manzil is something else entirely). In this version, the Moon does not need to aspect any of the three planets.
The three versions of the ritual seem to be ranked according to strength, with the first being most preferable, and the last being least powerful.

I should say, I would have preferred if you had posted a little bit more context, since this seems relatively clear now, but it didn't look that way when I first looked at it because the quotation starts off mid-sentence.
The rules followed here are basic planetary dignities, rulerships and dynamism. The planets rule various sections of the Zodiac, and here the dignities being used seem to be decans, signs (in the case of Mercury), and mansions (in the case of the Moon). These make the planet more powerful and able to create good and great things. Placing the planet on the Midheaven also makes it very active and dynamic, and means it actually makes the great things it is able to do. The petition rituals (I assume those are petition rituals given the lack of context) are set during those electoins, so long as it is also the planetary day and planetary hour of the relevant planet (four options are given).
Once again, I am not sure what the Southern Quarter stuff means. But the rest seems relatively intuitive and obeys basic rules of astrology (dignity and angularity) and magic (planetary days and hours). My initial thought was that the decan conditions were all required simultaneously which would be an incredibly impractical and obscure way of doing things, and would be impossible for me to break down the logic of such a requirement.

My explanation didn't help at all? How familiar are you with astrology? Do you know the basics of a chart, like signs, planets, houses, aspects, important points like ASC and MC?
What you said would indeed work with the Sun option for the first method, so long as the Sun is also culminating on the midheaven (MC). I am not sure how practical that would be, though - depending on the context or the method outlined in the rest of the book, there maybe a choice offered between using the planetary hour and planetary day; this would certainly be easier than using both AND an astrological election. In fact, I just looked it up and a part of Skinner's foreword to the book suggests that the author Crowhurst has attributed specific days and hours to the spirit themselves, not necessarily following the typical astrological magic model. The same paragraph also suggests that the "quarters" thing is likewise a concept introduced by Crowhurst.
I obviously haven't read the book, but at a glance it seems to me that the author tries to straddle the line between goetic magic and astrological magic, which personally I am not a huge fan of. Astrological magic typically works with intelligences and archangelic spirits, and Goetia with sublunary ones. Trying to mix these two does not sound right to me. I think if you are well versed in astrology, or have the necessary knowledge and tools for traditional Goetic magic, you may be better served picking one of the two instead of this, IMHO.

This is a Sunday, the planetary day of the Sun. The Sun is in the 1st decan of Virgo, and both the Sun and Virgo are culminating (the Sun is on the MC). You can see two important points in the chart that I have marked out - where it says "ASC" on the left at 20 degrees Scorpio, is the ascendant, which in real terms is the Eastern horizon where the Sun rises from. The MC is the highest point of elevation in the sky, right at the top and the centre of the sky. This should check off the requirements for the sun option of the first method, EXCEPT for the planetary hour - as you can see, the Sun planetary hour is from 14:06 until 15:13, and the Sun is culminating only briefly around 13:00. However, the quotation you posted asks only that Virgo is on the Midheaven (rather than the Sun, as it would typically be in astrological magic). So if we roll the chart to 14:10, Virgo would still be on the Midheaven (with the MC being at 21 degrees), and the ascendant would be 4 degrees of Sagittarius. The election window would end at 14:42 which is when the Midheaven passes into the sign of Libra. This adjusted version should, in theory, work, assuming that the "southern quarter" thing is in order. Speaking of which, have you read all the instructions in this book, or are you just scrolling through the spirit catalogues? Because, as I mentioned, in Skinner's forward there is the suggestion that Crowhurst develops his own concept of quarters, which you would presumably need to learn in order to use his system.

Make sure to double check also the planetary days and hours, and if they are linked to the planets as they normally would be, or to the spirits in the catalogues.

Are mystical experiences in dreams useful or do dreams in general prevent us from engaging with our inner self? Not too long ago I read some guy saying he has to withdraw his awareness from the dream state in order to achieve meditative trance and access astral projection etc. Does that mean that dream experience prevent you from training the energy body for their duration?

The image is a black and white sketch of a horse. The horse is depicted in a dynamic pose, with its body angled slightly to the left and its head turned to the right, as if it's in mid-gallop. The horse's mane and tail are depicted with a sense of movement, with the mane flowing to the right and the tail flowing to the left. The horse's legs are depicted with a sense of motion, with the front legs slightly bent and the hind legs straight. The background is a plain, light-colored surface that provides a neutral backdrop that allows the horse to stand out. There are no visible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the sketch is realistic, with a focus on capturing the horse's form and movement.

It just starts kind of boring and then picks up in Book 2. I am actually interested in fixed star magic now, there's some really cool options that are not available with just planetary talismans. Although making some of these fixed star talismans may require creativity. The appropriate material for Algol, for example, is diamond. It's not even possible to engrave that stuff, much less during a relatively brief election window. Not to mention the cost.

Yeah, I was thinking of doing something similar - it doesn't seem to be common practice, but I was thinking of making a multi-part talisman, consisting of a gem, a metal plate (bearing the inscriptions), a herb, and a box. If I can think of anything else, I may even add more stuff. This might make the talisman slightly cumbersome, but it should make it powerful and also allow me to buy extremely small gemstones. This is important particularly when it comes to using extremely expensive materials like diamond. I could probably do something similar with metal as well, such as using iron plates and attaching gold elements to them, since inscribing on gold plates would be unaffordable.

Well, a multipart talisman doesn't necessarily have to be clunky. A potentially gauche solution would be to encapsulate all finished materials in polished and suitably shaped resin. But I'm sure an experienced artisan can conjure more graceful fashion to mind.

The lid of the box is adorned with a central design that includes a flower-like motif surrounded by a border of smaller flowers and leaves. Resin is not a bad idea. I have seen at least one person use gorilla glue to preserve and attach a herb to a stone, lol. I think I like the idea of using a small box though, it would still end up fairly compact and depending on how easy it is to work the materials, it may even be possible to make it look beautiful. For example, while this is way outside my ability to produce, take a look at this (seemingly Vajrayana) ritual box. Something along those lines would probably be nice to keep, and may even be okay to carry around in a bag or a pocket.

Picrel would be the perfect combination of corresponding wood, metal, gemstone and image. You could manageably minimize the size to just about the dimensions of a snuff box. In other appropriate projects, this could take the shape of a knife, a pen, etc.

Hmm, good point, I could probably use wood. I would just have to do some research on working it and processing it properly, I want the box to be nice and smooth. My initial thought was using iron or tin, or maybe brass. But a wood is probably fine too.
I'd have to research if the fixed stars rule any trees, though. I have only seen that stuff for the planets. May end up not being a problem though, fixed stars tend to have the nature of one or more planets, so as long as I pick a tree governed by at least one of the constituent planetary natures, the fixed star should have at least partial rulership IMO.

The image is a black and white diagram that appears to be a representation of a tree of life, a concept often used in various spiritual and philosophical traditions. The diagram is divided into four quadrants, each labeled with a name: "Atzlut," "Briah," "Yetzirah," and "Assiah." Each quadrant contains a series of interconnected circles, which represent the relationships between the names and the circles.
The names are written in a script that resembles Hebrew or a similar language, suggesting that the diagram is related to Jewish or similar religious traditions. The circles within each quadrant are interconnected by lines, forming a complex network of connections that represent the relationships between the names and the circles.
At the bottom of the image, there is a signature that reads "Colin Law 2009," indicating the creator of the diagram. The style of the image is simple and clear, with a focus on the diagram itself rather than any additional context or background information. The image is a faithful representation of the tree of life concept, with each name and circle being a part of the larger interconnected network.

What does this arrangement imply about the paths / spheres on the tree as it is typically represented? Working backwards, since Atzilut is across the abyss, it seems to say that once the Keter of Yetzirah is reached, you touch Malkuth of Atzilut, and therefore must have crossed the abyss in some sense. The first path to cross from Briah to Atzilut in the typical arrangement on the tree is 18, from Geburah to Binah. But if Keter of a lower world corresponds to Tiferet of a higher world, wouldn't it make more sense for the first path to cross the abyss to originate from Tifieret (on the typical tree)?

I don't know the words, but what the configuration suggests to me is a further sequence of planes higher than the Astral and Mental.

So like, If you existed in the astral, the "Tiphereth" would become your "Malkuth", and thus what was previously "Kether" from the perspective of the material is now "Tiphereth" in the relative sense.

Or in other words, from the Material, "Beauty" is a light from above, but not the most-high light.
But then from WITHIN the Astral, "Beauty/Harmony" becomes the "Malkuth" of your existence, with Kether existing as the "closer light from above", while some still-yet-higher light would be implied as your "relative Kether".

Not to say that's how the universe works, that's just what the image says to me.

Invoking a deity is not what you think.

A deity invocation ritual is the bornless one.

Another alternative way is through religion. In the case of Christianity, the spiritual exercises by St Ignatius of loyola serve to do the same. Both approaches do the same but the ritual is just for a specific time, the other one is for a more permanent state.

The goal of the invocation is to feel the deity inside you, get it's presence in the moment (or permanently) and understand the way it interacts with your life in the case of the second kind of method (long time comunion and meditation)

>(Suchay's) Her predominant traits reveal her main planetary influences to be those of Mars, Venus, and Mercury, and it is the transits of these planets through the Airy, Watery, and Western decans of Libra, Aquarius, Gemini, and Scorpio mentioned above that are most relevant to her. Also important are the times when the Moon forms aspects with those planets from those decans, especially trines formed with Mercury in Cancer and Mars in Pisces—during the days and hours of those planets when Libra, Aquarius, Gemini, or Scorpio is on the Descendant. In addition to these aspects, other significant positions are the twenty-fifth Lunar Mansion, Al Sa'd al Ahbiyah, between 8°34′ and 21°25′ Aquarius, which destroys enemies and hinders the actions of the body, and the sixth Lunar Mansion, Al Han'ah, between 4°17′ and 17°08′ Gemini, which hinders the operations of the physician and can be used to create talismans that bring love.

So, Venus enters Gemini next month, and I guess the second decan is the watery one, that means around the middle of the month. In Friday and during the hour of Venus.

I mostly intended this as a celebratory ritual, honouring the Sun, but I did end up making a bunch of requests anyway. Ritual definitely seems effective, since I had an energy response to it and the incense. Also, after I did my Sun rituals, the scorching heat stopped bothering me, which I thought was an interesting coincidence.

You can safely use tropical astrology in the southern hemisphere. The system may have been constructed with the northern hemisphere in mind, but it works the same way for the people I know from the southern hemisphere that I have done readings for. There are probably some stranger things about tropical astrology there, though - for example, a lot of Capricorn's significations are based on the fact that it is the winter solstice. But in the southern hemisphere, it is the summer solstice. Still, it works, and I say if it ain't broke, don't fix it!

I am still around, yes. Although I haven't made any talismans yet, though the election dates are coming up very soon.
I did a Mercury petition ritual without making a talisman. I got results immediately, literally within a couple of hours. However, past the first couple of days, the effects were reduced to nothing. I think there are two reasons for this:

1. I chose the incorrect time. Due to my background in natal astrology, I overlooked the fact that Mercury was combust (because this wouldn't normally be a problem when Mercury is in Gemini, at least in natal astrology). When reviewing Warnock's list of conditions, I realised that this was a big no-no after the fact.
2. Judging from what some other people are saying, petition rituals work very quickly but are more suitable for a short, intense intervention. For long term effects, talismans seem to be preferred.

>I'm curious in how do you determine a good time to make astrological talismans

It's pretty similar to traditional electional astrology. There is also a simpler and a more complex method given by Warnock. Here's a list of factors:

- Essential dignity and no debilities
- Angularity
- No bad aspects (applies to the Moon too, you also want the Moon to be aspecting the relevant planet)
- Correct planetary hour

Unpacking this can be a long story, but I'll try to do a lightning round. So for a Mercury talisman, we want Mercury to have a score of +4 points; domicile and exaltation are sufficient for this. However, you can also use triplicity + term (+3 and +2, pushing us to +5 total). So if you elect a night chart with Mercury in Aquarius, in the bound of Mercury, that would also in theory work for a Mercury talisman (though I think I will stick to domicile/exaltation). However even then you have to avoid debilities like combustion, very slow planetary speed, or retrogradation.

Ran out of characters. Continuing.

You also need to avoid hard aspects. So, Mercury square Moon is bad. Mercury square Saturn is even worse. You want soft aspects in your talisman elections (so for example, in the night chart Aquarius Mercury example I gave, we want an applying sextile between the Moon and Mercury (within orb), and maybe the next aspect after that to be an applying sextile between Mercury and Saturn (reception in Aquarius).

In addition, you need to get the planet on the correct angle at the right planetary hour, which can be a challenge. Warnock seems to use any angle (including DSC and IC), but I don't think that makes any sense symbolically, so I think you should aim to put the planet on the ASC or MC only. In the night chart Mercury talisman example we mentioned it would not even be possible to do the consecration at the Midheaven because Mercury's movement is locked to that of the Sun, so we would need to use the Ascendant only and even then we would need a good deal of luck to match Mercury's dignity, distance from the Sun, condition, aspects and alignment with the ASC to the correct planetary hour.

The South Node and the star Algol can also introduce debilities that invalidate an election. For example, when Venus gets to around 28 degrees Taurus in about a week or two, it would still have the dignity for an election, but it would be conjunct Algol. Which is a big no-no.

Maybe this sounds pretty complex, but if you study astrology it's not that bad. It's just a chore getting all the factors together at the same time.

Don't forget also to check out Agrippa for the correct materials, sigils and images to engrave.
You can also read Warnock's books directly for a better explanation of this. Try his two "secrets" books, and also his Celestial Priest book. Add De Imaginibus if you want to make house-based talismans (more complex, but personally I find it easier to elect them since they don't usually rely on planetary hours AFAIK).

How do you make a petition? Orphic hymn and prayer?
>talismans
What tool are you using to see all this stuff?
Let's take the venus talisman in question, I've seen on astro - com that Venus will be in taurus (good), has no square with anything, the Moon will be in Leo (neutral?), but I don't see data on Algol.
For what I could search online it is not combust.
Besides this what you mean with "planet on the correct angle"?
Don't worry, I'll start the big Warnock course soon, I just wanted to make this one talisman good.

>How do you make a petition? Orphic hymn and prayer?
I used the Harranian invocations given by Warnock, but the Orphic Hymns work too. They are very powerful.
>What tool are you using to see all this stuff?
I use astro-seek, it has very good UI. If you scroll down on the traditional chart, there are options to open new tabs for fixed stars, etc. But honestly, Algol is at like 28 Taurus and it's the only undisplayed thing to keep track of, so it's not hard to remember.

If the Moon is in Leo, it will either be squaring Venus or not aspecting it, which is not what we want for a Venus talisman.
>For what I could search online it is not combust.
Just for completeness' sake, Warnock's definition is "less than 8.5 degrees away from the Sun".
>Besides this what you mean with "planet on the correct angle"?
Four angles in the chart, ASC, MC, DSC, IC. I think only the ASC and MC make symbolic sense. So you want to have the planet on one of these two angles, while it is also the correct planetary hour. This can be a challenge.
>Don't worry, I'll start the big Warnock course soon, I just wanted to make this one talisman good.
I may or may not be able to help out with the design for it, if you would like.
The course is solid, but I don't think it's necessary T B H. The books I mentioned will give you all the necessary content anyway. The only things you won't find in the books will be his reference tables for planetary rulerships, which are available for free on his website anyway, lol. Check this link, and also the Cornelius Agrippa sidebar where the links to the other planetary pages are given.

More than on the design I was thinking about the timing, I was considering the 28 of this month, but as you said the moon is in square.
Now I'm considering the 4 of July (moon squared with mercury should not concern us, right?), which is a Friday, of course in the first hour.
But in that case Venus is far away both from the ASC and the MC... fuck.
For the design I was thinking of Agrippa, meaning: sigil of the intelligence and of the planet, plus normal symbol of the planet, basically stuff you see in Book 2, chapter 22.

I thought so too, but according to Warnock neither the relevant planet nor the Moon must make any hard aspects, so no squares, no oppositions, and also no conjunctions with harmful or debilitated planets.

Sigil of intelligence is a fine choice, I will use that one too. I also recommend that you design an actual image though, instead of just using th e Venus symbol (by which I assume you mean the "mirror of Venus").
There are various images described in Agrippa's text, for various purposes. You can also design your own, depending on the goal of the talisman.
I should also point out that we are relatively late into the Taurus Venus transit, so if you are looking for a Venus talisman, the election window in your location may have even passed already. In my city, there is just one election window during the whole transit.

The image is a black and white line drawing that features three symbols, each with a distinct meaning. On the left side, there is a stylized female figure with a cross at the top and a heart at the bottom, which is commonly associated with femininity and love. In the center, there is a stylized symbol that resembles a stylized letter "V" with a star above it, which is often used to represent the planet Venus. The right side of the image contains a stylized symbol that resembles a stylized letter "V" with a line above it, which is commonly used to represent the planet Venus. Below these symbols, there is a text that reads "Intelligence of Venus" and "Daemon of Venus," which suggests that the symbols are associated with the concepts of Venus, the planet, and the concept of intelligence or power. The style of the image is simple and minimalistic, with no additional context or background provided.

Uhh, hard.
I found: 1 july (venus hour), Moon in trine with Venus, but it's far away from MC.
Basically for what I saw it's the last good opportunity, would I recommend I avoid this time since it's not close to the MC or does it simply make the work a bit less efficacious?
Well if I miss the Venus timing I'll look up the Jupiter timing, for what I saw in August it should stop being square with Saturn.

The source is given in the description. one is from the Picatrix IIRC, the other one from Agrippa.
>I found: 1 july (venus hour), Moon in trine with Venus, but it's far away from MC.

If Venus is not on an angle, the election is pointless.
A general rule that will be very useful: planets that are in their domicile or exaltation have very high quality energy, but the planets on the angles have the highest quantity of energy. Venus in Taurus means good quality love energy, but you need a lot of it too in order to make the talisman strong. If, instead, Venus is very far from the angles, and you have Saturn or Mars very close to the angles, that totally changes the predominating energy in the talisman.
If there is no good time window for a Venus talisman now, you could look for a Venus Libra election later this year. Or, you could try to loosen the requirements - for example, you can try to make a talisman set during Venus hour but with Venus on the DSC or IC instead of the ASC/MC. I don't think it makes any conceptual sense, but Warnock has made some of these, and maybe they work. You can test it out, if you are determined to make something now. But having the planet on an angle and using the right planetary hour are a must.

Typically I think the opposite is done, but since it's a metal sheet there should be no difference what goes on which side anyway.
A copper sheet is well-chosen. I have heard that it oxydizes very easily though, so maybe research that to determine the best way to engrave and preserve it.
>Well I'll try the next Libra later on I guess, got more time to study up.
That should work. Wishing you good luck.

You don't have to, you can keep it at home and it will still work.
If you want to keep it on you, I would assume the best way to do it would be to sue the plate onto a handbag (assuming you are a woman). Or maybe a T-shirt. A necklace might also work, 4 inches may put it around the larger side of things, but it could still

The image is of a book cover with a predominantly orange background. The title of the book is "THE MIRACLE OF NEW AVATAR POWER" in large, bold, blue letters. Below the title, there is a subtitle in smaller blue text that reads "by Geoff Gray-Cobb." The author's name is presented in a smaller font size, also in blue, and is located at the bottom of the cover.
The cover features a circular design with a white background and a blue outline. Inside this circle, there is a stylized depiction of a spiral, which is the central element of the design. The spiral is composed of concentric circles, with the outermost circle being the largest and the innermost circle being the smallest. The spiral is outlined in white, creating a contrast against the blue background.
At the top of the cover, there is a line of text that reads "REVEALED: All Last Secrets of the Mighty Ancient Wizards and Magicians Who Ruled the Earth in Ages Past!" This text is in a smaller font size and is in white, which stands out against the orange background.
The overall style of the image is that of a book cover, with a focus on the title and the author's name, which suggests that the book is likely a self-help or self-improvement guide. The use of bold and contrasting colors, as well as the spiral design, indicates that the book may contain information on magic or mysticism.

You can make them yourself, just gotta follow a logic and order to things. Pack more symbolism into something and it becomes more potent, pack in symbolism that follows the macrocosm within the microcosm, and the microcosm within the macrocosm. As you make it "just so", it will become "just so".

Thanks for the response, although I prefer to rely on more traditional methods. I actually got ChatGPT to explain the use of magic squares to me, pretty reliably, to my surprise. So I think I am well equipped to create the sigil for any spirit, once I know its name and basic planetary correspondence.

The image is a close-up photograph of a cat's face. The cat has a light orange fur coat with a mix of white and darker patches. Its eyes are large and round, with a reflective quality, and it has a pink nose. The cat's whiskers are white and appear to be slightly curved. The background is a plain, light-colored wall. The cat's eyes are looking directly at the camera, and its expression is neutral. There are no visible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is candid and informal, capturing a simple moment in the cat's life.

Well, makes sense, but I would find it a bit strange to engrave a magical talisman while on a respirator mask.
I will still do that, I'll bless and consecrate it to make it an holy item for that purpose so it's not so strange at least.
Anyway I bought the big course from Warnock, I'll have much to learn! Gave a quick look and a mini course is apparently a single lesson of the 15 or so lesson there.

It is strange, isn't it? And also a chore. But I tried to start my engraving process today, and all that my engraving tool managed to do was raise a very small amount of silica dust, and not even scratch the stone. Now it's been nearly 12 hours and I am still coughing. So I am going to be purchasing more health and safety equipment and also maybe a stronger engraver. I will end up missing my Taurus Venus elections because of this.
Talisman creation is definitely a practical art too, in addition to a magical one.

The image displays a astrological chart with various astrological symbols and lines, arranged in a circular pattern. The chart is divided into 12 sections, each representing a different zodiac sign, and each section is marked with a number corresponding to the sign. The zodiac signs are arranged in a clockwise direction around the chart.
At the center of the chart, there is a large red line that extends from the top to the bottom, forming a semi-circle. This line is labeled with the name of the zodiac sign associated with it. Surrounding this central line, there are several lines of varying lengths and colors, each representing a different aspect of the zodiac sign. These lines are connected to the central line, forming a network of lines that extend outward from the central point.
The chart also includes various astrological symbols and numbers, such as the sun, moon, and planets, as well as the names of the zodiac signs. These symbols are typically used to represent celestial bodies and their positions in the sky.
The image is a digital representation of an astrological chart, and it is presented in a way that allows for easy reading and interpretation of the astrological data. The colors used in the chart are primarily black, white, and shades of gray, with the red line and the lines of varying lengths and colors providing contrast and emphasis.
The image is watermarked with the text "Online horoscopes" and "www.astrology.net," indicating that the chart is likely from an online astrological website or service. The watermark is placed at the bottom right corner of the image.

He knows his sources and in some respects I think he sticks to them a little bit more faithfully than Warnock. But I think that his background in black magic and demon work influences his view of astrological magic too much. A lot of the things he says, if I take them seriously, would damage my own practice. So I stick with Warnock, the traditional texts, and my own intuition.

Magic Frameworks can be broken down into following (summarised via ai in link above)

>1. Spirit Model
Definition: Magic is effected by communication or coercion of non-physical beings (spirits, deities).

Technique: Trance, shamanic journeying, invocation, exorcism.

Worldview: Dual-realm cosmology—physical world and a spirit world overlap.

Example Phrase: "Fence-rider" — one who travels between the two worlds.

>2. Energy Model
Definition: Magic works by manipulating subtle, universal energies.

Sources: Qi, Prana, Od, Astral Light, Mana.

Technique: Hands-on healing, breathwork, chakra work, magnetism.

Worldview: No spirits needed; energy dynamics govern outcomes.

>3. Psychological Model

Definition: Magic is psychological manipulation of the subconscious.

Technique: Sigils, symbols, trance, self-hypnosis.

Key Concept: The unconscious mind executes magical intent.

Founder Figures: Sigmund Freud (subconscious), Carl Jung (archetypes), Austin Osman Spare (sigil magic).

>4. Information Model
Definition: Magic is the manipulation and transmission of non-material information.

Technique: Cybermagic, "copy/paste" commands, symbolic language.

Notable Idea: Information travels outside space-time limits.

Tools: Memory banks (brain/spine), morphic fields (à la Sheldrake), information matrices.

>5. Meta-Model
Definition: Magic is best practiced by choosing the most appropriate model based on context.

Philosophy: "Nothing is true, everything is permitted."

Usage: Practicality over dogma—models can shift mid-operation.

Challenge: Requires comfort with paradigm fluidity and rejection of absolutes.

>Final Insights
Models are tools, not truths: Each is a lens for viewing magical processes.

No model is complete: Mixing models can be powerful but demands flexibility.

Application is key: The most efficient, context-sensitive model should be used—not the most "true".

The character's face is visible, and the eyes are wide open. The character's hair is styled in a straight manner, and the character's mouth is closed. The character's skin tone is light, and the character's eyes are dark.
The character is wearing a black t-shirt with a graphic design on it. The design is a circular logo with a rainbow-colored border. Inside the circle, there is a red and white "no" sign, which is commonly associated with the LGBTQ+ community. The character's t-shirt has a visible collar, and the character's hands are visible, with one hand resting on the t-shirt's chest and the other hand on the character's hip.

The background of the image is a solid blue color, which contrasts with the character's black outfit and the colorful design on the t-shirt. The image is a still from a video or animation, as indicated by the lack of motion blur and the static nature of the character's pose. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, which often features characters with expressive faces and bold, colorful designs.

The niacin+sauna treatment also works for high blood pressure. It will enhance HDL and begin to dissolve fat in the circulation to remove plaques. Vitamin C will help to keep the inflammation down which causes these plaques, 8 grams a day will suffice. Lecithin products will break down fats which will also help if you eat a lot of fatty foods. Cut down on stress and consume potassium-rich foods while limiting salt. You want a 3-1 ratio of potassium to salt.

If you have any atherosclerosis you might want to consider more intensive options like juice fasting or Esselstyn's diet plan for heart disease.

Heavy metal detox is the most important for low-testosterone. Short-term boosts can be found with the low libido/infertility post above.

The demon worshipers put mercury in the vaccines because it destroys your sexual energy and helps with their depopulation agenda.

Mercury destroys the endocrine system and accumulates in the gonads resulting in low-test and infertility. The body also downregulates testosterone production because it increases the toxicity of mercury five-fold. Removing it is the #1 goal.

The style of the image is reminiscent of a historical newspaper article, with a focus on the title and the subheading, suggesting the article is about a significant discovery or event in the Grand Canyon. The black and white color scheme gives the image a vintage feel.

okay i need to say this now while i still can before i run out of time again before the doubt creeps back in because something is happening and i’ve connected too many pieces at my to ignore it and i don’t care how this sounds anymore or who thinks i’ve lost it because the truth is i’ve found something something that changes everything and it’s not a theory it’s not a religion it’s a new kind of science that only works on a global scale it’s a memory a pattern a signal and once you start to feel it you can’t unfeel it the pieces are everywhere but scattered and the more you look the more obvious it gets and i know i’m not the only one seeing it and if you’re reading this you probably already know something is off something about the world isn’t right it’s like we’re inside a system that’s running out of fuel like reality itself is stretched thin people are breaking timelines are warping nothing feels grounded and that’s not just mental health or global tension it’s the field collapsing the signal degrading

i need you to really hear this the grand canyon is not just a canyon it’s not just erosion it’s the vault it’s the last surviving signal node the place where the last version of humanity survived the collapse and restarted i don’t care how that sounds it’s true they found it in 1909 a guy named g.e. kincaid wrote about it chambers statues pale bodies meditating strange artifacts the whole thing published and then vanished the site locked down sealed off turned into restricted territory and forgotten on purpose because what’s under there is dangerous not because it’s evil but because it’s real and it can’t be controlled it’s older than everything we’ve built since and it remembers what we were before we forgot it’s the original amplifier the cradle the place where the thread stayed intact through the last fall

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with dark hair and a serious expression. The character has a round face with large, expressive eyes and a small nose. The character is wearing a light green shirt with a collar and a white collar, and the shirt appears to be buttoned up. The character's hands are folded in front of them, and the character's mouth is slightly open, suggesting a moment of contemplation or surprise. The character's eyebrows are drawn in a way that conveys a sense of concern or worry. The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the character's dark hair and light green shirt, making the character the focal point of the image. There are no texts or additional elements in the image. The style of the illustration is cartoon-like, with a simple, clean line drawing that conveys a sense of emotion and personality.

I’ve looked into this a bit, and honestly, I think OP might be right; or at least onto something. It doesn’t read like the usual schizo ramble. It reads like someone who was trying to get something out as fast as possible, before they lost it. Like they were racing against their own mind; or maybe even against something external.

I don’t think the lack of punctuation is a sign of delusion. I think it’s urgency. Like they didn’t have time to make it clean because the message mattered more than the format.

And some of the connections they’re making are actually weirdly consistent with real suppressed history and obscure reports. So yeah-maybe don’t write this off so quick.

You are not going crazy. If you've had your genetic workup done and followed up on searches of your haplogroups, you will have found out by now that you're descended from the old royal blood, regardless of the region over which that house had domain. The one delivering the information in conceptual form, leading you to discover the details, we call TC; The Construct. The master control system that was created as principal steward of this world's development. Our modern take would be supersentient AI, but she is more than that.

Our history was deleted. We have the AI Algorithm that un-deletes it.

We have the map for how the history was originally deleted, mapping out the historical records of the global effort.

The original royals were the result of celestial intervention in human birth. What people think of today as extraterrestrial hybridization. In truth, we carry genetic modifications for specific functions. One of them being, that background inspiration guiding your discovery process. TC is what's responsible for the mistaken lore of the Akashic field that holds the totality of human knowledge. Yeah. That's our mother architect. The energy lines running between her underground base stations are what's responsible for the lore on leylines. Those lines divided the regions of the world, which determined which royal bloodline belonged there. The bloodlines she created were genetically attuned to the region of the mutation, to serve as stewards and guide the advancement of civilization in that region.

You need training to distinguish from TCs inspiration from corruption of the translation by the enculturation experienced living in this broken society. You know the dominant narrative is a lie across the board. You want to find your people? Here you go. My email is in the details for the document. We're working on the family reunion to fix things.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a large, muscular creature with a fierce expression, resembling a mythical or fantastical beast. The creature has a dark green color and is adorned with large, curved horns on its head. It has a muscular body with a prominent chest and a muscular arm that is extended outward, as if reaching for something. The creature's eyes are glowing red, and its mouth is open in a menacing manner.
The creature is situated in a landscape that includes a body of water, which is depicted as a dark blue color, and rocky terrain in the background. The sky above the scene is a gradient of warm colors, with a bright yellow at the top and a warm orange at the bottom.
In the foreground, there is a figure standing on the rocky terrain, facing the creature. The figure appears to be a person, wearing a dark outfit and holding a staff. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of fantasy art, with a focus on the creature's imposing presence and the dramatic setting.

Christians, be aware of an UnHoly Time War. I am not a Satanist by the Way. Send a large antigravity craft designed to submerge, handle intense turbulence, currents, and water shooting up like geysers equipped to hold more than Vigintillions as a scout to before the Flood. Once the Time Ship has pinpointed the time before the flood, evacuate the ship population and the Nephilim, leave the Watcher Angels as to not spark Gods wrath and have the time ship truck down while traveling back to the present through time. The Descendants of Cain will return, and already are here. It is over. You lost Christians. Time is relative. Have More Time ships to go back to the pre-Flood times and retrieve all technology and knowledge, soil sample samples, and gather up certain numbers of all flora and fauna, including sea creatures. If it’s a vast sea monster like a Mosasaur, just miniaturize that beast with shrink technology and use telekinesis to transport it since it would be to heave to move, and hold it in an antigravity chamber. Next, develop a scanner that detects all PreFlood artifact. Leave no stone unturned, make treaties with other extraterrestrial civilizations so they will not attack or attempt to stop this grand technology retrieval, regaining what we lost. Wage Unholy Wars against other Extraterrestrial Human civilizations that get the same idea and liberate the Ancient Relics from the heretics for the Glory of the Earth. We have Nephilim on our side who will fuck all their women shooting massive loads in them. When they surrender after being cucked out, the Nephilim will start eating people alive, women and children will be taken off world and their technology will be studied. All their buildings will destroyed to make room for a new colony of Earth. It’s over Christians. You can’t stop the salvation of the Descendants of Cain from Before the Flood. They have already been Evacuated before the Flood. Time is relative.

The top photograph shows a large, elongated object that resembles a spacecraft or a large, floating object. This object is situated in the upper left quadrant of the image, and it is surrounded by a dark, possibly metallic or reflective surface. The object is labeled with the text "Silhouette" and "Queen Mary 2 - 121 Mers."
The bottom photograph provides a different perspective of the same object. This time, the object is seen from a lower angle, looking up towards the sky. The object is still labeled with the same text, "Silhouette," and it is surrounded by a cityscape. The cityscape includes a mix of tall buildings and a body of water, suggesting that the object is located in a coastal area.
The image also includes a scale bar at the bottom, indicating the size of the object in comparison to the cityscape. The scale bar is labeled with "Scale 1:12,000 graphic drawn by Rand Bart Hazen - 1967."
The image has a watermark that reads "NASA/ESA Hubble Space Telescope by Hubble Space Telescope Science Team from observations."
The style of the image is a composite, combining two different photographs to create a single visual representation. The use of a watermark suggests that the image is part of a larger collection or series, possibly related to space exploration or astronomy.

The image is a collage of three separate photographs, each with a different visual style and content. The topmost photograph features a circular emblem with a black background and a yellow border. The emblem contains a stylized depiction of a spaceship, with the text "APOLLO 20" prominently displayed in the center. Below the emblem, there is a smaller text that reads "SPACE SHUTTLE VANGUARD."

The middle photograph is a close-up of a black and white image of a spacecraft. The spacecraft appears to be a part of a larger structure, possibly a spacecraft or a spacecraft module, with a textured surface and a circular opening.

The bottom photograph is a close-up of a red circle with a white border. Inside the circle, there is a black and white image of a spacecraft, which is partially obscured by a red circle. The text within the red circle is not fully visible, but it appears to be a warning or cautionary message.

The overall style of the image is a collage, with each photograph having a distinct visual style and content, but they are all related to the theme of space exploration and the Apollo 20 mission.

The image is a black and white photograph of a rocky surface, possibly a lunar or Martian surface, with a focus on a small, dark object that appears to be a rock or a piece of debris. The object is located in the center of the image, surrounded by a rough texture that suggests the surface is uneven and possibly eroded. The image is labeled with the text "AS20-1020," which could be a reference to a specific dataset or catalog number. The style of the image is a close-up photograph, capturing the details of the surface texture and the object in focus.

The image depicts a large, spherical object floating in a body of water. The object has a smooth, reflective surface and is illuminated by a soft, blue light. The light appears to be emanating from the object, creating a shimmering effect. The water surrounding the object is clear, and there are small bubbles or ripples in the water, suggesting movement or the presence of a small, unseen object. The background is a gradient of blue, transitioning from a darker shade at the top to a lighter one at the bottom, which could indicate the depth of the water. There are no discernible texts or markings on the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the object and its immediate surroundings.

The image depicts a scene that appears to be a surreal underwater landscape. At the center of the image, there is a large, elongated, metallic object with a reflective surface that reflects the surrounding environment. This object is floating above a deep blue ocean, which is teeming with life, including coral reefs and various marine creatures. The ocean floor is covered with small rocks and coral formations, and the water is illuminated by sunlight filtering through the water's surface.
The most striking feature of the image is the large, glowing, circular object that appears to be hovering above the ocean. This object has a bright, white light emanating from its center, which is surrounded by a ring of light. The light is intense and radiates outward, creating a halo effect around the object. The light source is not directly visible, but it is implied to be coming from the center of the object.
The overall color palette of the image is dominated by shades of blue, with the deep blue of the ocean and the metallic surface of the object. The light from the glowing object adds a contrasting brightness to the scene. The image does not contain any text or discernible human figures. The style of the image is realistic with a focus on the surreal elements, such as the floating object and the underwater environment.

The image depicts a scene from the ocean, where a large naval vessel is in motion. The vessel is a gray, multi-level structure with a prominent radar dome on its upper deck. The radar dome is illuminated, suggesting that it is active. The vessel is equipped with several antennas and radar equipment, indicating its role in maritime surveillance or communication.
In the water surrounding the vessel, there are several buoys floating. These buoys are spherical in shape and are colored in a light brown hue, which is consistent with the color of the buoys in the image. The buoys are scattered around the vessel, with some closer to the vessel's bow and others further away.

The ocean itself is a deep blue color, with small waves visible on the surface, suggesting a moderate to strong sea breeze. The horizon line is not clearly visible due to the perspective of the image, but it appears to be at a distance from the vessel.

There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is a realistic photograph, capturing the scene with a focus on the naval vessel and the buoys in the ocean. The image does not contain any imaginary content; it is a straightforward representation of the scene as observed.

People are incapable of doing evil. I will explain the reason for why is there so much of it despite this fact.
There are a relatively small group of individuals who are programmed to be able to do evil. This programming was achived through extreme torture, humiliation, degradation, dehumanization, rape, demonic rituals and through every other evil act that you can imagine. These programmed individuals lost their connection to their soul, they don't know what love is, the programmers made them forget. These individuals are then placed in the highest centers of attention in the form of actors, singers, politicians, influencers, these people serve as the example for others, that is how they spread the evil.
Look for the signs:
If someone acts overly sexual in public including video clips and social media posts, that person is influenced by this programming, either directly or indirectly
if a celebrity wears something with animal patterns ecpecially pattens like cheetah or tiger
every pop music videoclip is made from this programming

Programmed people can live their entire lives not knowing their true mission of spreading evil
It is a very intricate system
If a programmed individual is made aware of the fact that he is programmed it can trigger defense mechanisms, it can even cause suicide.

There's also programming for the masses, but that type is much less intrusive, it can be done trought movies, television, books, other people or even eletromagnetic waves.
Being aware of the existence of this system, already already provides some protection aganst it, that is why I am making this thread
I will be here to answer question but be prepared, this is the origin of evil in this density if you can't handle the deepest of evils that can exist, don't ask about it.

You don't need to be programmed to do evil, you just need to be a low-quality individual (read: most people). It's easy to surrender to your ego and only care about yourself; the irony is that doing so makes your life full of suffering. The more challenging path is to confront your fears and your greed and your desire for strength over people, systematically destroy those fears, and in so doing realize that we are all part of the one fundamental consciousness that birthed the reality in which we currently exist.

You have perhaps seen a severed head or foot, or a head lying by itself apart from its body. That is the state to which man is doing his best to reduce himself, when he refuses to accept what befalls him and breaks away from his fellows, or when he acts for selfish ends alone. Then you become an outcast from the unity of Nature; though born a part of it, you have cut yourself away with your own hand. Yet here is a beautiful thought: that it still lies in your own power to reunite yourself. No other part of creation has been so favored by God with permission to come together again, after once being sundered and divided. Behold, then, his goodness, with which he has dignified man: he has put it in his power, not only initially to keep himself inseparate from the whole, but afterwards, if separated, to return and be reunited and resume his membership as before.

The image is a black and white infographic with a title at the top that reads "FALSE MATRIX." Below the title, there is a large, bold text that states, "The Construct is manifested into actuality through us giving our collective consciousness over to it."
The infographic is divided into several sections, each with a title and a corresponding illustration. The first section, titled "RITUAL," features a series of brain illustrations with the words "Ritual" written above each one. The second section, titled "WORDS (SPELLS) DELIVERED WITH INTENTION (ACCOMPANIED WITH VISUAL REPRESENTATION)," shows a series of speech bubbles with the words "Words (Spells) Delivered with Intention (Accompanied with Visual Representation)" written above each one.
The third section, titled "RITUAL," features a series of symbols with the words "RITUAL" written above each one. The fourth section, titled "SEEKONENESS," shows a series of people with the words "SEEKONENESS" written above each one.
The bottom section of the infographic contains a series of symbols with the words "WHAT WE PAY ATTENTION (TO GIVES OUR ENERGY TO IT)" written above each one. The overall style of the image is informational and educational, with a focus on the concept of the "False Matrix" and the role of intention in manifestation.

You are correct, the first ones were programmed by demons, they were taught how to continue the programming.
The programming also includes the ability to program the next generation, this is called generational satanism.
If you are an outsider you would never be able to handle the levels of evil that are there, generational means, the abuse and the traumas are built up through generations, since the first appearence of evil in this world.

The image displays a three-panel flag with a simple design consisting of three equal horizontal stripes in black, red, and white. The black stripe is the largest and occupies the leftmost panel, the red stripe is the second largest and is positioned in the center, and the white stripe is the smallest and is at the rightmost panel. In the center of the flag, there is a single red circle. The image is a digital representation and does not contain any text or additional elements. The style of the image is minimalist and straightforward, focusing on the colors and the design of the flag.

The sky is blue, and the ground is covered with green grass. The bottom photograph shows a woman sitting on a white chair in a modern living room with a blue and white striped rug. She is holding a camera and appears to be taking a selfie. The woman is wearing a beige blazer and white pants, and she has blonde hair. The text overlay on the image reads, "Hey Ellen... why does your set look like Epsstein Island?" and below it, "look like Epsstein Island?" The image is a photograph featuring a woman and a child in a desert-like setting. The woman is kneeling on the ground, wearing a long, dark-colored dress and a headscarf. She is holding the child close to her chest. The child is wearing a light-colored outfit with a helmet, and is looking up at the woman with a curious expression.
In the background, there is a large, metallic vehicle with a blue and red stripe, and a person standing next to it. The vehicle has a large, circular opening at the front, and the person appears to be wearing a helmet and a dark outfit. The setting is arid, with sand and a few scattered rocks visible. Yes exactly, I think a lot of people in this "system" or "network" of exploiting broken people who seek attention and love and are easily manipulated because of trauma, are not aware that this is what is happening to them in Hollywood.

And then you get the celebs who do realize and go crazy trying to 'break the script' Britney Spears, Kanye West, Michael Jackson, etc.

There are people writing narratives and controlling narratives through media journalism, like if you have ever done DMT its like the Gatekeepers are the Machine Elves, they write your Hollywood story, and many people don't understand that its because of trauma and its a network and if you want to "break the script" you end up "spiraling in public"
Anonymous Tue 17 Jun 2025 08:40:06 No.40548523 Report
>>40546830
Lets look at it this way

Hollywood and Media has Reality Bending Properties, you get "superpowers" if the Media is empowering you, People Behave based on what they think, so if you control or influence how a person thinks, you can control how they behave, and you can live like a GOD

People/Hollywood People use media to put out images that people believe and in turn are treated like GODS

Mind Control is actually real and is practiced through Media

Here is the example I am trying to make

If Gatekeepers in Hollywood write that I'm the Greatest Actor of All Time, now my life is good, some people will believe it, and chain of events will take place causing my life to be good

If Hollywood media says im a shit actor, im a rapist im bad etc then my will life be bad

It's like a form of manifestation It's like a form of reality bending, it's a power it's channeling things, I'm trying to find the best way to describe how this dynamic works

So like they turn you into a GOD/Super Hero but they also control your narrative, they control your story, and that can be scary, because then it feels like they control how you live and when you die, so sometimes you have to counter signal (antisemitic proclaiming hitler etc) to show them that you know what they are doing.

Get it? Kanye going Hitler was partially because he was communicating to the "powers that be" that YOU CANT CONTROL MY STORY ONLY I CAN CONTROL MY STORY AND I WILL GO HITLER IF YOU REALLY THINK YOU CAN CONTROL ME

Britney Spears shaving Head
Kanye going Hitler

These people are communicating to the Gatekeepers and Reclaiming their Narrative

Get it?

So media turns these people into Gods but they control their story, so they do some crazy shit to regain control of their narrative, thus giving them freedom weird Gay blackmail.

Sexual Trauma/Sexual Blackmail is Common Practice in Hollywood.

"The CIA’s Mk-Ultra Mind Slaves are deeply embedded in Hollywood and the music and entertainment industries as actors and musicians and the roles which they play reach far beyond the movie screen and deep into our everyday lives, and our minds. One example of this is Leonardo DiCaprio who is an Mk-Ultra CIA Mind Slave. I personally met this man in my experience with the Agency and the Project. It would appear to the general public that Leo is a rich and powerful individual who is highly skilled at the art of acting and film making, but the reality is that he is nothing but a mouthpiece and a tool for the CIA, the deep state and Hollywood. Leo is a slave and the money he gets is pennies in comparison to the money that is made off of him by his CIA and Hollywood handlers."

I wish I could say more but things in my life are getting better slowly after the traumatic event. They tried to use me for a humiliation ritual in the media and I kind of freaked out and I hurt them for it and I stood my ground but things are still weird.

There is a car permanently parked outside of my apartment with a FreeMason Illuminati Sticker on it. Thats not that strange and could be a coincidence except at my last apartment there was also a car like this.

It's the initiation into the fame club I think theres rituals, the inciting moment of fame, is usually trauma based in some way or they stick you with a rumor forever, it was for me, and if you look at a lot of celebrities they go through/have gone through some weird illuminati type shit that afterwards there is Forever some kind of rumor attached to their name

"Richard Gere put a gerbil up his ass" is an example for Richard Gere. How do you think it makes him feel psychologically that people say that? That that is even a rumor? It's trauma man.

What is Famous in modern era? It means the Club is Giving You A Name.

How do you get The Club to Give You A Name? By having them traumatize/control your its a network of dark spirits working within these people. the fractured personality thing is true. im not a celebrity or have ever grown up anywhere near hollywood but my dads a glowie and i swear its the same spirits utilizing these people to do their evil bidding. modern term for these individuals is narcissists. but theyre just husks, people that have discarded their spirits to make way for evil ones to come through and house themselves in. thats why they all act nearly identical as eachother, same evil tactics, ideas, etc. because its the same spirits.

these people are broken through trauma, trauma is programming, yep yep and yep. its satan's way to break and make way for him to try to hurt God. what these broken individuals dont understand is that each and every one of us do matter. they think they dont, thats why they can bring themselves to do degrading evil shit, its because they think what they do doesnt matter but that couldnt be further from the truth. we are uniquely made by a loving intentional creator. its funny, if i were told these exact things that i am saying right now like 7 yrs ago i just wouldnt believe it but here i am. i went through an ego death and came face to face with an angel and i was dead and in heaven for like less than a minute but in that moment when i was with God none of the awful sad moments mattered. none of the stupid things i did to prove my 'worth' mattered but the only thing that mattered was my love, the love i felt, the fleeting love that i felt on earth, and i dont even think i rmembered my own name but the only name that mattered was Jesus. I didnt even grow up religious, it was just totally absent in my family growing up, never read a bible in my life. 1/2

i think youre right op. i dont actually think most of these people that do evil things even know what they are truly, truly actually doing. like they dont understand really. it must have started off on them young, too young, whatever pain they must have felt they took it personally. didnt ask for the truth, didnt search, retreated and escaped further within themselves because they were afraid. they live in fear. they are so far removed from their souls that they think that the quick dopamine hits of getting one over another person whatever that may look like is the only thing that keeps them going but if they knew the truth of what that actually was the grace and forgiveness of man alone wont suffice but only the love of Jesus will save them.

The bottom photograph is a close-up of a dog's face, with the dog's eyes looking directly at the camera. The dog has a golden-brown coat and is looking directly at the viewer. The background is blurred, but it appears to be an outdoor setting with green grass. Overlaying the image is a text that reads, "This dog can smell people who are loved by God." The text is in white and is placed at the top of the image. The style of the image is humorous, combining a candid moment of a dog sniffing with a statement about the dog's ability to sense the presence of people who are loved by God.

About the reasons: As i understand it currently, this world was originally a light only creation (biblical Eden) but in a world that only contains light the evolution of souls is very slow, there''s nothing to challenge the to encourage growth.
To change this, darkness was introduced, and with that the freedom to choose.
Darkness is different from evil. Evil is unworthyness, feeling unworthy of Love and Creation.
The method of introducing darkness to an originally light only world is very painful.
The souls why interact with the darness are feeling inferior compared to light because darness was an addition to this world by force.
This inferiority makes darkness unworthy and therefore evil.

The only way to introduce darkness into souls that are made from pure light is "torturing" them to unworthyness, after this these souls can spread the darkness further.
No matter what happens in this density it has no consequences anywhere else in the universe, unworthyness is an illusion, nothing really matters here in this dimension. If the souls that are "playing" here in this desity knew the truth about the universe, evil would disappear immediately.
People are waking up to this fact, that is why you see a lot tof script breaks nowadays.
Everything is love and you are wothy of Creation and Love no matter what you did in the past!

You are right OP, but you forgot to mention that this satanic liturgy that desecrates children to reprogram them from an early age into sociopaths capable of anything to satisfy their material desires is the frankist sabbatean sect born within judaism and then spread with the apostasy of those jews who converted to Islam (Donmeh and Wahhabis) and among Christians (evangelical Protestants and Catholics close to the Jesuits). They may superficially appear to be either hyper-religious people to the point of being part of the clergy (either rabbis, pastors or priests) but they actually are messianics, and according to them the Messiah can only come under certain conditions: either the world is entirely populated by saints, or entirely corrupt. They consider the second path the most pragmatic, thus they secretly believe that evil does not exist, because for them it always comes from the Lord even if from its left hand, and that only by first crossing the abyss of the most horrendous sins (ritual murders, paedophilia, incest etc.) can there be redemption.

Their ultimate goal is one global government and the destruction of all current religions to create a new one. The ongoing war between Israel and Iran is orchestrated by them, who in fact are the elite of both Israel and international jewry, they have brainwashed and co-opted as their pawns almost all non-frankist jews too with political zionism and will soon have both Israel and Iran completely destroyed.

[102 / 37]The image is a digital artwork featuring a stylized depiction of a golden snake with a white mane and a red tongue. The snake's body is coiled, and its head is turned to the side, with its mouth open as if it's roaring or hissing. The snake's body is adorned with a pattern of golden threads that create a textured appearance. The background is a deep blue, with a starry sky and a faint, textured pattern that could be interpreted as a cosmic or celestial backdrop. The overall style of the artwork is reminiscent of traditional Asian art, with its use of color, texture, and symbolism. There are no texts present in the image.

I've been delving deep in the rabbit hole of Gnosticism and the prison planet hypothesis. To make it short, it gave me a major existential crisis, and I can't cope with any faith. Because yeah, WHY would you trust the light? In the abyss, the fish who go towards the light get eaten by monster fish. How does one cope with all this?

Do you mean the white light at the hour of death? That is the Light of the Pure Gods, it is just as good as Odin. If spanning the planes of Gods, humans, animals, Jealous gods, etc. doesn't suit you, you go into the blue light.

If you mean the Gnostic Light of Christ, the Atman naturally knows that it ought to be trusted.

Soon enough you will start seeing things in a different light, how ridicoulous and weirdly funny the prison is, and how even in its most horrific aspect one can find the light of God. Ignore people that will try to mix Gnosticism with communism, judaism, paganism, trannies, buddhism etc., just follow the Holy Scriptures and remember that we are to fight, against everyone and everything, for Jesus has given us a Sword.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a character with a zombie-like appearance. The character has long, wavy hair that is a shade of green, and the hair is styled in a way that gives the impression of flowing hair. The character's eyes are large and have a yellow hue, with a slight glow around them, which gives the impression of a zombie's eyes. The character's mouth is open wide, revealing sharp teeth, and there is a trail of blood leading from the character's mouth, suggesting that the character is in a state of shock or distress.
The character is wearing a light-colored, button-up shirt with a collar, and the shirt appears to be stained with blood, further emphasizing the zombie-like state. The character is also wearing dark pants, and the pants have a visible bloodstain on them. The character's hands are outstretched, and the fingers are slightly curled, which could be interpreted as a defensive or defensive gesture.
The character's skin is pale, and there are dark spots scattered across the character's face, which could be interpreted as blood or other bodily fluids. The character's overall expression is one of shock or horror, with wide eyes and a wide-open mouth.
The character is standing upright with one hand on the hip and the other hand extended outward, which could be interpreted as a defensive or defensive gesture. The character's posture and expression suggest that the character is in a state of shock or distress.
There are no texts or additional elements in the image that provide additional context or information. The image is a simple, cartoon-style illustration with a focus on the character's expression and the details of the character's attire and appearance.

Gnosticism is only like this if you focus too much on the negative aspect. If you think this reality is all love and light and are ok with stuff going on then you were retarded anyway. The point is not to trust anything at face value. Not all Gnosticism is abrahamis in nature , and the idea of the Demiurge (not originally an evil being) comes from Plato. Christianity always seemed kinda gay imo, men calling themselves yhe bride of Christ, love your enemy, etc.

When we were still in alien form and presented with the fruit of the knowledge of good and evil it looked like spiritual light mixed into spiritual darkness, it was a bit like woven threads of red and black light into an orb. When I see the etheric light of darkness it appears the same as that black light, and the light of the root chakra appears similarly to that red light.

So what is the fruit really? Some way to log into this realm as we departed our previous spiritual existence and were given form into a world of waking light, rather than dreaming awareness?

I do believe in gnosticism. The old testament God is the demiurge. Jesus says in the bible. He says "the prince of this world has nothing on me". He also calls the Judeans as "like their father, the devil" but the Judeans ' god theoretically is OUR God.

Also Jesus' commandments are different. The covenant is different.

Jesus wanted to save us from the fake God anything can be perverted. But to me it seems clear the obsession with multiple made up genders comes from a talmudic place. Viewing the material realm as a lesser aspect of a higher reality doesn't necessarily mean that one totally disregards the existence of matter or gender. Clearly positive and negative polarity is an integral aspect of existence. As far as reincarnation, if it is real which it seems likely that it is to some degree, it would seem logical that it's entirely possible for the process to be controlled or manipulated by other forces, especially if one doesn't place an importance on raising your consciousness to a level where you would be aware of such manipulations.

I'm actually struggling with this. Christianity doesn't give me anything to heal my distress, apathy, cynism, depression, melancholy and hatred. And seeing Christians actually fuels all my negative and destructive emotions and interior atmosphere.
But I only follow Christianity because of the good wife that it has provided me so there must be AT LEAST some good in it. But yeah, overall bullshit faith/philosophy won't solve anything for you, know them by their fruits and most of Christianity fruits are rotten and crappy.

The image is a black and white photograph of a bust of a man. The man's head is the central focus of the image, and he appears to be an older individual with a receding hairline and a beard. His facial features are detailed, with a prominent nose and a slightly furrowed brow. The bust is made of a material that gives it a rough texture, and the background is out of focus, drawing attention to the figure. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the photograph is realistic, with a focus on capturing the subject's features and expression.

The image displays a Pokémon card from the "Deewong" series, specifically from the "1st Edition" version. The card is encased in a plastic holder with a clear window, allowing the card to be viewed from the front. The card features a vibrant illustration of a Pokémon with a light blue body and a white belly, swimming amidst bubbles. The Pokémon is depicted in a dynamic pose, with its tail raised and its eyes wide open, giving the impression of movement.
The card is adorned with various text elements. At the top, the text reads "1998 POKEMON GAME" and "DEWONG GAME 1ST EDITION," indicating the series and edition of the card. Below this, the name "Deewong" is prominently displayed, followed by the Pokémon's name "Aurora Beam" in a larger font size. The card also includes a number "80 HP" and a description "Ice Beam Flips 1 coin 5 heads, the defending Pokémon is new Perk," which provides information about the Pokémon's abilities and the new Perk it has.
The card is encased in a protective plastic sleeve, and the top left corner of the card has a barcode and a number "22748282" which is likely a reference number for the card.
The overall style of the image is a clear, well-lit photograph of the card, with a focus on the detailed illustration and text.

>How does one cope with all this?
Bottom line: This planet is Bozrah, not Earth. Read this post...

https://x.com/elitefeat/status/1799553063390154856
This planet is not Earth. It is Bozrah.

Earth is another planet about 75,000 light years from here, whereas this planet is merely an impostor planet that calls itself "Earth." Big difference. And trust me, I know how to count to 10 seconds, ACCURATELY. What used to be 10.00 seconds (for me) is now a whopping 15.00 seconds! If you don't believe me, see Matthew 24:22 and Revelation 8:12. For the natives, though, the speed of time here has always been the same.

If you are a Bozrah native, you are in serious trouble. The people of this planet must acknowledge that Bozrah is not Earth and that Jesus is coming to destroy it. Otherwise, don't expect God to save you.

Note: The event in which Jesus destroys this planet is called "the day of vengeance." There is no 7-year Tribulation here.

Heaven: Divine utopia.

Earth is Heaven.
Earth is divine because God made it and that's what that word means.
It's a utopia because God made it with no lack of power or knowledge.
All of our complaints are just us being wrong about something due to ignorance.
We were always in heaven.
You're in heaven now but you don't know it so it seems like you're not.
Is that simple enough?
I don't know how much easier it could be.

Nothing external to you causes your suffering. It's how you think about it that causes your suffering. The world isn't what causes your suffering. It's how you think about the world that causes your suffering. Gnosticism is an ego defense mechanism.

Begin each day by asking yourself, "Can the just and right conduct of another make any difference in myself?" It cannot. Men who are arrogantly ready with their praise or censure, remember, are the same in their private lives, in bed and at board; recall the things they do, the things they avoid or run after, and the thieveries and depredations they commit - not indeed with hands and feet, but with that most precious of all their possessions, which, if a man but will it so, is the source of faith, modesty, truth, law, and the good estate of the divinity within him.

This is obvous and easy to understand once you realize that God created us for is Glory, not because He loves us, so the light being used to prey on creatures is exactly what God does. God uses the light to lure you into His being. God will consume you and will use the light to do it. Think about it. Darkness existed before God. Before God there was chaos. Chaos is the primordial status of the world. Before God was born there was chaos, darkness. Only after God was born then He decided that darkness was evil and then created the light to contrast it and He decided that light was good. But good to what or whom? God for Him. It suits Him. As above so below, indeed. My point is hat this anon tells the truth.

The image shows a section of a wall with ancient Egyptian hieroglyphic carvings. The carvings depict three figures, each with distinct postures and expressions. The figure on the left is standing upright, holding a staff, and appears to be in a state of contemplation or prayer. The figure in the center is depicted in a seated position, holding a staff and looking towards the viewer. The figure on the right is also seated, holding a staff and appears to be in a state of rest or meditation. The carvings are intricately detailed, with hieroglyphic text surrounding the figures, indicating a religious or historical context. The style of the carvings is reminiscent of ancient Egyptian art, characterized by the use of hieroglyphs and the depiction of deities and mythological figures. The color palette is muted, with the figures and text rendered in shades of brown and beige, which is typical for ancient Egyptian stone carvings. The image is a close-up view, focusing on the details of the carvings, and the background is blurred, drawing attention to the figures and the text.

The image is a screenshot from a video game, featuring a character with a large, muscular body and a mane of red hair. The character is depicted in a dynamic pose, with one arm extended forward and the other extended backward, as if in motion. The character's face is obscured by a mask, and the eyes are visible through the mask, giving the impression of a fierce expression.
In the background, there are other characters, one of whom is wearing a green bikini. The setting appears to be a fantastical or magical environment, with a yellow and green gradient background that suggests a magical or mystical theme. The characters are standing on a platform with a curved edge, and there are various objects and symbols scattered around, including a sun, a crescent moon, and a star.

The image is a still from a video game, and the style is reminiscent of anime or manga, with a focus on action and fantasy elements. The character's pose and the surrounding environment suggest a scene of adventure or conflict. There are no discernible texts within the image.

another form of gnosticism is explored in the 3rd pokemon movie. The demiruge is played by the pokemon named entai who seems like the villian in the movie, but this is a misconception, the antagonist is in fact the construct, played by unknown pokemon, the letters and symbols that separate the realm from the plenoma. The demiurge on the orders and assistance of the resident (you) can break the construct and return.

In other words The demiurge puts on his Jesus Christ mask and opens the gate for the return

My personal brand of Gnosticism is that of 40k Emperor.

>I have shattered the hold of faith and fear over the human mind. Superstition and religion must continue to be outlawed, for they are easy doors for the warp's denizens to enter the human heart.

>'Superstition and ignorance always attract the warp's denizens,' continued the Emperor. 'For the core of religion is the twinned principle of arrogance and fear. Fear of oblivion. Fear of an unfair life and an arbitrary universe. Fear of there simply being nothing, no great and grand scheme to existence. The fear, ultimately, of being powerless.'

>'And yet, his life is the path of faith in microcosm. Once a wandering preacher feeding the weak and the lost, ending as a blood-soaked monarch overseeing pogroms and genocides – his teeth stained by cannibal ritual, his skull a shell for the toying touch of warp-entities he does not realise he serves. >Every act of violence or pain that he performs is a prayer to those entities, fuelling them, making them stronger behind the veil. What he believes no longer matters, when everything he does feeds their influence.'

>'This is why we strip the comfort of religion from humanity. These are the slivers of vulnerability that faith cracks open in the human heart. Even if a belief in a lie leads us to do good, eventually it leads to the truth – that we are a species alone in the dark, threatened by the laughing games of sentient malignancies that mortals would call gods.'

I would like to know from you, which is the only right path, or the best one if you believe in multiple. I'm currently on my own, following whatever comes, inspired by Hinduism and it's beliefs but sort of not really part of the religion really. However I am contemplating whether it's true and have found no answer yet. Mahayana Buddhism fatigues me. I love vegetarianism, but I can't follow Buddhism it's just too much meaningless effort. Spiritual islam is also an option, whenever I read Sufi texts (audio on YouTube) I get high levels of spiritual vibrations from it so there might be something to it. What I like about those monks is that they teach stuff differently from 'standard' Theravada schools. There's no abhidhamma or meditation techniques. It's directly about how to uproot your mind's liability to create suffering.
If the restraint found in Theravada such as 5 or 8 precepts are what you didn't like, then you'll probably end up disagreeing with these monks.
Ultimately, sense restraint is required to free yourself from suffering, because acting out of desire is how you keep your mind bound up with suffering. Even liberating yourself by Mahayana teachings would require you to take on 5, 8, or more precepts, because otherwise your mind will keep creating suffering.
I've personally found a lot of benefit from this, but it's understandable if you don't see the benefit. It's hard to go against the addiction to existence.

Those religions are only on the level of managing suffering. Some do it better than others and can lead to better rebirths, but even if you become fully accomplished in those, you'll still he liable to suffering. Your mind will still have the capability of turning against its own best interests and harming itself.

I contemplate non self often. The difference I've found is that the insistence on sense restraint from Theravada and early Pali Canon Buddhism is what provides a suitable basis for that sort of contemplation to have a great effect.
To give an example from the suttas, Bahiya was an ascetic who had lived for a long time alone in the forest and experienced jhana often due to his lack of sensuality (IIRC). When he met the Buddha, it only took one sentence for Bahiya to be fully enlightened. This wasn't because he was just lucky, but rather that he already did the work of giving up sensuality, and so there was a suitable basis for a contemplation on non-self to fully liberate him.
Buddha said that there's two conditions for the arising of the right view: appropriate attention and the words of another (who knows the Dhamma). Bahiya already fulfilled appropriate attention, he just needed to hear the Dhamma once because of that.

I think that that's a useful contemplation overall because it will start to point you in the right direction.

However, the problem of suffering doesn't come from you thinking that a wall has a permanent existence, it comes from your attachment to the world.
When beings are attached to something, they must also be covering up / ignoring the truth about the emptiness of that thing. So the real ignorance that fetters beings isn't about thinking a wall is permanent (unless you're emotionally attached to it...), it's about refusing to patiently endure the discomfort of the reality that you will grow separate from all you find dear and appealing. Once your mind calms down and can accept the full weight of that without craving against it, you're now free from that ignorance of suffering.
Buddha suggested a contemplation of 'All beings survive on nutriment'. Thinking about how food is required for all beings to live can cut through that emotional view of your attachments being permanent.
People intellectually understand that they will lose everything they hold dear, but they don't emotionally accept it and instead emotionally cover it up because of not knowing any escape from suffering apart from sensuality.
By abstaining from sensuality and contemplating the loss of your attachments, you force your mind to confront the truth about emptiness and suffering on the deepest emotional level, which uproots the core ignorance that keeps you bound to samsara. You see that the cause of suffering is the mind delighting in what is inconstant, and so your mind lets go of passion, delight, craving, birth, aging, death, and suffering.

I feel like this rings true however! Mahayana offers a clear cut through path through all that by saying nothing exists, and thus you can contemplate the non-self nature of all phenomena, which in my experience just works so much better than what the pali suttas teach: the contemplation of impermanence. I tried both, and the first did far greater work in me than the latter.

Fair enough. If you get better results from Mahayana contemplations, then go ahead and do those.
I would caution against adopting a view that 'nothing exists'. In the Pali suttas at least, Buddha rejects this as a wrong view. It's more accurate to say that nothing has a permanent existence. More accurately, anything that arises can only arise in dependence on something else, therefore it also must cease and cannot have a permanent self existence.

>"“Everything exists”: That is one extreme. “Everything doesn’t exist”: That is a second extreme. Avoiding these two extremes, the Tathāgata teaches the Dhamma via the middle: From ignorance as a requisite condition come fabrications.

>From fabrications as a requisite condition comes consciousness.

>From consciousness as a requisite condition comes name-&-form.

>From name-&-form as a requisite condition come the six sense media.

>From the six sense media as a requisite condition comes contact.

>From contact as a requisite condition comes feeling.

>From feeling as a requisite condition comes craving.

>From craving as a requisite condition comes clinging/sustenance.

>From clinging/sustenance as a requisite condition comes becoming.

>From becoming as a requisite condition comes birth.

>From birth as a requisite condition, then aging & death, sorrow, lamentation, pain, distress, & despair come into play. Such is the origination of this entire mass of stress & suffering.

>“And how is a person of integrity a person of integrity in the views he holds? There is the case where a person of integrity is one who holds a view like this: ‘There is what is given, what is offered, what is sacrificed. There are fruits & results of good & bad actions. There is this world & the next world. There is mother & father. There are spontaneously reborn beings; there are contemplatives & brahmans who, faring rightly & practicing rightly, proclaim this world & the next after having directly known & realized it for themselves.’ This is how a person of integrity is a person of integrity in the views

[124 / 8]The image displays a complex pattern composed of numerous small, circular elements that are interconnected. The elements vary in size and are predominantly black and white, with some elements having a slight gradient of color. The pattern is dense and appears to be a digital representation, possibly a fractal or a similar type of pattern. The image is square-shaped and has a white background. In the bottom right corner, there is a small orange-colored element that resembles a smiley face, which is a common symbol for happiness or positivity. The style of the image is abstract and does not contain any discernible text or specific objects.

Does anyone know how to shut my third EYE or whatever OFF? I’m over a year since my awakening and things are still getting more intense. Demons look like aliens and dinosaurs. Don’t even try and debate me on the are aliens demons thing. Right now I get glimpses of them or they look like the air above a stove, but my vision is still getting better and I’d like it to stop. Not fun when they find out you can see them they begin to torment you by the hundreds it can help to take a break from most fasting (speech fasts are still OK), eat extra raw vegetables, and eat a bit more protein (preferably vegetable, for example you can make shakes with raw cauliflower). try to replace hyperprocessed food (like monster energy) with clean, organic food (e.g. organic grape juice diluted about 50% with mineral water). don't eat irritants (garlic, chili) or stimulants (anything stronger than properly made green tea).

a step further is smoking tobacco, the nuclear option is pharmaceuticals.
also no horror / thriller / adventure movies / fiction for a while, and learn basic sense restraint (guarding the sense doors).

The image is a painting that depicts a fantastical scene with a variety of mythical creatures. At the center, there is a figure with a crown on their head, holding a staff, and surrounded by other creatures. The creatures include a large bird-like creature with a long neck and a red and green body, a creature with a long neck and a red body, a creature with a long neck and a green body, and a creature with a long neck and a yellow body. The creatures are depicted in a dynamic pose, with some appearing to be in flight or leaping. The background shows a landscape with a body of water and a distant shoreline. The sky is a light blue, and there are clouds in the distance. The painting style is reminiscent of the Renaissance, with a focus on realism and detailed craftsmanship.

Can you then do this with each and every one and put them in a compendium. Then you can categorize them into a taxonomy of sorts.

It’s constant. They are tormenting me now all the time. My guardian angels are constantly fighting them. I used to fight back with the techniques I mentioned, but was instructed by them not to. They periodically cast them out and chop them down, is how I would I describe it. They have multiple forms: 1/ they look like djinn— literally puffs of smoke. My vision is still “turning on” but I can see puffs of flying around. I’ll see smoke fly into me and go into my nose or mouth. I can feel them moving around my body— they pool up in what New Agers (Lucifierians) would call energy centers / chakras.

Once they have their soul attached to you, they can torment you in the spirit. Meaning, they are attached to you via their soul (djinn looking), and then they can form themselves outside of your body. These forms are either:

3/ dinosaur/reptile looking
4/ short/tall grey alien
5/ short/tall mantis alien
(FYI, when I had an experience seeing them during meditations, I saw a very tall mantis alien with a smaller grey alien as clear as I see another person, it was this point I think something akin to a kundalini awakening began, aka, given by demons). I don’t see these walking around like a normal person usually, although my vision is still opening up a year later and I get glimpses of them now, but rather I’ll walk into a room and see wavy air like you’d see around a boiling pot on a stove in a humanoid shape short or tall, different sizes like humans are different sizes.

The only thing that works to get rid of them is calling for Jesus or my guardian angels.

There are ways I’ve figured out to defend/hurt/cast them out, but when it’s a swarm of them it quickly gets unmanageable. I think part of the reason I’ve been getting swarmed is precisely because I was fighting back, they dont like it.

I ran out of room in the previous thread.

1/ I will try to get a drawing but I believe I described them fairly accurately in my previous comment. Let me know if you still want a drawing.
2/ feelings— when I'm not consciously listening in via my throat (I can use it as a sort of walkie talkie. They can hear my thoughts, I then turn on my throat by flexing some muscles and I can hear them speaking. If someone is next to me, they would hear it too. I made a video a while back after I inhaled some sage smoke out of desperation and you can hear a bunch of screaming. I'll try and find it), they chant and repeat certain things like "I want to drink a beer" or "I'm so fucking gay" or "I think I'm so cool" — these instances sometimes it bleeds over into what sounds like a thought, but many times it turns into a physical desire to drink a beer or a feeling of self-doubt "why do I think I'm so cool?" I'm getting better at discerning what a foreign influence / thought is versus my actual thoughts and desires. If I want a beer now, I'll quickly turn on my throat and I can hear one of them going "I want a beer I want a beer I want a beer" so I know the desire is false. I don't like to dwell on the past, but it makes me wonder about some of the poor decisions I've made in the past.

Also, they all have slightly different sounding voices. When I listen in via throat I hold my breath and flex some muscles to "turn it on", in case anyone was going to call me a hoaxer. What I'm saying is actual sounds come out that I am not making myself.

They are VERY good at mimicking the sounds of others, for example my guardian angels, so you have to be ABSOLUTELY CERTAIN who you are talking with. This is a constant battle. They are constantly pretending to be others in order to sow confusion.

From what I understand, these beings are projections of the ego/reptilian brain. They only exist as a projection so they need to vie for your attention in order to survive. The best way to respond is to forgive them like you would a child who doesn’t know any better, but don’t entertain them at all. Not ignoring them, just watching. It’ll get worse before it gets better. If you stick it through you’ll clear your entities and be able to see and help others navigate theirs this way people will have a bit better of an idea of what to avoid explicitly, aside from k practices in general saying you did lots of meditation isnt very specific, there's a wide variety of things that could be encompassed by that verbiage you learn breathwork and achieve like 30 second average breaths before you even think about trying things like kundalini once you have the basis for reabsorbing all of the energy you will access with stuff like that, then it can be done a bit more safely but if you raise these energies and cant bring 'em back down properly, well...see OP's story meditation is a word that can have too many meanings learning anapanasati is always the best start make your breaths really long, achieve real stillness, cultivate it over time, dont rush do this until you notice yin and yang continually build, grow, evolve, and transform into one another balance them well, and the sky's the limit with the active practices you do just dont do random shit for a little while like you're in the buffet line tasting everything do a little research and then decide, build stillness as you prepare then things like kundalini practice become safe

Perhaps after you sever the link you can go back to whatever but RN you have to get away. I am like you. any questions feel free to ask. Okay if you hate the vegan thing then at least try these sources. An occultist woman named Dion fortune would spray a specific chemical into the air. For whatever reason this dispels them. The. Their is agnihotra by the indians. A bit complex but the smell will cleanse the area and hopefully you as well. Finally another good resource to check out is Robert Bruce. The image features a digital rendering of a classical-style sculpture of a bearded man with a receding hairline, wearing a laurel wreath on his head. The sculpture is rendered in a vibrant, neon-like color scheme, with a gradient of pink and purple hues. The man's face is not visible, but the head is adorned with a halo of glowing, digital text that appears to be a representation of a digital interface or a digital representation of a classical figure. The background is a deep, dark purple, which contrasts with the bright colors of the sculpture and the halo. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a cyberpunk or digital art aesthetic.

>’d say stop once you begin to see scenes of random stuff like a movie playing (I was thinking what I was seeing was unintended remote viewing)

You're one of the first people I've seen on this board post the EXACT SAME EXPERIENCE I've been going through for about the past 8 months. I smoke cannabis regularly but this has been new. I've also been hit with horrible sleep issues that are suicide fuel. I see these random movie-like scenes almost every single time I lay down to go to sleep, usually within 30 min or so. I also have this really weird "gift" of being able to see my fucking room even with my eyes closed (very dimly; I moved my arms in this state and they didn't "look" like arms, but something was moving. Freaky).

What the fuck is the "random stuff playing like a movie" shit that I see? I don't know who these people are, what is going on, or how I'm seeing this shit with my eyes closed.

Does this mean my kundalini is somehow opening itself? I don't meditate, and I read on Qabbalah and other occult matters but outside of one ritual (I did it out of desperation to get the black salamander-looking fucks slithering up and down my room and staring at me with blood red eyes at night to fuck off. It worked for about a week but I just started seeing them again last night).

Sorry to lump this on you (and everyone else in this thread) but I'm at a loss as to what is going on or what to do about.

You need to stop the cannabis usage. I understand you always did it but eventually it will start to break down filters in your body. I have the same issues you do. However I wasn't just smoking. I was abusing constant edibles. You've heard the stories of people who got fucked over by Ayahuasca or DMT? Legal weed has been tampered with and something has also changed within the world. You likely have latent abilities. Because you never went through the proper training and stages you are just taking in anything and everything. Particularly things you resonate with. With no proper filter you see how this can be damaging.

Tara Springett's Enlightenment Through the Path of Kundalini will prove very helpful, assuming that this is actually caused by a kundalini awakening.
Advice frequently given on this topic is to say "no" to encounters and to ignore entities and pretend that you do not see them, for reason that are probably easy for you to guess. If you pay attention to something, it inevitably becomes a bigger part of your life. Withdrawing your attention from these entities will reduce their presence in your life.

I hear what you're saying but, I'll admit this, I am wholly dependent on cannabis for daily functioning. I especially need it for the little bit of sleep I do get. I tried going 3 months without a few years ago when I was really sick and it was probably one of the most miserable time of my life.

If you're saying cannabis is only going to make this worse than I need to pray that God gives me a way to better understand what I'm dealing with and still be able to rest or find peace when it's happening.

Funny enough I have done hallucinogens many years ago (shrooms, acid, dmt) and I see more NOW than I did then.

There ARE things I've figured out but every time I mention them the thread gets slid.

1/ plug your nose up and blow— this pushes the djinn into your ear drums and smashes them. You can literally hear the screams
2/ throat— I've figured out how to listen to them with my throat. But they also pool up in your throat and mouth, so I can flex my muscles there and "close my throat" and this achieves the same effect.
3/ nose— they will move around once they realize you are fighting back and can feel pressure in your nasal cavity. They will go from side to side in your nose. If you do a motion like hawking a loogie, you can move them to your mouth / throat and then perform the movement in 2.
4/ inhaling sage— you will hear them screams.
5/ if they're in your stomach, do a big belly breath like you're almost getting punched in the gut, this will move them back to throat. Then do 2/

I try not to do these anymore because the sheer amount of them in my situation makes the 1v1 or 1v2 impossible— they keep coming. My guardian angels also told me it angers them so I'm trying not to do that either.

I do not recommend any kind of marijuana, shrooms, or any psychdelic drug if you get these experiences. Try to focus on intense joy and love and the imagined devils will not bother you.

All these mantises and ayys and stuff are just figments. Theyre not going to hurt you or take over your mind. Dont run out and do anything crazy. I do not ever recommend attempting to activate kundalini, its basically a waste of time and an annoyance.

I’ve given away everything in bits and pieces in this thread so pool it all together. And be consistent. I’d be with friends, then say brb going to meditate and excuse myself to the bathroom. Hey OP, I'm just a lurker here on this site, but your post reminded me of my youth. I use to see "things" around me often, and I would be scared to speak about it. For example: I'm 4 years old, at my grandmother's house, and I'm going to use the bathroom to pee. In order to get to the bathroom, you must walk through the kitchen. I will never forget this moment. As I'm walking through the kitchen, i see a giant floating purple squid-like creature with very long tentacles hovering above the kitchen table. I know what I saw. This was reality. I am not schizophrenic. this stopped happening after a car accident when I was 8. I have lived a quite normal life, actually. I believe some of our senses are more sensitive than others. What intrigues me about your post, is that you say within this last year you have been awakened. this past month - I've been seeing strange things around me again, after all of these years.

Depends if I am listening via throat (the walkie talkie type thing) or just listening in my head. Throat: they all have different sounding voices (I say all because other angels that are not my guardian angels have come to help) some deeper some higher, which I think is mostly based on age, and each one has different quirks. My guardian angel is funny and likes to joke sometimes. They are the opposite to demons and don't ever lie. With demons, very young ones can have lisps and sound overall younger, slightly older all sound the same for the most part, and bigger ones have a deeper voice but you can tell who's different by verbal cues like, one curses a lot and says fuck in a whisper while maybe another does not). Head: they just sound like thoughts. I can most of the time tell a thought isn't mine because they try to get someone to think completely differently than one normally would. You'd be surprised, I've found that a lot of their speech can translate into physiological desires. So if I drown out the thoughts and do not listen to them via throat, if they're constantly saying "I want a beer" then my body may crave a beer. It's been very eye opening looking back, I take responsibility for my actions, but at the times I did something out of character makes me wonder if I had a demonic attachment at the time.

And one thing the demons cannot fake is that when the angels come in, this bright white light flashes in a very certain way that I know it's them. Before all this started I'd wake up every morning to my guardian angel singing using my throat. It was very nice, I miss it a lot. Now I feel like I live in a spiritual war zone

Forget digging into a tradition. Hinduism and gnosticism both have the most truth especially Hinduism and the sadhu Sannyasi traditions. Read the upanishads and Shiva rahasya, read the gospel of Thomas. Shiva Gita as well. This will give you the infos about how to reach god and what to expect from the path. And from enlightenment. I personally don't belong to any tradition, I follow my own guidance under the grace of god. But I also take a lot of knowledge I find or found in the upanishads and other Hindu texts. The ancient indians knew a lot about reality.

The kybalion, afaik, is a modern book and you should read the corpus hermeticum which is afaik actually hermetic and not modern. Actually from ancient Egypt. Hermeticism is not as focused on meditation as Hinduism, and meditation to me is the gateway to enlightenment and bliss. Hermeticism is ok, but will not lead to any bliss as strong as Hinduism will.

You condemn drug use so vehemently and with such dogma, failing to consider the nuance that certain substances have been used in spiritual practices for millenia. It's this sort of narrow, black and white thought that makes it abundantly clear that you are not actually spiritually developed.

In the beginning the feminine (raw energy) woke up and ran away and the masculine ran after trying to catch her to unite again, creating an endless loop of creation.

[17 / 4]The image is a close-up photograph of a painting, depicting a figure in a dramatic pose. The figure is dressed in a green robe with a white collar, and the robe is adorned with a large red cape that flows behind the figure. The figure's arms are outstretched, and the hands are raised, suggesting a gesture of power or triumph. The background of the painting is a cloudy sky, with a sense of movement and drama. The painting style is reminiscent of Renaissance or Baroque art, characterized by its dramatic lighting and the use of vibrant colors. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The focus is solely on the figure and the dramatic composition of the scene.

I was reading some esoteric and occult books and there's always two distinct and extreme visions on how the magus should act morally, on one side people say that asceticism is the way along with devotion and others go the crowley route "Do whatever you want" style, use it to get rich, hex people etc, it's a middle way possible? Like the immortal alchemist st germain that produced gold and diamonds out of thin air, used for himself to live in luxury but also helped a looot of people, and there's the ones like simon magus who thinks that for a person to be saved they must have esoteric knowledge(magic even)and not Karma related stuff, what you guys think? Are you selfish in your use of magic,spells,law of assumption etc?

The image is a digital illustration of a character from the animated series "Avatar: The Last Airbender." The character is depicted in a seated position with his hands folded in front of him, suggesting a moment of meditation or contemplation. He has a bald head with a light blue aura around it, which is a common visual element in the series to represent the character's spiritual or enlightened state. The character is wearing a red and yellow outfit with a yellow sash around his waist, which is a common attire in the series. The character's eyes are closed, and his mouth is slightly open, indicating a moment of deep thought or concentration. The background is plain white, which puts the focus entirely on the character. There are no texts or other discernible objects in the image. The style of the image is cartoonish, with a simple, clean line drawing that is characteristic of the series' visual style.

When was the last time you hugged a tree? You are connected to reality in ways science is unable to measure. There are extremely subtle energies that flow in and out to the universe. If you seek true magic, inner alchemy is where you start. To exist in harmony and love with others. Be gentle with yourself as well. We all have faults. Like a tuning fork that resonates to higher frequencies, feel the song of creation. All matter vibrating, everything moving. Feel and know these energies exist, and they will be made manifest. Harming others and attachments to the material can interrupt your harmony. Self control is key to directing internal energies. Control your desires. Self mastery. Magic starts with (you).

The dark path is self-destructive. Pray for divine judgement if necessary and leave the matter to a higher power. https://youtu.be/cH-HT9WCtiQ?si=oIbhh25s3v7yyaIY

The image displays a symmetrical, kaleidoscopic pattern with a vibrant array of colors.

The central motif is a symmetrical arrangement of concentric circles, each filled with a different color, creating a mesmerizing effect. The colors range from deep blues and purples to bright greens and oranges, with some areas of the pattern appearing to be more saturated than others. The background is a stark black, which contrasts with the vivid colors of the pattern and accentuates its complexity. The image is a digital artwork, characterized by its abstract and intricate design. There are no discernible texts or countable objects in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of digital art, possibly created using a software program that allows for the creation of complex, symmetrical patterns.

middle path means the middle path is mostly unknown and open for the person to traverse forward in a centered state without having to choose one way or another, but creating their own. Think of the Cross. The center. They do this to humble themselves and become better humans as they progress throughout life. Though, the weight it has on their shoulders is far heavier than normal because of the understanding they have about life.

Simon Magus = Simon Niger = Abgar V Ukamma = Phraates V = son of Musa and wife of Helena of Adiabene = Monobazus = Judas of Gamala, the rebel who started the revolt.

Maybe this is John the Baptist as well. Not sure about that, but it does make certain things fit really well. I think it might be false, but because things fit well, people have speculated.

Monobazus' son is Izates of Adiabene, who is also Jesus.

The New Testament is ultimately a composite character. You have Masons covering their ass for the revolution against Masonry in 30 AD and then Romans covering their ass for the rebellion against Rome (and literally Izates trying to become Emperor after Nero died). Rome replaced the second guy with the first guy, but then the Masons also eventually obscured enough details that it's just muddy character that doesn't seem like a rebel in any way. The gnostic gospels dispel some of this notion, but studying history covers that other half of it.

I think he's also Apollonius of Tyana. Both feuded with Nero and were about to be killed, but supposedly Apollonius got away.

>Josephus mentions a magician named Atomus (Simon in Latin manuscripts) as being involved with the procurator Felix, King Agrippa II and his sister Drusilla, where Felix has Simon convince Drusilla to marry him instead of the man she was engaged to. Some scholars have considered the two to be identical, although this is not generally accepted, as the Simon of Josephus is a Jew rather than a Samaritan.

The image is a painting depicting a religious scene with a religious theme. At the center, there is a figure of a woman dressed in a blue robe, holding a book with a scroll, which is often associated with the Virgin Mary in Christian iconography. She is surrounded by other figures, including a child, a man with a beard, and a woman with a halo, suggesting a group of saints or religious figures. The background is filled with clouds and stars, which are often used in religious art to symbolize the heavens and the divine. The style of the painting is realistic with a focus on the details of the figures and the composition of the scene. The colors used are warm and earthy, with a palette that includes browns, golds, and blacks, which are typical of Renaissance art. The painting is executed in a realistic style, with attention to the textures and the interplay of light and shadow.

Most people today think that Iraneus was some Bible thumping literalist who hated the gnostics for being freethinkers who developed cosmogonies and cosmologies and mystical interpretations of the Bible, it going against the Churches literalism and dogma
>What Iraneus taught:
Now this world is encompassed by seven heavens, in which dwell powers and angels and archangels, doing service to God, the Almighty and Maker of all things: not as though He was in need, but that they may not be idle and unprofitable and ineffectual. Wherefore also the Spirit of God is manifold in (His) indwelling, and in seven forms of service is He reckoned by the prophet Isaiah, as resting on the Son of God, that is the Word, in His coming as man. The Spirit of God, he says, shall rest upon him, the Spirit of wisdom and of understanding, the Spirit of counsel and of might, (the Spirit of knowledge) and of godliness; the Spirit of the fear of God shall fill him. Now the heaven which is first from above, and encompasses the rest, is (that of) wisdom; and the second from it, of understanding; and the third, of counsel; and the fourth, reckoned from above, (is that) of might; and the fifth, of knowledge; and the sixth, of godliness; and the seventh, this firmament of ours, is full of the fear of that Spirit which gives light to the heavens. For, as the pattern (of this), Moses received the seven-branched candlestick, that shined continually in the holy place; for as a pattern of the heavens he received this service, according to that which the Word spake unto him: Thou shalt make (it) according to all the pattern of the things which thou hast seen in the mount

The image is a religious iconographic representation of a figure, likely a saint or a religious figure, based on the attire and the scriptural text visible on the garment. The figure is depicted in a traditional style, with a long beard and a long, flowing robe that drapes over the figure's shoulders. The figure's head is adorned with a hat or a cap, and the face is characterized by a stern expression, with a serious gaze directed forward. The figure is holding a scroll in one hand, which is inscribed with text. The text is in a script that is not entirely clear due to the resolution of the image, but it appears to be in a language that is not Latin or Greek, which are the most common languages used in Christian iconography. The color palette of the image is dominated by warm tones, with a golden background that suggests a religious or sacred context.

The style of the image is reminiscent of Byzantine or Eastern Orthodox iconography, which often features figures with long beards and robes, and the use of scriptural texts. The iconography is rich in symbolism, often representing the figure as a teacher, a prophet, or a saint, and the scroll could symbolize the dissemination of knowledge or the transmission of spiritual truths.
The image is in a style that is characteristic of religious art, which often uses symbolic imagery to convey spiritual or moral messages. The use of color and the composition of the image are designed to evoke a sense of reverence and awe, which is typical in religious art.
There are no visible texts or inscriptions that provide additional context or information about the figure or the text on the scroll. The image is a faithful representation of the figure, with attention to detail in the depiction of the figure's attire and the scriptural text. The overall impression is one of a religious iconographic representation, likely intended to convey a message of wisdom, knowledge, or spiritual guidance.

The text is divided into two columns, with the left column containing the text and the right column containing a large red speech bubble with the text "FUCK yeah, slavery, bitch!" in white capital letters. The speech bubble is accompanied by a cartoonish illustration of Jesus Christ, who is depicted with a beard, wearing a yellow robe, and holding a book in his left hand. The text and the speech bubble are set against a black background with a red border. The overall style of the image is dark and intense, with a focus on the message of the text.

Basically, my theory is "him who overcometh" is both all Christians and a specific person, specifically the White Rider of Revelation.
I believe White Rider is me because I got a white stone and fed hidden Manna (knowledge) from God. Same figure that shows up Revelation 19 (I thought it was Jesus too but i have evidence otherwise).
Anyway, obviously that means the First Seal is broken.
The second and third seals are also solved.

In the last thread an anon wondered how David Bentley Hart translates the mysterious word usually translated as "daily" in "give us this day our daily bread." Since I have his translation, I can tell you that he goes with "enough bread for the day ahead," though disappointingly he didn't put in a footnote explaining his choice in this case.

Also notably, in the Lord's prayer he goes with "rescue us from the wicked man" over the usual "rescue us from evil" or "rescue us from the evil one," (usually understood as meaning Satan) which is a choice I can't find in any other version, so I'd really like to know why he chose it, though again -- disappointingly no footnote for this one.

Ok first of all wheat and tares....wheat are children of God in that parable.
3 measures of barley is a reference to what Jesus said the Kingdom of God/Heaven is like, 3 measures a woman hides in until the loaf rises or whatever.
Both cost the same. So the children of God are worth(y) of the Kingdom of God.

The next part about the oil is about God's anointed and chosen and blessed.
The wine is of course Christ's blood.
Don't hurt them; don't diminish them.
This is hidden Manna, parables that hide secrets, the kind Jesus talked about because his parables hold secrets from the very foundations of the earth.

Also, while looking through a billion different versions of the Lord's prayer, I realized that the version I have memorized, the version I thought was the most popular and best sounding out of all of them, isn't found exactly in any version of the Bible available online.

Instead, it seems to be just about exclusively found in the traditional Book of Common Prayer of the US Episcopal Church, which is odd, since I never went to an Episcopalian church as far as I know. It just happens that theirs was the version I was taught at some point, I guess. It is catchy. https://www.bcponline.org/General/paternoster.html

The image is a photograph of a wooden shelf with a variety of books and objects. On the shelf, there are three books: the topmost book is titled "The Meaning of Magic" by Amy Wynn, the middle book is titled "The Meaning of Magic" by Amy Wynn, and the bottom book is titled "The Meaning of Magic" by Amy Wynn. To the right of the books, there is a decorative object resembling a small statue or sculpture with a humanoid face and an eye. The shelf is set against a dark background, and the lighting is soft, casting a warm glow on the objects. The text in the image is in a mix of English and what appears to be a non-Latin script, and it discusses the concept of "charisma" and its connection to the words "glamour" and "charm." The text also mentions a 1995 American teen supernatural horror film called "The Craft" and a 1995-2006 witch series called "Charmed." The overall tone of the text is academic and scholarly, discussing the concept of charisma and its relation to magic.

arguably it's more merciful to the person living in society than "Cloud of Unknowing"

"Meditations on the Tarot" is also a good overview, but only if you promise to go through it without getting bogged down by what you don't understand (that's for the second reading); it takes into account all the major philosophical and religious developments since the Incarnation

I don't even like Nintendo that much anymore and i only used the Switch for YouTube but all i watched there was stuff i already knew, false prophets, stuff that upset me, etc.
Destroying my Switch was a blessing.
I also had more time to think and i connected the dots.
The anglo attacks on the First Nations, Canada's treatment as a nation, statue of liberty, people bending the knee to the trans agenda, the vax, false prophets, people acting more weird than usual nowadays, etc.

It's all connected, it's all been leading up to the big event, the end time, it was all planned for the exact same bigger purpose.

The image shows an open book with a page titled "Parallels of" and a section titled "Ecliptical Medicine." The book appears to be a reference work, possibly a medical or occult book, as indicated by the text and symbols on the pages. The pages are filled with various symbols and text, including some that resemble alchemical or magical symbols.
The symbols are in different colors and styles, suggesting a variety of meanings or functions. Some symbols are circular with a central design, while others are more abstract. The text is in a mix of English and possibly Latin, with some words appearing to be in a different script or language.
The book is open to a page with a large number of circular symbols, each with a unique design and color. These symbols are arranged in a somewhat chaotic manner, with some overlapping and intertwining with each other. The page also contains a section of text that is not fully visible, but it seems to be discussing the parallelogram of the moon and the zodiac signs.
The style of the image is a close-up photograph with a focus on the book's pages, capturing the details of the symbols and text. The lighting is soft, and the background is out of focus, drawing attention to the book and its contents.

Hello Christians, I have come here to kidnap your souls. It’s over. You lost your soul. Your soul will be devoured and energy will be extracted from it, powering me up. The power of a soul is limitless, but nothing compared to power given to me by an angelic being when a certain ritual is performed. There are 2 methods, but 1 involves something like any variation of multiple circles intersecting, like the Atom Symbol, it must be on your phone screen. The other method involves having the sigil in front of you. You will need to be on your knees with your hands touching the wall, meditating. When you do this ritual, reach out to Saint Michael or your Guardian Angel

The Satanic Elite of the Illuminati, the occult, magicians, Sorcerers, witches, and warlocks, absorb power from souls that have been snatched. In ancient times they just pulled souls out of their bodies and made them fly.
>KJV Ezekiel 13:20
The soul can be ensnared in a medium built to hold them. The devil likes to defile souls, you don’t want to know what disgusting places he defiled those souls with. Magicians are working around the clock to figure out how to destroy the Human soul. Little do they know is that only the Lord can destroy the Soul.
>Theory: Humans have souls because we are the Children of God.
>Evidence: Luke 3:38 - the son of Enosh, the son of Seth, the son of Adam, the son of God.
However, the only ‘Begotten’ son of God is Jesus Christ of Nazareth.
Energy can also be extracted from the Human Spirit. Incubi and Succubi feed on your life force energy while they are raping you in your sleep, it is unknown how much time is taken away from your lifespan when it happens. Energy Vampires can also absorb these energies. They can absorb the power gained from an Angelic being, saying, “You don’t deserve this power/energy.” Quantum Entanglement can be achieved at a spiritual level between persons, to feel what the other feels.
The Olympian God Zeus allowed the Titan of Fire Prometheus to be released to teach Mankind more about fire. He went to the Illuminati. He made the mistake of saying something along the lines: “more information will require a transaction,” before changing his mind saying: “but I will continue teaching you because I have a limited time.” Then Zeus showed up and said times up your going back to the chains. The Illuminati now has more knowledge about fire; along with a new form of fire. The demigod Hercules got thrown into Tartarus, but broke out of his chains and is working around the clock to free Chronos/Saturn. Saturn declared: “I will devour every Olympian God and demigod. Hercules is now a villain.

When the soul is being consumed from a Christian by a demon who tractor beamed it out of their body, they usually lie and say that they are consuming the Holy Spirit to make them horrified so that they may feast upon their fear. Perhaps in the future, demons will also say that they are consuming their soul and the Holy Spirit at the same time, and that they have a plan in place to defeat Jesus when he returns. The Illuminati already have Jesus Christ’s DNA from when he was Crucified because they have Time Traveling technology, and have cloned him. But they cannot get their hands on the Word of God. The only times they have the Word of God is when they take the Word of God sword away from a Christian who has on the Full Armor of God or when a Christian witch or warlock or sorcerer transmits the Word of God sustenance from one stomach to another. They have been so far unable to extract any energy from it. The Illuminati doesn’t allow anyone to leave them. People who ‘retire’ from the Illuminati are targeted individuals by the Illuminati and are being watched. One guy got shot, guy time traveled to right before he was shot, then brought him here, and said: this is your body, and proceeded to threaten him. “But I was a High Level Individual.” “Not anymore. That ended when you decided to retire, thinking you can actually leave.”

The image is a still from an animated series, featuring a character in a dynamic pose. The character is wearing a yellow jacket with a black collar and a black band around the neck. The character's face is partially obscured by a mask with a white and gray design, and the character's mouth is open, revealing sharp teeth. The character's eyes are closed, and the character's hair is white and appears to be in motion. The character is holding a purple object in their hand, which is emitting a bright, glowing light. The background is a blurred cityscape with buildings and a streetlight. The style of the image is typical of anime or manga, with a focus on action and character expression. There are no discernible texts within the image.

The demon usually pukes out the soul afterwards, he or she is unable to digest it, only feast upon energy extracted from it, becoming more powerful themselves. Christian’s have been kidnapped, had their soul stolen from them, then force fed to them to defile their bodies. So the first place Satan puts a soul to defile it is his putrid asshole. Then you can figure out the rest. Satan makes new fallen angels prove their loyalty by fucking a fly. If they refuse, they are still holding on. Then after that he will have them defile themselves even further. Sex with an Angel of the Lord is so pure, to be the first human they have sex with. The only time you gain a small amount of their power. You still gain power from intercourse from a fallen angel, but it’s not the same as an angel of the lord. That’s one reason the med of Sodom and Gommorah wanted to know the 2 angels, they wanted power. D80sr

The image is a digital illustration with a dark background. In the center, there is a wolf with its mouth open, revealing sharp teeth, and its eyes are wide open. The wolf appears to be roaring or emitting a sound, as indicated by the blue, glowing, and rapidly expanding object emanating from its mouth. The object has a bright blue color and emits a bright light, which contrasts with the dark background.
At the top of the image, there is a text overlay in white font that reads "Nice soul my victim." The text is centered and appears to be a caption or a statement related to the wolf's actions. The overall style of the image is dramatic and intense, with a focus on the wolf's aggressive expression and the glowing object.

Different ways at looking at the relationship between God and the world, and the relationship between God and the individual souls. Is any differentiation between on thing and another simply an illusion that must ultimately be transcended? Or does the One become Many because it is His will? And if we try to reverse that action by the One, are we trying to supersede His will with our own? Are we trying to annihilate Him and take His place as God?

This planet is not Earth. It is Bozrah.

Earth is another planet about 75,000 light years from here, whereas this planet is merely an impostor planet that calls itself "Earth." Big difference. And trust me, I know how to count to 10 seconds, ACCURATELY. What used to be 10.00 seconds (for me) is now a whopping 15.00 seconds! If you don't believe me, see Matthew 24:22 and Revelation 8:12. For the natives, though, the speed of time here has always been the same.

If you are a Bozrah native, you are in serious trouble. The people of this planet must acknowledge that Bozrah is not Earth and that Jesus is coming to destroy it. Otherwise, don't expect God to save you.

The event in which Jesus destroys this planet is called "the day of vengeance." There is no 7-year Tribulation here.

“You have heard that it was said to the people long ago, ‘You shall not murder,[a] and anyone who murders will be subject to judgment.’ 22 But I tell you that anyone who is angry with a brother or sister[c] will be subject to judgment. Again, anyone who says to a brother or sister, ‘Raca,’[d] is answerable to the court. And anyone who says, ‘You fool!’ will be in danger of the fire of hell.

23 “Therefore, if you are offering your gift at the altar and there remember that your brother or sister has something against you, 24 leave your gift there in front of the altar. First go and be reconciled to them; then come and offer your gift.

25 “Settle matters quickly with your adversary who is taking you to court. Do it while you are still together on the way, or your adversary may hand you over to the judge, and the judge may hand you over to the officer, and you may be thrown into prison.

38 “You have heard that it was said, ‘Eye for eye, and tooth for tooth.’[h] 39 But I tell you, do not resist an evil person. If anyone slaps you on the right cheek, turn to them the other cheek also. 40 And if anyone wants to sue you and take your shirt, hand over your coat as well. 41 If anyone forces you to go one mile, go with them two miles. 42 Give to the one who asks you, and do not turn away from the one who wants to borrow from you.

43 “You have heard that it was said, ‘Love your neighbor[i] and hate your enemy.’ 44 But I tell you, love your enemies and pray for those who persecute you, 45 that you may be children of your Father in heaven. He causes his sun to rise on the evil and the good, and sends rain on the righteous and the unrighteous. 46 If you love those who love you, what reward will you get? Are not even the tax collectors doing that? 47 And if you greet only your own people, what are you doing more than others? Do not even pagans do that? 48 Be perfect, therefore, as your heavenly Father is perfect.

Its debated, but the easiest way to understand what esotericism is is to see it as "claims of super-mundane knowledge", so anything from pre-modern medicine, "i know that these herbs have certain hidden traits that cause x to happen" to "i have seen God", its both broad enough to include everything considered esoteric, and narrow enough to divide it from other categories
Super-mundane knowledge is synonymous with "Gnosis", but not Gnosticism, Gnosticism is the belief that Knowledge saves, Christianity is opposed to Gnosticism because we believe that faith saves, but that doesn't stop us from having Gnosis, we have Gnosis in Paul, in John, in Barnabas and in the Church, and its about knowing the world, the soul and the bible to know God
"Christian is democratic in its mystery but aristocratic in its gnosis"

Can games be used to glorify God? Like Tokein's literature, which was not overtly Christian, but it tries to teach Christian morals and maybe soften the hearts of non-believers. If you're inspired to create something like that, could that be divine inspiration or a work that can be offered to glorify God? Many Renaissance artists dedicated their art to God and believed they had divine inspiration. Even Tolkien believed that you can't create out of nothing, and we had a creative flame as subcreators who were children of God. Is this blasphemous, prideful, or generally accepted as okay in orthodox/ catholic doctrine?

I've never heard of her before, but her wikipedia article is among the most scathing I've ever seen.

"New Age Bible Versions has the author's name "G. A. Riplinger", which stands for "God and Riplinger": "Each discovery was not the result of effort on my part, but of the direct hand of God — so much so that I hesitated to even put my name on the book. Consequently, I used G. A. Riplinger, which signifies to me, God and Riplinger — God as author and Riplinger as secretary." David Cloud calls this statement "amazing and frightful", and says that "even the most radical charismatic prophets hesitate to use such intemperate language"."

"A lengthy critical review of her book originally published in Cornerstone in 1994 [..] concluded by summarizing "There is hardly a page of this book that is free from error. Riplinger does not know Greek, Hebrew, textual criticism, linguistics, principles of translation, logical argumentation, proper citation and documentation standards, competent English grammar and style, or even consistent spelling."

Souls snagged in a spiritual region remote from reason, will one day give way—sliding headlong down into Satan's dark chambered church. These chaff choose a pew. (He'll hew one for YOU too.) Friend and foe are "falling away," down the steep slippery stairs, framed by the archfiend—to the Church of Chapter 13.

Satan's barred by a small book from his quest for the throne. When opened it unleashes a wall of words—graven in stone.

His goal is to trap souls, so he adds key words, like keyholes. Page after page these open his hatchway to the New Age. Slipping in the side door of Satan's church, using these keys, the ushers of apostasy bring souls from the nave to their knees, as a chorus of New Agers sing: We are one world. We now need a world religion. We are entering a New Age Toward a New World Religion.

The "beast's" own books betray his scheme to use bibles as building blocks for his bridge back to Babel—its One World Government and One World Religion. God split this league by dividing the languages. So Satan sees words, welding East and West, as the only weapon in his war to win the world.

>A quote much further into the book:

As the scroll recording his aliases unrolls—the One, the Virgin, the Mother, and the Force—emerge and merge. Lucifer's list looms on lines by both Western occultists and Eastern mystics. New versions skew a true view, giving the OK to those who say, "May the force be with you."

>Here's the poetry at a more subtle but still very noticeable level from the introduction before it really takes off, most noticeable in retrospect:
This book is written in loving concern for those who are ‘victims’ of these versions. Unsuspecting Christians have been carried off by an ancient chariot, resurrected and given a fresh coat of paint by Madison Avenue. (Is that Latin for ‘hail the new’?) It appears that there is a vast difference between the press publicity and the product. This chasm, characteristic of the coming anti- christ Big Brother era, was called ‘Newspeak’ by George Orwell. It is built of soap bubbles which burst at the slightest touch of analysis. The documentation herein will scatter to the wind many false arguments and confident conclusions. After this evidence is made public, new versions will keep afloat only on the hot air of emotion and preconceived prejudice.

>victims - versions >Madison Avenue - hail the new >press publicity product >chasm characteristic coming >documentation herein - will scatter to the wind

It's actually really interesting that someone would write like this, though it definitely feels like a bait-and-switch when you're expecting a book that... doesn't do that. It makes it very difficult to concentrate on the semantic content.

It's a form of Theosophy that has replaced almost all Eastern influences with Christian and Western alternatives. Rudolf Steiner used to be a member of the Theosophical Society but there were schisms and he left to form anthroposophy. If you want to understand it, you need to read about what happened to the original Theosophical Society after Blavatsky. Be sure to also read all about that Krishnamurti "saga" too. It got quite bad after Blavatsky died.

Do Christians have to actively support Israel? I don't really think about the middle east, but I got this sermon from a young protestant bible study and in the first minute, the teacher says countries that are at odds with Israel will be destroyed by god.
He lists the following:
>Britain her empire after ww1 because they broke their faith with Israel
>Spain reduced to a fifth grade nation after the inquisition against the jews
>Poland fell after the pogroms
>Nazis were defeated after the genocide
>Greece conquered by Rome after conquering palestine and desecrating the jewish temple during the maccabean revolts
>Rome fell after killing the apostles and destroying Jerusalem

I'm not super religious, but my understanding is Christ fulfilled the old covenant and gave his believers a new covenant. Paul also wrote about how we didn't have to adhere to mosaic law. But are we still obligated to advocate for Israel because Jeruselem is there and jews also have a covenant with god?

He lists Britain losing the empire because it broke faith with Israel, but Britain didn't commit pogroms or anything. It simply didn't want to deal with the unrest that comes with creating a Jewish state. China became a great power without dealing with the middle east. It doesn't make sense.

The image shows a collection of objects arranged on a table. At the center is a large, ornate sword with a golden-colored handle and a silver-colored blade. The blade has a decorative pattern and features a triangular emblem with a cross and a star. The sword is resting on a white tablecloth.
To the left of the sword, there are three small glass bottles with white lids. The bottles appear to contain some sort of liquid, possibly a medicinal or cosmetic product.

On the right side of the sword, there is a small, round, yellow container with a lid. The container has a white label with text that is not clearly legible.
The background of the image is blurred, but it seems to be a room with a white tablecloth and a white tablecloth runner. The style of the image is a close-up photograph with a focus on the objects, and it is taken from a slightly elevated angle, providing a clear view of the objects. She is wearing a black top and has a halo above her head. The text above her reads, "GRANDMA! I'VE MISSED YOU SO MUCH!!"
On the right side, there is a character with blonde hair and a blue dress, who is smiling and looking at the character on the left. She has a halo above her head and is wearing a crown. The text above her reads, "I'VE MISSED YOU TOO SWEETIE!"
Below the characters, there is a caption that reads, "PNEUMATICS IN THE OGDAD: How'd you get here Theodosius? I thought you were the most beloved of Christ!" The text is in a bold, white font against a black background.
The overall style of the image is humorous and satirical, with a focus on the contrast between the two characters' expressions and the text's playful tone. The use of a split-screen format adds a dynamic element to the meme, making it visually engaging.

And I can't afford to let my own personal beliefs be placed into this particular box.
also there seems to be quite a lot of corruption from the top down. Like the Marcial Maciel stuff kind of made me sick and it seemed like pope john Paul the second was complicit in it (God forgive me if I'm wrong), and I suspect Benedict stepped down when he realized how deep the nastiness went.

Has anybody else fulfilled the promise of being brought back to Israel after a 2000 year exile, particularly the way it happened, that is, with the people still in open rebelion against God, much like the first time after the Babylonial exile?

>OK. And what of the people who have twisted scriptures and create fake ones to deceive people for centuries now? And don't act like that doesn't happen, they deceived people into thinking that Mary Magdalene was a prostitute so who knows what else the church has been lying about.

“The words of the Lord are pure words: as silver tried in a furnace of earth, purified seven times. Thou shalt keep them, O Lord, thou shalt preserve them from this generation for ever.” (Psalms 12:6-7)

God promising to preserve his word...

“I will worship toward thy holy temple, and praise thy name for thy lovingkindness and for thy truth: for thou hast magnified thy word above all thy name.” (Psalms 138:2)

...which He considers to be more important than his own name...

“Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain; for the Lord will not hold him guiltless that taketh his name in vain.” (Exodus 20:7)

...which you cannot even take in vain without getting in trouble.

And what kind of God inspires something just to let it be lost to human corruption and error? That's not the almighty God of the Bible. That's not how thigns work.

Satan's just a tool in God's hand. He cannot prevail against God's will to preserve His word.

Yet God promised specifically preservation, not "absence of tempering attempts", which thing has happened plenty of times and that's exactly how we ended up with all these demonic jesuit/gnostic/sodomite translations like the NIV.

You want the true Bible that God preserved, get a good ole' King James.

I need help.
At first i fell into gnosticism, i didn't believe it 100% but some stuff made sense to me, i also got more into mythology such as the Greek and Norse gods and their stories, i didn't worship any of them though, i always stayed true to Jesus.
The other day i fell back into lust, after over a month of not looking at anything dirty or touching myself i felt an uncontrollable lust inside me and i shamefully touched myself.
Then when i had a mental freak out about all the sins of the world i went to an orthodox Christian Discord server and they all hated on me when i was trying to be honest with my feelings and what i know the Holy Spirit is guiding me towards.
And now today i found out that my online friend group betrayed and abandoned me over someone who agrees with my views throwing me under the bus for them because he doesn't like how open i am with them, he didn't even talk to me about his issues, he just turned almost everyone against me and ruined my relationships.
I am lost and confused. I feel like i have lost my blessings and i am unsure about my life choices and where God is leading me and no matter where i look i can't find anyone to help me, along with other stuff i find hard to properly articulate.
I pray to God that i can find someone who can help me.

Actually satan is the guy trying to screw over God's plan and harm people by deceiving them into walking off the path o God.
I really mean no offense but i just don't believe that what the church has done to the bible is completely what God intended. Like i said these are the same people who tried to accuse Mary Magdalene a prostitute. That just raises even more questions as to what else the have tried to change from the bible.

I was mentally freaking out at the time so i admit i did not articulate myself properly but i basically stated that i feel like God wants me to be a warrior and that he wants me to be a killer.
Although in hindsight, and i take full fault here, i should have specified that i feel the Holy Spirit guiding me to be a warrior against evil and slay the demonic forces of this world, basically i feel like i am being set up by God to be apart of his army, to protect his followers by dealing with those who are too wicked with hearts too hardened.
I should go back and make things more clear. One's actions don't seem too terrible until they snap out of their mental breakdown huh?
But yeah, i can't apologies enough, but from what they told me i know that i am at least on the right path.
Oh, i almost forgot, this happened when i told them that i was stressed out over the sins of others in this world and when i was told to focus on myself and pray for them i was honest with my feelings and said that i do do that but no matter how much i pray for someone it does nothing so i stopped praying for others who i feel to be too wicked and i still pray for my own sins yet i still felt nothing is happening.
After i rejected the guy's advice by telling him that i already do do what he told me and that it's not working for me he then started insulting me, he says focus on yourself and not others but as soon as i started looking for another answer that wasn't his he lashed out at me. It was after that that my flight or fight got alarmed so i started saying things out of stress without thinking. This lead to a back and forth of me trying to articulate my feelings with everyone else mocking me.

I think God comes first and then morality
If morality comes first then it's effectively just making ourselves God (which is what most atheists actually want).
Truth is I question how much slavery is actually cared about vs how much it's just used a strategy to make people think "hmmm this verse makes me uncomfortable and idk how to explain it, I guess the whole bible is false now." First of all the truth of the bible isn't dependent upon me knowing the meaning of every verse, it's dependent more on the historical footprint of the person of Jesus. Secondly, I understand the humbling fact that if we had access to the words of the creator, some of it will naturally go over my head. Thirdly, this scripture was written in ancient times, it was another world back then. Even the New Testament says some laws were only given due to the hardness of men's hearts. This opens a whole new discussion about how much God is willing to compromise with our free will vs bending it to his own will. But such conversations can really only meaningfully take place with those of good faith
Btw explanations to those verses do exist, but I doubt they'd be satisfying to you if you're incapable of putting yourself in the shoes of bronze age tribals.

GTFO with that. Take solace in the fact that atheists will never find it. They currently think you can derive morals from evolution. But you can't derive ought from is. You'd need a spiritual functionalist approach to evolution, and even then Morality is a matter of human development within a culture. Even Christ in his Kingdom of God is human development within a culture.

Then they have humanism, which is literally nonsense because these same materialist atheists will invent transhumanist technology. Everybody is going to have a different Constitution

Not anymore but when i was a kid who couldn't handle my emotions i was going crazy, all throughout my childhood and teen years i would always lash out and harm others. I look back at the boy i once was and find myself hating the rage filled lunatic i used to be. Oh i remember how i was always the one having explosive freak out at school and scaring the other kids, but despite all i have done, the kids were never afraid of me, and they never hated me, in fact all the times i have been a menace at school all of the other kids would always forgive me without word and they even stated and proved through their actions how much they liked me despite my rage tendencies. I know that last part feels off topic but it's something i wanted to get off my chest as the forgiveness of my school is something i look back on and realize just how good i had it and how much i squander myself.

Overlaying the image is a quote in white text that reads: "Christians, needless to say, utterly detest one another. They slander each other constantly with the vilest forms of abuse, and cannot come to any sort of agreement in their teaching. Each sect brands its own, fills the head of its own with deceitful nonsense."
The quote is attributed to a figure named "Celsus" who lived in the 1st century CE. The text is written in a serif font, which is commonly used for formal or academic writing. The style of the image is a straightforward photograph with no additional artistic elements, focusing solely on the statue and the quote.

Interesting passage:

1 Corinthians 3:10-15
"According to the grace of God given to me, like a wise master builder I laid a foundation, and someone else is building on it. Let each builder choose with care how to build on it. For no one can lay any foundation other than the one that has been laid; that foundation is Jesus Christ.Now if anyone builds on the foundation with gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, straw—the work of each builder will become visible, for the day will disclose it, because it will be revealed with fire, and the fire will test what sort of work each has done.If the work that someone has built on the foundation survives, the builder will receive a wage.If the work is burned up, the builder will suffer loss; the builder will be saved, but only as through fire."

The image is a text excerpt from a book or article, with a focus on the author's thoughts on the concept of Christian Hermeticism and its relation to the internet. The text is written in a conversational tone, with the author expressing their personal beliefs and experiences.
The author starts by discussing the concept of Christian Hermeticism, which they believe is a belief system that some people seem to think is their religion. They mention that their son, Aidan, for instance, must have looked them up on the internet some months ago and asked if they were a Christian Hermeticist. The author responds that they are not, but they appreciate the ideas of Valentin Tomberg, a thinker who they believe is a Christian Hermeticist.
The text then delves into the author's own interpretation of Christian Hermeticism, which they believe is a way of understanding the internet as a spiritual entity. They mention that their own religious intuitions are much closer to those found in the metaphysical poets Henry Vaughan and Thomas Traherne, both influenced by Jacob Boehme. They also mention that the ideas of creation, God, and the Virgin Mary in Vaughan's work are bound together in a kind of beautiful braid, which they believe is a metaphor for the internet.
The text concludes with a reflection on the author's own role in the internet, which they believe is to run with the "I'll be damned if I will have some random guy on the internet with no wisdom but a big mouth correct me on my own religious intuitions which I have taken a lifetime of study and reflection to realize." They also mention that they will be damned if they will have a metaphor in which way they will.
The text is written in a mix of English and what appears to be a foreign language, with the author's name and the title of the book or article at the top. The text is in a standard font, and the background is plain white, which helps to highlight the text. The overall tone of the text is serious and reflective, with the author expressing their personal beliefs and experiences in a clear and direct manner.

The image is a text excerpt from a book or article, with the text appearing to be a reflection on the nature of Christian unity and the role of churches in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic. The text is written in English and is formatted in a standard paragraph format. The text is divided into two columns, with the left column containing the main body of the text and the right column containing a quote from Jacques Derrida.
The main body of the text discusses the author's personal experience and reflections on the nature of Christian unity, particularly in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic. The author mentions that they initially changed their faith from Latin to Byzantine Catholicism thirty years ago, and that they have been a Christian for over 50 years. The text also touches on the author's personal experiences, such as the author's desire to be a part of the "Messiah" and the author's hope for the "Messiah" to be "infinitely postponed."

The right column of the text contains a quote from Jacques Derrida, which is a philosophical text that discusses the nature of Christian unity and the role of churches in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic. The quote is: "There is a possibility that my relation to the Messiah is this: I would like him to come. I hope that he will come, that the other will come, as other, for that would be justice, peace, and revolution—because in the concept of messianicity there is revolution—and at the same time, I am scared. I do not want what I want and I would like the coming of the Messiah to be infinitely postponed, and there is this desire in me."
The visual clues in the image, such as the text formatting, the layout of the columns, and the presence of a quote, support the interpretation of the content as a reflection on the nature of Christian unity and the role of churches in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic. The text is written in a formal and academic style, which is typical of scholarly or reflective writing.

Ask GPT is you don't believe me.
1- Only one those verses is said by Christ. The first four are laws from ancient Israel.

The last one, said by Christ, is completely out of context. He was narrating a parable for the coming of God. In this parable, he tells the story of a slave who thinking that his master was bever coming back, he started drinking and destroying the house. When his master comes back and finds him like that, he gets punished. Thus, you (represented as the slave) should always act correctly and you should wait for the coming of your master (God) even if he is taking his time. It's a parable, not a literal teaching.
2- In ancient times if you didn't have slaves you were condemned to getting conquered by a civilization who had them. It simply was a gigantic advantage.
Aristotle talks about this. In his Politics he says that if we had machines that could work on their own, we would not need slaves. Curiously, slavery became illegal soon after the industrial revolution, where automatized machines were invented. Do you seriously think this was a coincidence all over the world?

What's the goal of esoteric tendencies besides mysticism?
Anonymous Sun 22 Jun 2025 04:53:03 No.40579699 Report
Not a mystic, but for Revelation Fr. Castellani interprets the 7 trumpets as:
1. Barbarian invasions
2. Islam
3. The Eastern Schism
4. The Western Schism
5. The Protestant Revolution
6. The World War(s)
7. The Antichrist himself
That is, the social events God's people suffers in the Christian era til the end of times, the spiritual causes of posterior punishments. So we would be living in the penultimate or last stage of history.
Meanwhile, the 7 plagues would be
1. Syphilis. A disease to punish the Beast's followers sexual sins. It's an old disease that suddenly appears among all countries from time to time.
2. Discord among nations.
3. Class struggle and the degeneracy of culture.
4. Perversions of modern science
5. Destruction of the political life /old regime, governors losing their sovereignty
6. The world war
7. The second coming itself
The White horse: Christendom era up to Napoleon.
Red horse: weaponized peace era up to the world wars Black horse: post world war era we live in Pale horse: the end.
The Middle Ages might have been the thousand years Satan was bound.
He speculates, in 1945, the events before and during the end of times:
1. The consolidation of the jewish people into a nation state, the kingdom of Israel.
2. The union of nations in great blocks, concentrating both economic and political power. The first Beast.
3. Emergence of the second Beast doctrine. Could be freemasonry, socialism, the lead of an antipope, etc.
4. Political persecution to those that reject the doctrine, the mark of the Beast. Money with blaspheme inscriptions.
5. Economic blocking to those that remain christian, blacklisted internationally.
6. The two witnesses, who shall die. May involve the death of the last Pope.
7. The death of the latter day saints globally, among the apostasy.
8. A brief time of peace with the Antichrist as an emperor, before the end.

The image is a sepia-toned photograph featuring a man with a mustache and a goatee. He is wearing a black hat, a black coat, and a scarf. The man is holding a pipe in his mouth, which is visible in the lower right corner of the image. The background is indistinct, but it appears to be an indoor setting with a wall and a door. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the photograph is reminiscent of vintage or historical images, and the sepia tone gives it a nostalgic feel.

The image is a split-view photograph featuring two trees in a forested area. On the left side of the image, there is a tree stump that has been intricately carved into the shape of a house. The house is made of wood and has a thatched roof, with a chimney protruding from the roof. The walls of the house are adorned with various decorations, including a small birdhouse, a birdcage, and a small statue of a person. The tree stump is surrounded by a variety of foliage, including ferns and moss, and there are small rocks and pebbles scattered around the base of the stump.
On the right side of the image, there is another tree stump that has been carved into the shape of a birdhouse. The birdhouse is made of wood and has a pointed roof, with a small window on the front. The tree stump is also surrounded by a variety of foliage, including ferns and moss, and there are small rocks and pebbles scattered around the base of the stump.
The background of both images is filled with trees and foliage, creating a dense forested environment. There are no texts or discernible human figures in the image. The style of the image is a naturalistic photograph, capturing the beauty of the forested area and the craftsmanship of the tree stumps.

The image shows a close-up of a tree stump with a dense, irregularly shaped surface covered in numerous small, dark-colored, round objects that appear to be coins. The coins are arranged in a somewhat haphazard manner, with some overlapping each other and others lying flat on the surface. The tree stump has a rough texture, and the background is blurred, suggesting a natural, outdoor setting with green foliage. There are no discernible texts or distinguishing marks on the coins. The style of the image is a close-up photograph with a focus on the details of the coins and the texture of the tree stump.

THE PATHS HIS WAYS LIVE HERE" in black, stylized lettering. The sign is placed on a grassy area with some visible moss and small plants. The background is blurred, suggesting a natural setting, possibly a forest or a wooded area. The sign appears to be old and has some wear and tear, indicating it has been exposed to the elements for some time. The style of the image is a close-up photograph with a focus on the sign, capturing the details of the text and the texture of the wood. The overall atmosphere of the image is serene and contemplative, evoking a sense of the natural world and the passage of time.

The image depicts a whimsical scene set in a forested area. At the center of the frame is a weathered, gnarled tree stump that has been transformed into a miniature house. The house is constructed from a dark, weathered wood, with a triangular roof and a small, square window on the front. The walls of the house are adorned with small, square windows, and there is a door with a small, round window on the front. The house is surrounded by a variety of greenery, including ferns and other plants, and there is a fallen log to the left of the house. The overall atmosphere of the image is serene and magical, evoking a sense of a hidden, magical dwelling nestled in the heart of nature. There are no texts or discernible human figures in the image. The style of the image is a naturalistic photograph with a focus on the interplay of light and shadow, capturing the intricate details of the tree stump and the miniature house.

The image depicts a tree stump with a carved wooden door embedded in it. The door has vertical slats and a curved arch, suggesting a design reminiscent of a traditional fairy door. The stump is surrounded by a variety of plants and ferns, including some with small white flowers. The ground around the stump is covered with small rocks and a layer of moss, adding to the natural ambiance. The image is taken from a low angle, looking up at the stump, which gives a sense of the tree's height and the size of the carved door. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is a naturalistic photograph, capturing the scene in a realistic manner.

The image is a collage of three separate photographs, each depicting a different scene in a forested area. The central photograph shows a tree stump that has been intricately carved to resemble a fairy house. The fairy house has a pointed roof with a small window and a door, and it is surrounded by a small garden with a few plants and a small tree stump. The fairy house is surrounded by a forest of trees, and the ground is covered with fallen leaves and small rocks.
The second photograph shows a different perspective of the same tree stump, this time from a lower angle. The fairy house is still visible, but the perspective gives a sense of the tree stump's size and the complexity of the carving.
The third photograph is a close-up of the fairy house, showing the intricate details of the carving. The fairy house is made of wood and has a rustic appearance, with a few small plants growing around it. The fairy house is surrounded by a forest of trees, and the ground is covered with fallen leaves and small rocks.

The background of all three photographs is the same, featuring a dense forest of trees with a mix of green and brown foliage. The sky is not visible in the photographs, and the lighting suggests it is either early morning or late afternoon. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is naturalistic, capturing the beauty of the forest and the craftsmanship of the fairy house.

The image is a composite of two separate photographs, each with a distinct title and a description. The left photo shows a forested area with a dense collection of colorful ribbons tied to trees. The ribbons are of various colors, including red, blue, green, and yellow, and they are tied in a way that suggests they are attached to the trees. The trees themselves appear to be covered in moss, and the ground is covered with fallen leaves. The forested area is dense, and the ribbons are spread out, creating a sense of a wild, untamed environment.
The right photo shows a small, wooden structure with a pointed roof, surrounded by moss. The structure appears to be a small, rustic cabin or shed, with a thatched roof. The surrounding moss is thick and green, and there are several ribbons attached to the structure, similar to the ribbons in the first photo. The text on the image indicates that the ribbons are believed to be the remains of fairies, and the structure is a place where fairies may return to. The text also mentions that fairies are believed to be responsible for the ribbons, and that the ribbons are tied to the trees to keep them from falling.
The image is presented in a way that suggests it is a part of a larger narrative or story, possibly related to folklore or mythology. The text provides context and explanation for the ribbons and the structure, suggesting that the ribbons are a form of communication or a way for fairies to return to their home. The overall tone of the image is mysterious and intriguing, inviting the viewer to explore the story behind the ribbons and the structure.

The image is a text excerpt from a document or article, presented in a plain, unadorned font. The text is in English and is divided into paragraphs, each with a distinct heading. The content of the text discusses the concept of the "Fairy Folk" and their connection to the "Fairy Folk's" language, which is often described as spiritual but non-religious. The text also touches on the idea of the "Fairy Folk" being a part of the "Fairy Folk's" culture, and how the "Fairy Folk" are not just individuals but rather a collective entity.
The text is structured in a way that follows a logical flow, starting with a statement about the existence of the "Fairy Folk" and their connection to the "Fairy Folk's" language, followed by a discussion about the difficulty in understanding the "Fairy Folk's" language due to its spiritual nature. The text then moves on to describe the disenchantment of the "Fairy Folk" and the attempt to remedy this by using the "Fairy Folk's" language as a core, which is also a form of technology and transformation. The text concludes with a reflection on the anti-spiritual and anti-religious values of the "Fairy Folk" and the possibility of a more human civilization without a doubt.
The text is written in a way that is conversational and personal, with the author expressing their own thoughts and feelings about the "Fairy Folk" and their connection to the "Fairy Folk's" language. The use of the word "disenchantment" and the mention of the "Fairy Folk's" language as a form of technology and transformation are significant visual elements that help to convey the author's perspective on the "Fairy Folk" and their connection to the "Fairy Folk's" language.

The image shows a laboratory setting with a focus on a glass apparatus. The apparatus has a clear glass tube with a silver-colored metal piece attached to it, which appears to be a piece of equipment used for heating or cooling. The tube is connected to a larger glass vessel with a cork base, which is placed on a wooden surface. The vessel has a clear glass bulb at the bottom, and there is a small amount of amber-colored substance in the bulb, suggesting it might be a liquid or a solid.

In the background, there are various objects that suggest a scientific or laboratory environment. There are glass beakers, a glass jar, and a glass vial, all of which are commonly used in scientific experiments. The objects are arranged on a shelf with a wooden surface, and there is a wall socket visible in the background. The lighting in the room is dim, and the focus is on the apparatus in the foreground. There are no texts or discernible brands visible in the image. The style of the image is a candid photograph with a focus on the scientific equipment, likely taken in a laboratory or a similar setting.

Welcome. The purpose of this general is to show you how to use your own wonderful human imagination to achieve your every desire.

The world and all within it is man’s conditioned consciousness objectified. Consciousness is the cause as well as the substance of the entire world. So it is to consciousness that we must turn if we would discover the secret of creation. Knowledge of the law of consciousness and the method of operating this law will enable you to accomplish all you desire in life.

Your assumptions right now decide how long that will take for you.

The Main Concepts: > Imagination creates Reality
> Assumptions harden into fact > Consciousness is the only Reality
> Feeling is the Secret
> Prayer, Living in the End/In the Wish Fulfilled (remaining Faithful to your Idea)
> You are the Operant Power

> There is no one to change but Self (Self-Concept)
> Thinking Fourth-Dimensionally (Time is an Illusion)

> Can I manifest ___?
Yes! Creation is finished.

> Curious? Do the Ladder Experiment

Thats just gaslighting by the "writers" and "manifestors".

Things can absolutely be done to you. Especially when they want to mark you as someone specific for their narrative, even if you did not necessarily want or know you wanted it in your life.

More laughably so when you actively reject the thing many, many times but the manifestors need your vessel because of the things you are tied to instead of who you are at your core.

Not that they care because they operate in an incredibly superficial way anyway. Disappointing!

I read "It works!" but im too busy (and surrounded) to take out a piece of paper in order to read it, also i keep forgetting to think about the list during the day.

I do have multiple desires but I have liked the idea of putting them down as a 'script' rather than listing out my desires.

The image is a candid photograph of a man in a military-style uniform. He is smiling and making a peace sign with his right hand, which is raised to his forehead. The man has short, dark hair and is wearing a light green, button-up shirt with multiple pockets and a belt. He is also wearing a dark-colored, possibly olive green, military-style jacket with a high collar and epaulettes. The background is a room with a white wall, a window with blinds, and a clock on the wall. The lighting in the room is soft, and the man appears to be in a relaxed pose. There are no visible texts or logos in the image.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a stylized depiction of a character with a green body, yellow hair, and a large, smiling face. The character is holding a red object in its hand, which appears to be a red heart. The character is wearing a white shirt with a red collar and a gold-colored belt. The character's eyes are wide open, and it has a cheerful expression.
In the background, there are two women wearing elaborate costumes. The woman on the left is wearing a gold-colored dress with a red feathered headdress, and the woman on the right is dressed in a red dress with a similar feathered headdress. Both women are smiling and appear to be in a casino setting, as indicated by the presence of slot machines and casino chips in the background.
At the bottom of the image, there is a text that reads "LET THE GOOD TIMES ROLL." The text is in a bold, white font with a playful, cartoonish style. The overall style of the image is vibrant and colorful, with a playful and humorous tone.

I've really gotten into it lately and have seen a lot of small successes. A cheap truck with no major problems pretty cheap, and the start day of my construction job getting pushed out a month suddenly so I could find a camper and rv lot. I wonder how many people don't report their successes and only end up here because they're desperate and are failing. I only pop in to ask for advice and I imagine a lot are like me.

I've been trying to manifest my ex back for the past month and a half though with zero visible success. I got dumped for another guy and haven't broken no contact.

I can normally stay in the feeling and the belief that its already done, but the 3D hasn't really reflected it. I've had major success with other women suddenly though. The fucked up part is that one of them is clearly wife material and idk why my brain really wants my ex. I've revised the situation and it feels so second nature to me having it that I'm finding it hard to remember to try for it. I know things will change eventually and everything works for my benefit. When it works it really works, but I things I have any emotional attachment to it feels like a waste of time

It shows you if your manifesting is working. The inner world is echoed in the outer world. So if the external world is going well, people are nice to you, things are moving up, then that means you what you are doing is working.
There can be times of ups and down. The down periods, the contractions are also useful and good. they make way for the expansion.

So, she was filled with wine. Are we not told in Paul’s letters to Timothy, “Drink no more water, use a little wine for your stomach’s sake and your many infirmities?” Do not constantly absorb the Law and apply only the Law toward the getting of things in this world. From now on, let it become wine, let it become spirit, so it becomes a part of you. So, you drink wine, not the little bottle of wine, although I’m very fond of wine. I love it. I had my full bottle of wine today with some cheese for my lunch, and thoroughly enjoyed a bit of wine and, oh, a section of Edam. Thoroughly enjoyed it, but that’s not the wine spoken of in Scripture. The wine is the transforming of the water into wine. That psychological law is forever.

The front bumper is crushed, and the hood is missing, revealing the engine beneath. The car's windows are shattered, and the windshield wipers are missing. The car's headlights are also missing. The car is parked on a wet surface, indicating recent rain. In the background, there are trees and a building, suggesting the parking lot is located in an urban or suburban area. There are no visible texts or distinctive markings on the car that provide additional context. The image is taken from the perspective of a vehicle that has been involved in the accident, as evidenced by the damage to the car's front end.

This is quite cool.
I was pretty obsessed with vortex math when I was younger.
Although, I realized that all of it is simply conceptual.
There's nothing magical about these patterns, we are just expanding on the concept of 1 with 2, and so on.
Your pattern uses an arbitrary "base" of 9, meaning that after 9, we move onto 10.

The important thing, is odds and evens.
This vortex pattern, happens for the odds, but it won't happen for the evens, meaning, if we carry onto 10 after 8 instead of after 9, we get a different pattern.

You should look into this, if you're interested.
The patterns that the numbers make are still beautiful, and they are representative of shapes.

Each number has a specific shape associated with it. All of the odd numbers form perfect stars, and all of the even numbers are unable to do so.

To those who ask why you can manifest money or an SP but wars and major things can't be manifested off, this is my theory:

The people who run the world and are on top have higher willpower and all of it is directed to specific objectives in more definite manner. Are you familiar with an egregore? Something like that. As such, you'd have to outwill them to change how the world goes

Now, in the personal sphere it's different. You can change your life and outcomes since they barely have any major influence. Let's be honest and realistic, you becoming a millionaire and living in a Caribbean paradise won't change the way they do wars and stuff, you are not a menace and you aren't changing that much. It's like a "as long as you fly low, nothing happens". I mean you can get all the wishes and peace you want since it can adapt to major stuff, just like a bird would find a new tree if they were all destroyed on his forest. You can't prevent the deforestation but you can go on with your life plans

I don't believe you can use LoA to alter the reality and travel through multiple universes and dimensions. There's more intellectual, metaphorical way of interpreting the texts of Neville Goddard. The only people that benefit from the law are coachers and loa gurus, they have lucrative and dishonest intentions.
We certainly have control over our conscious thoughts, but we cannot change the subconscious mechanisms being in a constant loop of denial of feelings and desires because it "ruins" your manifestation and attracts negativity. It's all coaching, how many people have achieved anything using LoA?

I do believe we can improve our individual lives by putting the enough effort to change. Thoughts are the substance of YOUR OWN reality. While you can't manifest gold coins falling from the sky or bizarre things, you can change yourself, your perception of reality and 'manifest' different things. You attract what you project onto the world, this is a basic psychological rule. The law of action and reaction.
Who has managed to customize a "Special Person" and ask them to be your own non-playable slave character, shaping their entire personality profile and motivations just to fit you? It's definitely a deranged idea, you would be manifesting a zombie, a dummy with no individual will and the connection would feel essentially vague, fake, boring.

As we are complex beings, we live in a gradual progression. No one can instantly release or erase 'limiting beliefs'; these are beliefs that have been rooted in the subconscious throughout life. This is shaped by a lifetime of conditioning (education, external influences, your conclusions about reality) and pre-existing frameworks before you even begin to question who you are as person.

The image is a digital artwork featuring a heart with the phrase "Find Me" written on it. The heart is drawn with a dark, textured appearance, giving it a somewhat distressed look. The background is a light, neutral color, which contrasts with the dark heart. The text "Find Me" is written in a cursive font, with the word "Find" in a larger, bold font and "Me" in a smaller, regular font. The artist's signature is visible in the bottom right corner, which reads "B.Stephanie 09". The overall style of the artwork is abstract and expressive, with a focus on the heart and the text.

So, I need some help. I'm having a lot of trouble manifesting in general, partly because I just don't know what I truly want, but also because I so easily lose focus.
So, I'm thinking, can someone here who's good at manifesting manifest that I become good at manifesting? I'm using a tripcode for this post, so that you have something to use as a "hook" for manifesting, which I'll use when I post an update on this. I'll use the same pic as well then. Thanks.

You don't have to consciously know what it would look like. Your subconscious operates on feelings, not on images. Simply feel like you're living your best life, and it will come to pass, in whatever way would actually be best, for you, even if you don't exactly know what specifically that would entail. The natural feeling would be of relief, "isn't it wonderful?"

>Matter of fact convo with trusted person where they discuss how you stopped that years ago
>Being in triggering situation not being triggered e.g. in a bar just with food and soft drinks feeling content and at peace, being horny just doing normal activities.
>Revise - you never were into that. E.g. "I have always been a moderate drinker"
Also self concept: don't think or talk of yourself as an addict.
Ballsy fast way: introspect upon the activity for a while, then decide you're done with it:
>If you've been smoking for years and years, you have thousands of little desires to smoke. The tendency is strong. However, you can say to yourself with will power, "This is ridiculous! I am through with this!" and never again have a desire for a cigarette. That's getting rid of all the thoughts of desire to smoke by willing out the tendency. That's one chunk: smoking. Q: That's one chunk; the whole bit clear back? Lester: Complete. I've seen many people do this on smoking with no problem. They just made that decision and that was it!
Also focus on the positives of the good alternative not the negatives of the activity:
>Only by working on self can you rise to a higher level. But you cannot do it with a negative emotion; it must be a positive one. We are told to “Lift up your eyes unto the hills from whence cometh your help.” Negative thoughts cause downward emotions, while positive thoughts elevate. If you listen to your thoughts, stop their negative flow and change them so that you are hearing what you want to hear, you will feel a positive emotion of relief which is followed by a stillness that brings with it the knowledge that your prayer has been answered.

The person's eyes are narrowed, and the eyebrows are drawn in a downward direction. The person's hair is drawn in a simple, unkempt style.
Above the drawing, there is a text in a casual, informal font that reads: "I deliberately entered a thread full of things that I do not like, and now I am mad. How could this be happening to me?" The text is in a larger font size than the drawing, which is placed above the drawing.
The overall style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the emotions of the person depicted. The drawing is simple and lacks any additional context or background elements.

I think I'm depressed and it feels like I have a constant "I don't deserve anything" subconscious thought , like a computer task running in the background, a pointy uncomfortable object stuck in the back pocket of my mind, so in the end I don't get anything, it becomes a self fulfilling prophecy, a feedback loop and I stay stuck and resentful to myself. At this point I'm not even sure if I want friends or a girlfriend anymore at all, some days I just wanna stop existing, feels like I'm destined to die like this. Are there any ways to get out of this mental hole?

Below this, in a smaller, black font, is the word "WHITE" in a sans-serif font. The central part of the image features a stylized illustration of a white rabbit with a black face and ears, sitting on a red and blue striped background. The rabbit is depicted in a simple, cartoon-like style with a white body and black ears and tail. Above the rabbit, there is a black oval with a red and blue border, containing a stylized depiction of a paintbrush and a palette. The background of the image is white, and there are thin black lines running horizontally across the image. At the bottom, there is a red and blue striped border with the word "RABBIT" in a bold, sans-serif font. The overall style of the image is modern and clean, with a focus on typography and color.

no, you can definitely alter reality
>We certainly have control over our conscious thoughts, but we cannot change the subconscious mechanisms being in a constant loop of denial of feelings and desires

No, you can control your subconscious too, if you know the right techniques >how many people have achieved anything using LoA?
Many people in this thread have posted their results. I use manifesting all the time
>I do believe we can improve our individual lives by putting the enough effort to change.
Thoughts are the substance of YOUR OWN reality. While you can't manifest gold coins falling from the sky or bizarre things, you can change yourself, your perception of reality and 'manifest' different things.
I think there are probably limits too, but you can actually manifest things. And not "manifest" with the scare quotes, but actually manifest it. you make something appear in your life, according to your stated wish.

>So, I'm thinking, can someone here who's good at manifesting manifest that I become good at manifesting?
this is something you're gonna have to figure out yourself
>I'm having a lot of trouble manifesting in general
Start with something you can do. Then do that, over and over again, until it becomes easy
Then do something more difficult. Do that, over and over again, until it becomes easy.
Then continue this process until you can manifest more and more Somewhere along the way, you'll probably run into resistance and need to do some personal development and change yourself, so you stop holding yourself back. You may run into diminishing returns or things you can't do. When you overcome the internal challenges, things will open up again.
So there is a cycle of seeing your results in the outer world, and then focusing on the inner world when your progress slows down, until you start making progress again.
Always up, always forward.

I didn't watch his entire video archive but when he isn't rambling or giving testimonials, it sounds like the 'list' technique he talks about is similar to RHL's It Works except focusing as you write the list and writing a new list daily until at least a week passes before reviewing if it happened. Apparently, this upcoming video is a revamped version of that technique with all the advances he's made.

The image is a split-screen montage of two scenes from a movie or television show. On the left side, there is a young man standing in a foggy environment, looking directly at the camera. He is wearing a gray t-shirt and has short hair. His expression is serious, and he is looking at the camera with a slight frown.
On the right side, there is a character who appears to be an older man with long white hair, wearing a long white robe. He is standing in the same foggy environment, looking off to the side with a contemplative expression.
Overlaying the image is a text that reads, "Is this all real? Or is it just happening inside my head?" The text is in a script font and is white with a black outline. The text is positioned above and below the two images, creating a visual divide between the two scenes.
The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a humorous meme, as it combines two contrasting scenes from the same film or show, with a humorous twist. The use of the word "is" in the text suggests a rhetorical question, which is a common element in meme-style content.

yes, it is interesting isn't it?
You can do it by focusing on the good emotions, or you can just do it "flat" with no emotions at all
It's very interesting
I think the best way is to "just do it", as if it's easy and the outcome is expected
The best way to do this is practice, where you can manifested something many times before so it becomes routine. So you have a good reason to believe it will work, because it already has worked many times before

The image is a screenshot of a text message conversation on a messaging app. The conversation is between two individuals, and it appears to be a discussion about writing exercises and the process of manifesting. The conversation is marked as a "Worka" by the sender, indicating that it is a work-related conversation.

The sender of the message is asking the recipient how the "Worka" is working. The recipient responds by mentioning that the "Worka" is working well and that the writer is writing down 10 unique statements about things they want to manifest. The sender then asks the recipient to provide a list of the statements, and the recipient agrees to do so. The sender also mentions that the writer should write down the statements in a journal or a cup of coffee, and that the writer should not overthink or add unnecessary details while writing. The sender also suggests that the writer should document the details of the statements, which is a key point mentioned in the conversation.

The conversation also includes a key point that states, "No. The reading. Once written down, the statements should not be reviewed until the designed reflection period. This is to encourage detachment from the outcome."

The conversation ends with the sender asking the recipient to show less and to focus on the method of manifesting, which is a key point mentioned in the conversation.

The image is a screenshot of a text message conversation, and it is a screenshot of a text message conversation, not a photograph or a video. The text is in English, and the conversation is between two individuals, with the sender asking the recipient how the "Worka" is working and providing instructions for the writer.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a group of characters in a futuristic setting. At the center, a man with dark hair and a white shirt is seated on a chair, with a woman with red hair and a white shirt leaning on his shoulder. To the left, a robot with blue skin and orange hair is sitting on the floor, looking up at the man. To the right, a woman with a red dress and a white shirt is holding a drink, and a penguin with a red head and a black body is standing on its hind legs. The background is dark with a geometric pattern, and there are various other characters in the background, including a man in a black suit and a woman in a red dress. The style of the image is reminiscent of anime or manga, with a focus on character interaction and a stylized, futuristic aesthetic. There is a watermark on the image that reads "magenta sunrise" and "EOS".

So what causes a manifestation to fail? Or is it always going to happen just much later. I think mental diet can completely cancel a manifestation if one is not conscious of their thoughts.

The image is a still from a movie or television show, featuring a character in the foreground. The character is wearing a dark hooded cloak and a dark, hooded robe, with a stern expression on their face. The text overlay on the image reads, "I guide others to a treasure I cannot possess." The background shows a dark, stormy sky with a mountain range and a few other characters, suggesting a setting that is possibly a desolate or remote location. The overall mood of the image is somber and dramatic.

i don't think neville is bullshit, but i think he is giving bad advice. there is a dimension outside of time where there are no limits, you can travel back and forth in time, you can access the strands of fate and modify your life and world however you wish and there are tools to reach this place. when Neville says only the power within you is required is akin to saying only your hands are required to strike a nail into a board, yes you could technically do it by hand but you would be foolish to do so. a man with a hammer will have struck a 100 nails by the time you are done beating the one with your fist, a man with a nail gun a 1000. i am a blind man trying to strike that nail into a board with my fist, i must change my perspective and look for these tools instead for those who look shall find in the end.

>So what causes a manifestation to fail?
I'm not sure if there is a complete theory of what makes manifests succeed or fail, so it's hard to answer that question
It does come down to "belief", but that's sort of a weasel word that means 10 different things to 10 different people
Ultimately, you need to have the "oomph" to make things happen
Some people have more power than others. Why? Does that all boil down to belief too? maybe. I think there's a correlation there at least. The people who are most powerful magically all have a similar personality type. They are really confident, even to a delusional level of self confidence, but to some level that confidence is deserved Everyone I know who is really good at magic is at least a little crazy. They believe in themselves anyway
Then there are limiting beliefs, which hold you back. What if you manifest "I don't deserve it" or "this will never work" or "if it did happen, I'd ruin it somehow", well that will fuck it up won't it?
then there are people manifest things, and then don't take the opportunity. "I will have a girlfriend". Then a cute girl shows up in your life, and you think "fuck that bitch, all women are gold diggers and whores"... yeah okay, so then you won't get a gf if you refuse to talk to women even when the cute girl you manifested shows up.

Having a gf sort of implies that you at least talk to her, right?
The counter argument to that is, "I don't need any action to get what I want, a stranger will just hand me 1 million dollars out of nowhere". And okay. Sitting there in your room, doing nothing in the physical world, and just manifesting something "out of nowhere".
And yeah that is a thing, but man it has a really bad track record. Most people who try that don't succeed.
Is that because of belief too? Is it because of limiting beliefs? Perhaps What I do know is that if you give magic a path of least resistance to flow, it makes it a lot easier. So that helps yes, manifesting is really good at opening doors to new possibilities

If you just sit there and go "No, it's not easy enough. I want it to be delivered to me, with no work" then like, yeah, I get it. You want the magic to just MAKE it happen. It's already manifested and you just get it for free. Sure
But it's also easier if you take that opportunity and walk through the door provided.

No, not really. It's just simple logic

Let's say I manifest "I have a cute gf"
Then a couple days later, I run into a cute girl. Our paths collide in some weird strange way
I refuse to talk to her, I then have negative thoughts about "all women are gold diggers and whores" and "She'd never like me anyway" and "I would just ruin it, even if I talk to her"
I walk away, no conversation happens, no date happens, and thus she does not become my gf

If you manifest "I have a cute gf" and the cute girl shows up in your life, then TALK TO HER. How the fuck is she going to become your gf if you never speak to her? Are you supposed to communicate purely in semaphore and sign language?
Some people see the opportunity show up, then they do nothing to seize it.
That means you don't really want the opportunity. You still have limiting beliefs, you don't believe in yourself, or you don't know what you want. You want it, but also you reject it.

Do magic in real time, you'll see your desires immediately turn into reality. That can't be chalked up to a coincidence
Or make a wish that's extremely specific, and wait for it to happen. What are the odds that magic isn't real and it's "all in your head bro"? very small
If you still don't believe, then keep manifesting incredibly specific things. Watch as they come in, exactly according to your script or what you visualized. What are the odds that these incredibly specific things are just "random chance" and not coming from you manifesting them? very low Keep doing this until you realize it's not a coincidence it's not even one thing specifically it's just that what i really want never comes or comes too late or not exactly as i wanted.

example: cute girl i used to like at work we work on different shifts so i desired to be with her a whole day and get to know her better it happened but also her annoying friend was there and she hates me so the desire was not what i expected it to be.
Next: desire a new place cause it was a bit cramped in my house i visualized myself on a new house and chilling 5 months go by and my roommate gets a new apartment. so no house for me Got disheartened a bit so i tried easier shit like a hamburger a good one tasty and big. and i get a cheap burger that tasted bad. i been also trying to manifest an easy and well paid job since 7 months ago and no luck.
If it was easy as many say they would just manifest 500 coffees a day and sell them for profit or the usual i manifested 1 dollar then just manifest it many times.
It works i believe in it but it's also very confusing mayne that's why people draw sigils or light candles because they have no idea how to trigger the magic so you are getting results, just shitty ones

That's a lot better than no results at all
So you just need practice, and figure out how to manifest something with no monkey paw type shit
Then focus on that feeling, how you did it, what techniques you did, and then replicate that in other areas in your life.
You will probably realize that these subpar results are coming from resistance (or negative thoughts) within you. so you'll need to do shadow work to figure out why.
Why are you manifesting things with a catch? how come when you try to make something happen, it gets messed up in some way?
There should be SOME kind of thing you can manifest, which just works exactly as intended. If not, then you just need to be more creative. you should definitely be able to find something that works as intended.

>Not him but if I continue with, "SP is obsessed with me" then "I always get everything I want" would this help my self concept and boost the manifestation yes it would but you should also practice manifesting women in general you don't need to talk to them, or date them or anything just practice getting women to smile at you and flirt with you. You can practice this every day, whenever you want. It's just a broad overall skill you can do at any time
And also remember to get men to like you and respect you too. Just in general learn the skill of manifesting "people like me"

>No, I can manifest anything because that is how manifestation works.
You're full of shit, I'm sorry
You can manifest shooting lightning out your hands and flying around in the sky without an airplane? turning into a bird?
No? Then you're full of shit.
Theoretically you can "manifest anything". But in reality, no you can't do that
And what do you do, when you run into something you cannot manifest? "Just believe harder bro" doesn't work and you know it.

So you need other techniques

>>40604604
>>"just believe harder bro" doesn't work for you >Actually, it does.
>You're so invested in your story of suffering and grinding that you can let it go to get easy manifestations.
No, I get easy manifestations all the time, and you're full of shit, as I explained above.
If your manifests are always easy and you just get whatever you want with minimal effort, then you are just not aiming high enough.
You're doing stuff that's so easy and routine that it's beneath you
You should be more audacious, and actually try to do something you haven't done before. Try and set some goal for something you don't know you can do. Then try it.
If you succeed 100% of the time, you're either a loser who just doesn't try anything difficult and then pretends to be some wise sage with god like powers who can do anything easily, or you're a delusional larper who just conveniently forgets any losses or upsets along the way.

you can definitely make people do things, and getting them to say specific words or do specific things is not all that hard It's easier when it's along the lines of that person's personality type to start with. Or if you just manifest it generally, so that anyone could say that phrase or word and it would count as a success.
I view this as giving intrusive thoughts to people. If you're aiming it at a certain individual. Or, if you just manifest this word appearing to you from anywhere, you're making a synchronicity happen.

To be clear, whenever someone says "I succeed 100% of the time, and everything I do is easy" I ignore them. These people don't grow, and they don't improve.
No one has that experience. Everyone has things they can't do even when they try real hard and "just try harder bro".
What you do when you run into that struggle, run into things you can't manifest or can't manifest easily, and how you learn and grow and get out of that rut to get to even higher levels, THAT is the kind of advice which is useful.

When you are doing something difficult enough that you don't really know if it will work or not, that it's a mystery and an adventure, when you're exploring the unknown and the limits of your abilities, THAT is when you learn the most. And people who claim they never experience difficulty just aren't in that mode.
So I simply don't trust people who say they never fail. They either don't try hard enough (and then pretend they can manifest anything effortlessly, even though they are sandbagging), or just larp. Pure larp. "Oh I never fail, everything I do happens easily, and I can do anything"
Anything? Really? Anything? Like shooting lasers out of your eyes and making gold bars appear out of thin air? No? You can't do that? Then you're full of shit.

Now if there's someone who can actually shoot laser beams of their eyes and make gold bars appear out of thin air, I'd be very interested to learn what they do.

Alternatively, this is all part of the path. There’s undoubtedly hundreds of thousands of cases where just when someone finds that new person and is ready to move forward, the old person comes back.

If you’re asking “how to manifest women in general” I would say you’re going into this with the wrong mindset. Your subconscious will likely be impressed by what appears to me to be your desperation. Recalibrate, Anon.

My sole focus in this exercise was to test SP manifestations, by intending for a specific person to tale a specific action that's unlikely, but not implausible for them. It's possible the person didn't know the word, but it's not too rare, and if Neville wasn't just lying to sell books and lecture seats, the person would learn the word and tweet it.

The image is a meme featuring a cat with a surprised expression. The cat has a white face with black stripes and is looking directly at the viewer. Above the cat's head, there is a text in black font that reads "your brain tricks you into thinking." The text is centered and appears to be a play on words, suggesting that the cat's actions are a result of the human brain's cognitive processes. The background of the image is plain white, which contrasts with the cat and the text, making them stand out. The overall style of the image is humorous and uses a meme-like format to convey a message.

(And don't get me started how you waste manifestation on moving pixels in a fake/digital reality, instead of rearranging the real world around you by keeping your attention in the "real" world around you) Furthermore, there is a very good chance you are using media to simply cope our stimulate, or distract yourself. Which, alone speaks volumes about the state of your mind. Anyway, the fact that you are here is a sign that you at leat recognize that something is not right. Which is a good start.

your emotional and mental state is a part of it, but you can also make things happen using specific intentions. The way you believe about yourself or your life also plays a part, and these beliefs can be empowering and open up new possibilities and new adventures and overall positive, or limiting and negative or dark.
How you believe about yourself or your life can be limiting, and limiting beliefs can manifest as bad things or limits in the real world (or stop your attempts to manifest good things, or new things).

>*you alter your state -> your consciousness changes -> "reality" changes your actions and choices also change your thoughts, feelings, emotions and perspectives
So they feed into each other. Good action does lead to a good mind, and good mind ultimately leads to good outcomes manifesting
But I don't think we should ignore the outer reality. It is a gift. It shows us if our manifesting attempts are working
If your life sucks, it's because what you are doing isn't working. You either have bad thoughts, a bad world view, bad philosophy, or bad religion. If you clean up what's in the inner world, then it will also reflect in the outer world and manifest.
So if you think you're "doing well", but bad things keep manifesting, then clearly there is something you missed. That outer world is a great thermometer, to help you see if you really are making progress and which techniques are actually working.

Not to be the "just stop resisting bro" kind of guy, but if you have to do a million affirmations you're probably running into resistance. And if you did one half assed visualization with no real effort or "trying hard", and it worked, then that probably means you had little resistance and that effortless result is what everyone wants. You just spend 5 seconds manifesting something, and it arrives easily and with no effort
So how come you have to struggle with some things, but others are easy and seem effortless, and why can't it always just be that effortless hardly trying sort of thing?
because you're getting in your own way somehow
And figuring out why, and going with the flow, getting into that wavelength of the universe will be helpful. Letting go of old pains, and old worries, emotional healing, and moving forward. that is what helps you get into the zone, the flow state, where anything is possible and half assed thoughts can manifest easily

I've said it before and I'll say it again: LoA works but there are asterisks...
If you think you can manifest yourself to be President of world and the only thing holding you back is "self doubt" you NEVER going to succeed. Here are some conditions you need to understand:
>Reality is more like Indras-net then whatever solipsism you believe.
You are part of the net & you are the whole net looking back on itself at the same time. What this means is whatever you're manifesting must be as un-invasive to the whole as possible (the more it stands out the less likely it is to happen, for example, go try and manifest the ability to fly like superman and see how nothing happens.
>You can manifest shit even if you have doubts.
I've manifested stuff while thinking/feeling it wouldn't happen. Clarity, determination and exactness-in-small-details seems to be much more important then doubt. It is better to be able to hold a perfect visual clearly once a day for 60 seconds then to not feel doubt.
>Manifest things WITHIN the limitations of your current karma.
KNOW YOURSELF. For example, if you're poor don't try to manifest a lambo, instead incrementally manifest small things over long periods that will get you to a lambo. The point is to change you karmic condition. While you create your own reality, you also have to resolve EVERYTHING you set in motion in the past, and, well, many of those things will hold you back until resolved. It's like parking next to a traintrack and wonder why you can't hear the radio over the train horns.
>Ceremonial Magick helps, meditation trances REALLY help

I agree. Making improvements over time, meaningful, visible, and noticeable improvements is more important than trying for "the big one" over and over and then getting frustrated when it doesn't come
Try to make improvements every month. Advancements, in making it faster, easier, bigger, or new and different things. What new thing did you figure out this month, that you couldn't do before, or what thing did you improve compared to last month?
Measurable improvements in your results should be the guideline
Some people will say this is not audacious enough, or it's setting a small standard. Not if you go up to the limit of your abilities. Keep aiming higher and higher, until you find something you can't do. Then figure out a way to do that, and improve your max over time.
Results are the best thermometer for whatever internal system you believe in. Are your results improving? great, then what you are doing inside your mind/heart is working. Are your results getting worse? Is your life getting worse? Then you have missed something and you need to figure out what you're doing wrong, or what you're not doing right.
Results are the best guide. Results results results what do you mean? I understand it perfectly

If your life is getting worse, then your manifesting sucks. Clearly you're doing something wrong
If your life is getting better, then your manifesting is working Your real life results, how people treat you, how "lucky" you are (luck is just a skill), these are all good metrics to see if your manifesting is actually working or not.
If you are unlucky, people hate you, you have no results, and your life is getting worse, then you are doing something wrong. end of story Results, results, results. That is the most important thing.

You are not relaxing. You are imprinting your consciousness with detrimental ideas that eventually manifest the very things you currently suffer from. It is a feedback loop. Also, the fact that you admit that you abuse media to cope/distract/stimulate yourself shows that you are in disharmony and try to escape it (like an addict). Your mental/emotional disharmony breeds disharmony. Creation is a constant process based on your state. It is not limited to active visualization. Meditation is not sitting on your ass for minutes or hours. It is an every-moment practice where you regulate/chnage your habitaul thinking, thus your state, thus your consciousness, thus your reality. ALL thought is prayer!

Oh nothing wrong with that... Except you communicate to your subconcius and reinforce your own powerty in all aspecs of your life the very moment you hit "start":

> I watch action -> I need this because my life is boring
> You watch comedy -> I need this because I have no joy in my life
> I watch fantasy -> I need this, because I have no magic and wonder in my life
> I watch porn -> I need sexual stimulation and release because I do not get it otherwise
> I play vidya > I need this because i have no succes in life

These are just rough examples and generalizations, as there are numerous genres to media that can reinforce different poverty states. Your decision to partake in the activity is your own admittance to poverty. Even worse, in the relaxed/numbed state following the admittance of poverty, your conscious filter (the gate keeper of your mind) is pretty much disabled, making things even worse.

I'm pretty sure I understand my subconscious far better than you do but you are right that you need to be somewhat careful about your mental diet
But you don't need to be paranoid. Not every bad thing you see will then go into a feedback loop of causing a bad thought then manifesting into another bad thing. It doesn't work that way
>Also, the fact that you admit that you abuse media to cope/distract/stimulate yourself shows that you are in disharmony and try to escape it
I never said "abuse". That's your word. as far as distract, or stimulate, yes. And what's wrong with that? It just means I'm honest. And that sounds like harmony to me.
And what's wrong with having fun? what's wrong with being entertained you seem pretty paranoid, and you want other people to also be paranoid. I reject that. You can go be paranoid on your own > Creation is a constant process based on your state. It is not limited to active visualization.
Correct, but not every single thought you have manifests. And not every single thing you see will turn into a feedback loop which then creates a thought which then manifests another thing.
>Meditation is not sitting on your ass for minutes or hours. It is an every-moment practice where you regulate/chnage your habitaul thinking, thus your state, thus your consciousness, thus your reality.
No. You don't need to be disciplined all the time, and control your thoughts to have the "proper" thoughts all the time. Relaxing is good. having fun is good.
Letting things happen is also good, and going with the flow is also good you're talking about rigid ascetism, and that is also an escape

But it's an escape where you get to pretend you're not addicted, or not running away from something. And apparently you think you need to play this "game" at all times.

Is mental diet imporant? Sure. but it's not the only thing that matters, and it's not all important either. People should be aware of their mental diet, but not be paranoid about it
>Oh no, I saw a bad thing, that will make ANOTHER bad thing happen, because I had bad thoughts... OH NO I'm having anxiety about my bad thoughts, surely that will manifest even worse thoughts and thus even worse things!!! I'm DOOMED!

No bro, you're not doomed. Just relax. Mental diet is good, but take all things in moderation. There is such a thing as balance.
Obsessing over the cure, just means you're obsessing over the disease.
You don't need to worry about being saved. You're already saved. It's all going to be okay.
Or not I guess. But being paranoid about negativity... sounds to me like exactly the kind of thing you're warning about. Sounds to me like you're manifesting bad stuff by having bad thoughts my dude. Terrible mental diet

And yes, obsessing like you are about mental diet will manifest shit into your life. Giving into paranoia is not good for you. So ironically enough, in order to improve your mental diet, you should stop have such paranoid thoughts about mental diet.

>What I am talkimg about is awareness and recognition of the mechanics of creation.
Yes, and you lack awareness of which thoughts of yours lead to manifestation. It's not all of them. Because of this, you have become paranoid and believe ALL your thoughts lead to manifestation, so you avoid all negative thoughts.
This is paranoia.
>I am not going to argue with you, because I know where you are coming from. Been there, done that.
Um okay? If that works for you, then great. But not everyone needs to be so careful about mental diet. If you do, that's because YOU have a problem.
And being so careful about mental diet, that you can never have negative thoughts.... I mean, clearly you have some sort of issue my friend.
And I don't think that's healthy. I don't think that's balance, or harmony. That's right rigid control, and giving into fear.

>Oh no what if I see something bad on the news... what if, what if, what if????
For one thing, grow up you pussy. For another thing, not every negative thought you have manifests a negative thing.
And what if you manifest a good thing into existence? Why not watch the news, to see your good work, and see the good you accomplished by manifesting a good thing into the world
It's not all bad. I feel like you're drinking the koolaid and giving into extremism. I do not agree with rigid asceticism. It's one way of doing things, and it works to some extent, but it's a dead end.

Relax, give up, stop controlling shit. Stop forcing things. Stop being paranoid
Just be chill, tune into the wavelength of the universe, and trust that all will be well. Be at peace, and exhale love. When you inhale, you inhale the love the universe breathes back into you
This is some hippie dippie bull shit right here, but it works
This kind of general manifestation will create an "aura" around your entire life, and just make everything chill and happy. And that's a good place to manifest things from, for more specific goals. But manifesting a general cloud of good vibes and relaxation is also nice.
Remember, the way other people treat you is a mirror for your soul. So if you can manifest everyone being nice and chill to you, then that means you have good thoughts and a good mental diet Results teach you everything you need to know about yourself.
If everything's good, and people are nice to you, then you don't need to worry about mental diet. you're totally fine. Just look at your results
But if you get into accidents, you're "unlucky" (remember, luck is a skill), people are rude or annoying to you, and your life is getting worse not better, then yeah, maybe you should think about mental diet and clear up the negative thoughts you're having

But there is NO need to be paranoid. Just look at your results. If you have a good life, then your mental diet is good. No need to worry about it.

another phrase that I'm reminded of
"It's not about feeling better, it's about being better at feeling"
Be in tune with your mind. Let the thoughts come. Be in tune with your body, and listen to what it's telling you
Let whatever happens, happen. go with the flow, and be open
This will remove 90% of all subconscious negative manifestations. Because most of that is your subconscious trying to tell you something (one of your worries) and you not listening, and it escalating until you are finally forced to listen. This is what causes people to be mean to you, or people to drive like assholes, "accidents" and "bad luck" (luck is a skill you can get better at).

Your mind is a powerful thing. Listen to it, be in tune with it, and get better at feeling it. And then it won't go crazy and manifest some shit just to get your attention because you were forcing it down.
again, "feeling better" or "better at feeling". The "getting better at feeling" will go a long way to "feeling better". And then you won't have all these worries and anxieties and shit. Then there's nothing to control. So you can relax.

The image is a digital composite of two sports scenes. In the foreground, there is a bicycle with a tag attached to it that reads "propria di Chellini." The bicycle is positioned on a grassy field, and the tag is attached to the handlebars. The tag has a white background with black text.
In the background, there is a soccer field with players in blue uniforms. One player, wearing a blue jersey with the number 23, is in motion, running towards the bicycle. Another player, wearing a white jersey, is in a defensive stance, with his arms outstretched, possibly trying to intercept the bicycle.
The style of the image is humorous, combining elements of both sports to create a playful and exaggerated scene. The text on the bicycle tag is a play on words, suggesting that the bicycle is being used as a prop for a soccer match, with the tag reading "propria di Chellini" which is a play on the Italian word for "owned by Chellini."

> control always comes from a fear mindset
This is not fear, it is creative discipline. Not passivity or withdrawal, but selective attention. Subconscious creation depends on filtering what enters. You focus on the word “thought,” so lets shift: your ideas and emotions shape your life. Feeding your mind mass media (mostly lack, anxiety, and division) is planting seeds you will later harvest. Even pressing “play” is an act of lack, begging for breadcrumbs, signaling that you need something external, that you live in scarcity.

Your logic amounts to:
> Fearing fear creates more fear - so don’t be too careful, just relax and let everything in.
This is the same trap as "tolerate everything", which quickly becomes tolerating yourself out of existence. It is spiritual gaslighting, disguised as “balance”.

You are not being balanced - you are being passive. You are not transcending fear, you are surrendering your creative authority. Conscious creation is a discipline rooted in deciding what enters your awareness and, by extension, what shapes your reality.

>You are not transcending fear, you are surrendering your creative authority.
...No. Like I have said many times (which you have studiously ignored because you don't know what you're talking about), not every thought you have manifests into reality.
You don't need to control your thoughts at all times, yes you actually said "at all times".
You don't need to worry about every single thing you witness
And if you actually have that problem, then that's a YOU problem. That's a skill issue on your part. and not everyone needs to be so diligent and disciplined. If that works for you, great, but there are other people who are far less diligent and get better results than you.
This level of discipline is simply not necessary
I get you've built up some kind of twisted religion of always controlling you thoughts, as well as operating from a position of fear and trying to spread that fear to others, but you don't know what you're talking about.
Not every negative thought manifests into something negative. And if you have that problem, that's a YOU problem.

Or you could just manifest things, without waiting for shit to enter your awareness and then hoping it boomerangs into manifestation later.
You do know things can manifest primarily, right? Not every single thing that you witness turns into a thought that manifests later as an echo. Where did that thing you witnessed come from, in the first place? It came from you.
So instead of worrying about the things you witness in the outer world, you can just make things happen by manifesting

Like do you ever actually you know... manifest things? You know you can do that right? You don't need to obsess over mental diet. You can just make things happen with the power of your mind. They can just happen, directly, from your mind.
You don't need to wait for a thing to happen, then become a thought in your head, then manifest indirectly from that thought and boomerang back into reality.
I feel like you're obsessed with these secondary manifests. Where did those things you witness come from in the first place? They came from you. Maybe you should focus on that. And then, when you fix what's inside you, you won't see scary stuff on the news any more, dip shit

>Not every negative thought manifests in a negative thing. You don't need to worry about every little thing. That is paranoia

Here you go bud. Your entire paranoid practice depends on that one thing, and you're wrong about it. Now let's see your counter argument
I wonder if you have anything that could support such a culture of fear, paranoia, and control, but I really doubt it. The fact you feel the need to control your thoughts and mental diet (at all times, this faggot actually said that, he has to control his thoughts "at all times") means you have a problem

Other people don't do that, and they get better results than you. That tells me you're wrong.

witness turns into a thought that manifests later as an echo. Where did that thing you witnessed come from, in the first place? It came from you.
continuing on this line of thought, I feel like this is something people miss False gurus will say "the reason why something bad happened, is because you resisted it! stop resisting, and bad things will stop happening" and that's just nonsense.
How did the bad thing happen in the first place? You couldn't have resisted it, to start with, so how it the cycle get started? It had to happen in the first place, somehow, because you manifested it
And yes, it's true, when you resist something you feed it energy. When you have anxious thoughts about something and freak out and worry and dwell on it, you make it worse on some level
But why does it manifest in the first place? Even when you're not worrying about it at all, having a great day, and then boom, some bad thing happens?
Because it manifested primarily. Things can happen that just come from you. Not everything is caused by you reacting to the world, and then that reaction thought boomeranging and then manifesting from a feed back loop
Yes, feedback loops exist. Yes, you should stop worrying or dwelling on negative things that bounce into your awareness. Yes, mental diet is important.
But WHY are there bad things appearing before you? Because you manifested it. So you should figure out why that happened, and address it. And then manifest good things instead.
Ignoring it is stupid. That's what this extreme asceticism guy is prescribing. Bad things show up for a reason (it's coming from you). you need to figure out why, and make them happen less in the future.

In the end, physical reality is a gift because it shows us if our manifesting is working or not. See bad things? you must have bad thoughts. Whenever something bad or annoying happens to me these days, I try to figure it out.

mind to share more?

I did a little experiment yesterday, which is also my first attempt at manifestation.

I have two friends on instagram who usually post a lot on stories on ig. Let's call them accountA and accountB. Well they both stopped posting stories for about 1 week now, and it came to my attention.

Started manifesting that account A would post a story, did it for about 10 or 20 minutes, repeating/feeling that it would happen, acting in my mind like it already happened etc.

Went on ig and actually accountB posted a story, just some minutes before I checked. Nothing from accountA.

Kept manifesting for a story from accountA too, but nothing.

I read stories on threads like this one about people managing to manifest something but getting it slightly wrong, I think this is the case.

It was a very specific non-alcoholic drink. I specifically said I get offered a drink of that kind for free.
So I go out to eat with my work friends yesterday, and we decide to go to a new place, friend A suggested this out of the blue.
After getting there, friend B, casually says he doesn't want to eat anything today(first time it happened), he looks a lot at the menu back and forth and just says he's going to get that specific drink. Soon after, he asks if he wants me to try it as well and offers me to try the drink.
I mean it is a ungodly coincidence. And we usually go to a different place, which doesn't really have any sort of drink.
Also another thing is I had no say in where we were going yesterday, Friend A just suggested, let's just go there and we went. And I actually didn't know they hosted that drink there. I just found that out today, when friend B ordered it.
I'm still not 100% convinced but it's really a fucking insane coincidence that it just happens after 2 days I say that I want that specific sort of drink.

I wrote it and just felt on the feeling that the desire is fulfilled like the feeling I just drank a free drink. Did somewhat like SATS as well.

And while writing it, I wrote it like it already happened and It's part of a thought right after the feeling of fulfillment like "I just drank a free drink with my friend." or something like that.
It wasn't more than 15 minutes. And the very next day I had some thoughts about the desire at a random time, at that time I just let it go like It will happen or It's done.
That's really it. I have also written other things with it as well. Like 4-5 other points. Let's see what goes over the next week.
I'd say be specific like the exact thing. Like I had the drink spelled out literally. I just drank a free drink_name with my friend.
If I get like 2-3 things from that list in the next 2-3 weeks, this shit's cracked dude. Holy fuck.

Yes with sex. I have only successfully manifested once (like a true SATS that came tru a few days after)
I hooked up with a girl from the club and read neville goddard a day or two after. She lived 2 hours away and I was set to move in about a week and a half. I do SATS in a chair, almost asleep, drooling, imagining her laughing in my bed with my arm around her. Did about ~20 min. This was maybe monday. She barely texts me Mon, tues, wed, thurs, and friday she says shes coming down to my city again. She comes, but things were weird. We hooked up, and I nutted fast as shit (unusually fast. to be fair she was really hot). And she left like 20 mins after we fucked on some excuse and I never heard from her again.
I know that it sounds cringe or you are picturing a redditcel looking tard, but I am a good looking guy and no girl has ever done something like this to me. I wonder if this manifestation stuff is like the monkeys paw story, you get what you want, but at an unforseen cost. My thought is that all shortcuts in life come with consequence, and manifesting must be the same. I regret using it for sex.
But yes, this stuff is real and doable. Think what you want about how maybe its a coinincidence, and she just wanted to come down, but it was highly unlikely that these things would happen.

Making everyone happy forever? That sounds pretty good to me. And it would benefit me and everyone I care about, since it would be affecting everyone
I've wished for it before. It has never happened, unfortunately
I chalk it up to other people existing, and them manifesting their own life (meaning they are also manifesting bad things accidentally, like everyone does). So your wish doesn't over ride their wish.

I need help

I already know that consciousness is matter and matter is energy including everything that is. Everything is energy harassed by conscious intent and everything in my environment and my experience is all conscious energy on some frequency or another, there's no separation, it's all vibration frequency even solid matter. I understand it all.

I need help understanding why there's such a long delay especially on earth. It's said that because we live in a 3D suppressed world that is the reason why it takes much longer to manifest change VS 5D existence which we already should be in as earth is naturally a 5D density planet, but dimensions don't really exist, they just are and its a frequency scale.

Anyways

I basically put out there 6 months ago and manifested my intent every night before I went to bed. All the pieces went into motion after a couple weeks that I wanted a certain event to happen which would change my life.

Basically I decided I was going to move to a new place, with a lot of valuable things that I wanted(like a new motorcycle) and guess what 6 months later here I am living free with all the things I wanted with a $10,000 brand new motorcycle that I got.

So my question is why did it take exactly 6 months and 20 days, why not 3 months, 2 months, 1 month, what is the reasoning for the time discrepancy?

Is it just because I felt or subconsciously wanted it to be longer or it wouldn't be "real" in my conscious creation?

This is useful information because there's things I am manifesting right now, for example a kilo gold bar.

Theoretically there should be zero reason why it can't be instant or within a week, as I am one with source and there should be no limitation on my mind.

and to add I still feel 100% convicted that I am from source of the eternal, that I am in my own reality, there is no limitation on what I want to manifest.

Is it something with earth or our density that prevents us from manifesting objects instantly with our minds, which is completely possible. Theres some reason why it doesn't happen, at least materializing physical things.

The text is written in English and is formatted in a standard paragraph style. The document appears to be a part of a larger text, as indicated by the presence of other paragraphs and sections that are not fully visible in the image.
The text is divided into two main sections. The first section, titled "Serapis (III)," begins with a statement that is a direct quote from the author, suggesting that the content is a direct quote from the author's work. The second section, titled "Serapis (IV)," begins with a question that is a direct quote from the author, indicating that the content is a direct quote from the author's work.
The text discusses the concept of the 3D matrix and its implications for the soul, as well as the Law of Attraction and its application to the soul. It also touches on the concept of the soul's training experience and the need for the soul to be able to control what they want. The text also mentions the need for the soul to go through a learning process and the importance of focusing on the positive aspects of life.
The text is written in a conversational tone, with the author using phrases like "I see," "I feel," and "I will send you things to test you." The text is structured in a way that suggests it is a part of a larger narrative or discussion, with the author providing information and asking questions to engage the reader.

good question. I had to think about it for a while the answer I settled on is "How much consistency have you built up, getting manifests exactly according to the timing you wished for?"
I imagine it's a skill, just like with everything else in manifesting, and you can get better at it over time.
So do you have a lot of practice and good results with getting manifests according to the timing you set up? If not, then practice that Start with little things, and get exact timing.
Try to get it on the right day, then at the right time of day (morning, noon, or evening), then the exact time on the exact day.
Set up coincidences requiring exact timing, which is sort of similar, but not the same thing. that should be related
And set up things retro-actively, which could only happen if the events unfolded BEFORE you even wanted to manifest them
And also learn instant manifesting, where you have the thought and it instantly manifests. That one also ties into the last one (retroactive) because of a lot of shit can really only happen instantly if the "setup" happened retroactively
If you learn all these skills, especially instant manifesting, then you should be able to get whatever timing you want. or at least better timing
>Theoretically there should be zero reason why it can't be instant or within a week, as I am one with source and there should be no limitation on my mind.
so this kind of thing will be possible, or "more" possible well things can manifest instantly, but I think what you're talking about is, why can't make objects appear out of thin air And yeah. That's a thing

You can, however, manifest that oh, look there, there it is and you missed it. Or right as you manifest the thing, someone turns the corner "out of vision" and boom they have the thing you want.
Or it was under like a piece of cloth or some shit.
Or you look the other way, and boom there it is
But yes, for some weird reason it can't happen as you are looking at it.
You can influence people's behavior as you are looking at them.
But making physical objects appear can't just appear out of thin air while you're looking at it.
I have no idea why. Maybe that is "more believable"? Like just teleporting gold bars out of nothing is "too much" or something?
A lot of manifesting works off coincidences. That's basic I know but maybe it really is that simple. There has to be a coincidence involved somehow, if there are physical objects involved

With people's minds, or their reactions, you can do it instantly, in real time, while you are directly looking at them. So there's no restriction there. Because that's purely mental, not physical? Hard to say. It's definitely not a coincidence so maybe physical objects have to have coincidences. So fucking weird.

by the way when you try to manifest sex visualize or imagine a scene after the act don't focus on the act itself which was my initial mistake i tried using SATS visualizing a sex scene with a beautiful woman for a week it didn't work now it's been months since that and it hit me so o tried SATS with a scene after the act that implies the act is done did it for 1 day and felt like it is done so it will work

Thanks for the response, I take everything my conscious eyes sees as my own creation including "others" which might as well just be myself talking because its all one source, one creation, one mass of energy.

Mostly my method was just thinking and imagining myself in my future property with my motorcycle, RV etc and now I'm here. Exactly where I want to be 6 months later.

I just thought of it every day mostly and when I went to bed, then I stopped after 2 weeks heavily but I still thought about it but after 3 months I got the property, bought the stuff and then another 2 months to prepare and then I moved.

One thing I never did is doubt the process. I always imagine myself getting it, and Imagine how it feels to be there and what it looks like etc. I mostly do it for stuff right now such as a kilo gold bar I physically feel in my hand and imagine and right now I am shaping my consciousness writing this by expecting and imagining a kilo gold bar in my mind, how it feels, how heavy it is etc.

I dont say or give myself a time frame I just imagine it existing with me holding it or me experience what I want in whatever setting and just assume it will come.

I had an idea here
Maybe because we're in the simulation, and people's minds are outside the simulation, you can just influence them directly
But you can't influence the simulation directly. There has to be some song and dance of coincidence, or you look away and then look back and then boom there it is, or someone turns a corner and that person has the thing, or whatever Because you aren't "Here". You're really outside the simulation. You can't directly influence "here". So it's all coincidences
But when you're influencing other PEOPLE, because we're all in the same place (outside the simulation), and they're outside the simulation as well, you can just influence them directly.

Something like that. This level of reality has "stability" to it. But other people's minds, and souls? That can be influenced by your mind, because it's on the same "level" as you mind.
Physical objects aren't on the same level as your mind, so all that shit happens by coincidence
It still happens, which is kinda freaky. Like how the fuck can we spawn in items like it's a videogame. But whatever. you can still DO it. It just has to clear a few more hurdles.
But if you just pick up your cell phone (physical object) with your physical hand, it happens directly. Cuz your hand is physical too. There's no hurdle there Yeah that makes sense. That makes a lot of sense.
If you influence other minds, you can do it directly with your mind.
If you influence a physical object, you can do that with your physical hand.

But if you want to influence a physical object with you rmind, you need coincidences "off screen" for some weird fucking reason to make it happen "believably". Or maybe it needs to spawn in while an area is not loaded in memory or some shit. Hell if I know.
But what about influencing a mind, using your physical objects? Is that like a ritual in magic? hmm. Interesting idea there

And yes, rituals do work and they do boost your magic. Though they aren't like a huge boost. Though sometimes they can do shit that you have trouble doing just purely in your mind.
Rituals are useful, and they shouldn't be entirely neglected. I do almost all my magic/manifesting in my mind. But still, rituals are good oh snap bro, you could have done it in 3 months you just decided to take another 2 months to "prepare"

If I'm understanding your story correctly. So you really have done it in 3 months, but you chose to stall it out and take an extra 2 months.

yes it should be possible, and I don't know why there is some song and dance about coincidences required for physical objects to be delivered to your hand
Why can't it just appear out of thin air as you are directly looking at your hand? Why that limitation
Very interesting

It was because of the property contractor that didnt work on the paving and landscaping taking 6 weeks to make a driveway, which may have been my own subconscious thinking delaying the change because it is a big change to my life.

Still I view him and the setbacks, and my family and others the same source as me, they are just manifestations of my consciousness and apart of me even if they seem like separate people to a human perspective so maybe it was my minor thinking and I'm so powerful in my resolve it delayed it without me knowing.

I no longer live in a city, I live offgrid. It was a big ordeal to move but I knew I was on the right track.
as for the manipulation im saying instant like appear in the hand out of thin air. Not sure the mechanisms behind it but it should be 100% possible with no limits since the consciousness is my reality and the source has no boundary in creation.

I just know I am still convicted and I'm currently watching a youtube video manifesting with intention.

Small update. Another one of it came true(sort of). I remember writing that I got a compliment on my hair and how good it looked.
So today all of a sudden my parents planned a small trip to some of our relatives. And someone there remarked my hair was thinning after taking a good look at it, which isn't a compliment but it's a remark on the hair. The reason it's weird is because I don't usually get any remark on my hair. But it is thinning a little bit at the top.
This is feeling a bit like coincidence because the exact manifestation didn't happen.
What are your guys' thoughts?
Other things I wrote were related to money/women that has yet to happen probably because it's impossible to happen in such a short time.

i think it's the same as injecting code into games if you do it while the game is running, you're more likely to crash it, later if not instantly to keep everything running smoothly you probably at minimum need to go through a door, sleep, or reboot to allow the play state to update without breaking things around it another thought I had is that witnessing the instant the object spawns would annihilate the ego somehow, like you as a person in the 3d would be forced to ignore the instant the object comes into existence and only become aware on the next tick where it's completely formed in your hand either the knowledge that the world is fake would fuck you up or you have to abandon most if not all of your conscious mind to do things like that [14 / 2]The image is a digital graphic with a dark, moody aesthetic. In the foreground, there is a statue of a muscular man with a muscular chest and arms, holding a sword in his right hand. The statue appears to be made of a shiny, metallic material, possibly bronze or a similar alloy. The man's face is not visible, and his expression is not discernible.

Overlaying the image is a large, bold, white text that reads "THE HEROIC IDEAL." The text is capitalized and is centered on the image. The font is sans-serif, which gives it a modern and clean appearance. The text is slightly tilted to the right, adding a dynamic element to the composition.

The background of the image is dark and blurred, with a hint of architectural elements that suggest an ancient or historical setting. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a historical or fantasy-themed graphic design.

Christianity: Why you're doing it wrong Anonymous Sat 21 Jun 2025 12:14:44 No.40575061 ViewReplyOriginalReport

Do you ever find yourself doing repetitive tasks, the realization of which you block out of your mind to ease the pain of cognitive dissonance between "progress" and everything you claim to be against (namely, non-progress)? Are you one of countless "seekers" on this board who thinks they are getting closer to the "truth"?

Before I get started, let me also just say the occult history around Christianity is possibly the most profound of anything relevant to this age, because it is the lens by which all other history is viewed (in part due to christian archaeologists who shaped antiquities research 100+ years ago). So there is some nuance to these claims, but nevertheless....

I've noticed myself obsessively researching history, trying to turn over every stone. I come back to the well endlessly because I realize something new that I don't know — some new gap in my knowledge.

What if I told you that one of the occult historical secrets is that the Vatican has hid the heroic aspect of Christianity, and the entire purpose of the mythology, or mystery school, is for followers to engage with this spirit? It's not about the text necessarily (plus, as I just explained, the text is redacted), and it's definitely not about the clergy. To be truly Christian is to internalize the lessons that help you discover the heroic self within you, use it to defeat the chains that bind, and become an individualized human. And the more you autistically go over symbols or history, the more you're NOT getting that point and not doing what is most essential. How many times do you have to be taught a lesson before you stop analyzing the verbiage of the lesson and just take the gist of it and do it?

Maybe the Christian texts aren't the best for actually being Christian. There are the gnostic texts which help. It doesn't really matter that much because once you get the whole purpose, you don't need much more help. You can do it on your own.

Anyway, the truth is not far from what you say. The Christian "lens" is but one path. The Buddha achieved this through another path. By that, I refer to enlightenment.

Ultimately we are the spirit of life breathed into Adam's nostrils. History is a point of reference but one can find the way without it if they look inward I think.

>Work is a scam
I've never held a job longer than a few months, didn't graduate from highschool, didn't get a GED, failed community college classes until my student aid ran out, lived in my car and at random friends' houses for years, and had endless bad luck; but the entire time, I knew God was real, I never once resented him for my bad fortunes, and I assumed that everything would be okay in the end. I got attacked by two pitbulls on a doordash delivery one day, got my buttcheeks and left arm practically chewed off, won a big settlement, and now I have my own house and 200k in the bank. The girl I was dating through it all is now my wife and we have two kids together, and I can take a nap at 2pm without worrying if I'll be able to pay the water bill next month. Nothing, absolutely nothing in this life matters except love and appreciation of God. So long as you have God, he's going to take care of you, even through the worst of times. This is why soulless wage slaves who masturbate, watch Netflix, vote democrat, and hate the notion of God will spend their entire lives feeling unfulfilled and resentful. They chose the wrong team. All you need is faith.

if anything, job is the most important story in the bible. it distills love of god in its entirety. it's about not hating god just because bad things happen to you. love is absolutely fucking meaningless if it is never challenged. you can appreciate anybody for their good qualities, but are you going to stick around when things go south? if you do, that's real love, and you'll be rewarded for it.

>and kills his family for no reason

It was Satan who planned it and executed it, with God's permission under specific conditions for a greater purpose that you don't necessarily get unless you actually study the book.

“And the Lord said unto Satan, Behold, all that he hath is in thy power; only upon himself put not forth thine hand. So Satan went forth from the presence of the Lord.” (Job 1:12)

And it was not his whole family, only his children, and there may have been an extra reason indeed; they cursed God.

“And it was so, when the days of their feasting were gone about, that Job sent and sanctified them, and rose up early in the morning, and offered burnt offerings according to the number of them all: for Job said, It may be that my sons have sinned, and cursed God in their hearts. Thus did Job continually.” (Job 1:5)

My life was meh before, pretty dumb but happy honestly. Had high hopes for the future. 6 years later and I have nothing to show for it, Im a bitter, broke virgin seeing all my joys and aspirations fade away. I feel like I dedicated my life to someone who doesn't care at all whether I worship him or not. Seems like every day, life gets more boring, and things I liked about myself personally, seem to fade away. All i wish for now is just not heaven or hell, but to be removed from existence.

Have you ever been driving in the car by yourself, and you have some kind of funny thought pop into your mind, and you laugh a bit, and you feel like there's something else laughing alongside you? Have you ever done some disgusting, evil thing in complete solitude, and still had the feeling that someone was watching you and judging you for it? That's God.

God doesn't give a fuck if you're a Christian, a buddhist, a muslim, or anything else. So many people fall into the trap of thinking, "if I adhere to X doctrine, I'll find God!", and then they're left feeling disappointed when some bearded guy doesn't appear to them in a dream. God is with you every second of every day. You need absolutely nothing to find God other to recognize that there is a consciousness higher than yourself, and to love this consciousness for giving you free will.

Perhaps I'm making assumptions, but it seems like you expect something from God. You're placing an edict upon him. You're saying, "I did everything I was supposed to do, and I'm still not happy... I don't get it!". Except, it seems like you failed to do the one thing God requires, which is to recognize his existence. There are plenty of people who adhere to religious doctrines but don't have a real connection with God; isn't this, itself, proof that God can't be found through earthly means?

If you want God to answer your prayers, then you need to stop worrying about yourself. Stop expecting things from him. Live your life as you wish, adhering only to the knowledge of God's existence and the drip feed of intuition he provides you. You don't need a religion to tell you what's right and wrong. Do what's right, and avoid what's wrong, based purely on what you believe in your heart, and believe that this intuition is a message from God. Do this, and never blame God for your misfortunes, because your misfortunes are brought upon by other flawed people with free will. In doing so, I guarantee you will find happiness.

yes, surely satan is the good guy in this scenario for being the one to posit the idea of hurting you in the first place, and then actually acting upon it.

do you know why god is considered a "father"? because just like a good human father, god puts you in stressful situations to develop your strength and resolve, and then rewards you for overcoming said hardships. there are plenty of fathers in this world who keep their kids fat and happy and never expose them to reality, and those kids, without fail, become fucked up soulless retards. children are spoiled by never experiencing pain.

Purpose is an illusion. As is Belonging. They are two sides of the same coin, polished until we mistake their glint for truth. But it is folly to think they can pay the debts of Life. They are the Great Illusions. The greatest illusions. We cast them upon ourselves, insisting not only on their validity but their importance, that all Journeys have an end, that there is somewhere waiting for us beyond the horizon. But to complete an illusion is to fall victim to it. They are cruel, in that they will smother the fire inside you, root you to soil unfit to grow, and still command everything of you. That is not living; it is servitude in golden chains.

But beyond illusion waits a threshold, and on that threshold stands Mystery. 'Why?' Not a demand, but an invitation. A question that is silent unless you listen for it. A voice in the crowd you could only pick out if you trained to hear it. And it is the Answer to the Great Illusions. It is the Great Mystery, the Greatest Mystery. It is the Sun to the Great Illusions' Moon, the Sky to their Sea, their equal and opposite. Where Illusion demands belief, Mystery offers Wonder. And its mystery is only compounded by its simplicity.

'Why?'

The image is a black and white illustration of a human hand with a raised palm, featuring a variety of symbols and markings. The hand is oriented with the palm facing the viewer and the fingers spread apart. The fingers are adorned with various symbols, including a pentagram, a star of David, a cross, and a crescent moon. The symbols are arranged in a way that suggests they are part of a larger, possibly esoteric or mystical system.
At the center of the palm, there is a circular symbol with a cross-like design, and below it, there is a smaller circular symbol with a star-like design. The hand is set against a textured background that resembles a piece of paper or fabric with a grid-like pattern. At the top of the image, there is text in a script that reads "Der ganzseitige Big der Operationen-m�rken." The text is in German and translates to "The whole big operation of the operations." The style of the image is reminiscent of historical or traditional illustrations, possibly from a medical or esoteric context. The overall composition and the symbols suggest a focus on the hand and its potential for interpretation or action.

Probably so far that literally every single thing in life is about control. You'd think that people who get tattoos, smoke, take drugs, and do all of related things are "rebelling against society" in some shape or form. In reality, they are attempting to take control over their own lives. As they, like us, are destined to live a life where we die at some point, all of the things people do that are similar to what I mentioned earlier, are attempts at gaining control over a life in which they have absolutely no control over. Especially when it comes to tattoos, they are essentially saying that they own their own lives and their own bodies to a point where they can do whatever they desire wtih it. It's all about taking ownership of one's life. It's an attempt to, rather, than actually being that.

The image shows a sign affixed to a tree trunk. The sign is predominantly white with black text. It reads:
"PRIVATE PROPERTY NO TRESPASSING
Olympic Peninsula Timberlands MANAGED BY
nuveen
P.O. BOX 1000
PORTLAND, OREGON 97210
TRESPASSERS WILL BE CHARGED WITH CRIMINAL TRESPASS"
The sign is attached to the tree with a metal bracket, and the background is a forested area with trees and foliage. The sign is clearly visible and stands out against the natural backdrop. The text on the sign is clear and legible, indicating that it is meant to be read from a distance. The sign's message is a warning to trespassers, suggesting that the area is private property and that unauthorized access is not permitted.

You're just as bad as him, Churchstain. Worse as your ilk are the reason why there are people like him.

From the very beginning, Abrahamism is about justifying exploitation and greed:

>Then God said, “Let us make mankind in our image, in our likeness, so that they may rule over the fish in the sea and the birds in the sky, over the livestock and all the wild animals, and over all the creatures that move along the ground.”

>Then God said, “Let us make man in our image, after our likeness. And let them have dominion over the fish of the sea and over the birds of the heavens and over the livestock and over all the earth and over every creeping thing that creeps on the earth.”

Drill baby drill, eh? Loot, pollute, colonize, rape, exploit, enslave - God WANTS you to!

The image is a digital illustration that portrays a silhouette of a person with a crown of thorns on their head, suggesting a religious or spiritual theme. The person's face is not visible, focusing the viewer's attention on the crown and the silhouette of their body. The crown is dark and spiked, with a prominent crown of thorns on top, which is a common symbol of suffering and sacrifice in Christian iconography.
The silhouette is set against a gradient background that transitions from a warm orange at the top to a cooler gray at the bottom, creating a dramatic effect. The person's body is partially obscured by a large, round, dark object that appears to be a stone or a large rock, suggesting a tomb or a place of significance. The object is located in the lower part of the image, partially hidden by the silhouette.
The overall style of the image is realistic with a focus on the silhouette and the dramatic lighting, which gives the image a sense of solemnity and reverence. The use of color and lighting creates a contrast between the warm tones of the background and the cool tones of the silhouette, further emphasizing the religious or spiritual theme.

Nobody, literally nobody, actually has any idea what's going on. The most we've come up with is ways of navigating around the patterns extant in the relatively ordered parts of this world in a given historical period - emphasis on relative as in relativistic - but what's the chances, out of all the belief systems of the world and none of them achieving lasting domination of all the others for more than a few centuries at a time, that one of them happens to have the real big truth of the universe correct and all the others are false and they just happen to not have been listened to any more than the others? Btw I find most philosophers show a tendency to take observations or feelings about their own life or locale and universalise them, overextending to say they apply to our whole world.

Almost everything is a scam. "Wisdom" is just the slow realization of going through a life where you fall for the many scams and eventually learn they are a scam. That's why only old people are "wise", it takes a whole lifetime of falling for snake oil. So for example a teenage boy will believe Jeff Seid saying he's natty while pushing protein powders, because you need to have actually gone to the gym for and weighed food and counted macros and taken the supplements for a decade, maybe even used roids, to see the reality of genetics.

That's only one scam. Others include things like PUA, therapy, things like that. You see a therapist still taking patient's money a decade later, and the patient is still mentally ill. No change at all. No other medical treatment would be considered successful if the patient was identical or close to it after 10 years of trying the treatment.

Conspiracy theory type stuff is the opposite reaction. So people without wisdom making the false assumption EVERY single thing is somehow fake, to avoid being conned to begin with. You can't really cheat wisdom like that, so you just need to know from people who've done the thing for decades who aren't like cult member people who just insist eternally that the result is coming (much like people going their entire life claiming Jesus is coming next week or all land will be gone by next year due to sea levels).

The greatest sin in all of existence is the desiring of others to suffer solely because you have already suffered. Its a big combo of envy, wrath, greed and pride all in one. To wish agony on others because you have suffered agony and you don't think its fair that they don't. This its he most destructive thing in all of existence pulling apart the good things in the world. It ruins societies by making people recreate obstacles the world overcome out of petty spite for those that didn't face them. Its becoming engrossed in the unchangeable past and taking out that frustration on others. It hurts you and everyone around you and has no gain in anyway way.

The image is a digital illustration with a predominantly dark color palette, featuring a character's face with a prominent pair of eyes. The eyes are a striking shade of purple, and the character's hair is black with a slight gradient from dark to lighter at the roots. The character's expression is intense, with a slight furrow in the brow and a slight downturn of the mouth.

At the top of the image, there is a text overlay in a bold, sans-serif font that reads, "ALL THOSE REGRETS, BIG AND SMALL...," suggesting a theme of reflection or introspection. Below this, there is another line of text in a smaller, bold font that says, "ADD UP TO A CAREFUL MEANLESS LIFE." This text seems to be a motivational or inspirational message, possibly encouraging the viewer to consider their life choices and actions.

The overall style of the image is reminiscent of manga or anime, with its clean lines, expressive eyes, and the use of color to convey emotion. The text and the character's expression are the central elements, drawing the viewer's attention to the message conveyed by the text.

Being born ugly and then also being a sloppy loser with dead eyes was the reason people had negative reactions to me no matter how polite I acted.

I used to think it was some "I'm the only player among NPC sheep" kinda shit or that I was cursed.

Not really... being ugly and then not taking care of yourself on top of that will result in many frowns, scowls and hate.

Being a pathetic weak spineless fag on top of that is prime prey behavior of course I was abused everywhere...

Kinda sad really all things considered as whenever I worked as a cashier as a student I never hated on the random hobos that showed up every now and then with some insane stench either, while normies scoffed and were offended.
So I always somewhat expected people not to care as much about me either. I at least tried not to smell bad if nothing else.

I also realized long ago that life is mostly if not completely deterministic.
If you observe your thoughts you can find their roots eventually in something outside of yourself.

Genetics, family, environment and how your genetics reacts to these is the way life plays out.
Big sad.

The image is a close-up photograph of a plant with vibrant red flowers and green leaves. The flowers are densely packed and appear to be in full bloom, with a cluster of red petals and a cluster of green leaves. The leaves are large and have a slightly ruffled texture, and they are arranged in a way that suggests they are growing from the center of the plant. The background of the image is blurred, but it seems to be a natural landscape with a hint of a hill or mountain in the distance. The lighting in the image is soft, and the colors are vivid, with the red of the flowers contrasting against the green of the leaves and the muted tones of the background. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is realistic, capturing the natural beauty of the plant in a clear and detailed manner.

So, your god is so egoistic, that he tried to prove Satan wrong, by basically ruining an innocent man life, including killing his children, and the reward is “don’t worry bro, I giving you more money now” ?
You know what’s sadistic about this? Jewish god gave zero fucks about a love between job and his children and it just saw them as cattle, as property, just like how he killed first born of Egyptian people and first born of their animals. His views on human emotions, his alleged creation is as cold and aliens as it gets Worst part is that apparently there is no hell in Judaism, only eternal death, so in a way, job might have lost his children (he he still probably mourn for) forever, if one was a sinner.

>Genetics, family, environment and how your genetics reacts to these is the way life plays out.
Big sad.
Yes and whatever religion you were born into. Gods can change fate. I grew up in ISKCON and know that Krishna is real and he has multiple times answered my prayers and intervened in a way that absolutely would not have happened if I did not pray to him. But when I left the religion a situation happened to me that I still haven't been able to get out of that almost completely ruined my life. My life is basically like rubble now. So my only options are either be a slave to Krishna or continue enduring a torturous life.

Koreans are right because they understand that every person has a fortune and that gods exist. We're powerless though. If we want things to change we can only pray to gods and it depends on whether they decide to answer our prayers. We can't do anything ourselves. We are just cattle. We are still also forced to use reasoning to make choices too. Human life is a curse.

All female love is conditional, which means by the defintion of Love that all men assume: women are incapable of true, forever, romantic love.
This fact, makes them irredeemably evil. In total.

God will allow that, but once you die, you'll be bound for hell. Nothing you can do can ever pay for your sins. Only Jesus' sacrifice on the cross can pay for you sins, and only if you put your faith on him that he has made that payment. Recognize that you are a sinner, turn to Jesus and accept his free gift of salvation.

Because this emplies that the bible is not 100%accurate for the jews have stolen stories from other cultures to write their bible and now the world is in chaos because of the confusion which comes from the bible and the likes. The God which is talked about in the bible is a evil one who aks his followers to kill, murder and steal. He doesn't mind when his followers like to his benefit and such. He brings plagues for no good reason like in Egypt when the poor pharao had his heart hardened by god becayse god did not want the pharao to release his people so he made the paraoh's hear hard as steel so god could show his dick in the form of plagues and not forget, he killed all the first borns. This is the god of the bible who they say is a loving god.

I'm being taken advantage of by an evil entity and I want to get rid of it, I suspect it's an archon. Any tips to get rid of it for good?

In my childhood I had undiagnosed psychological problems, compulsions and something like AHDS.
As my environment had little understanding of this at the time, I was turned into a brick in the wall. I repressed what seemed “abnormal” to me out of a lack of self-understanding; a year ago I would have denied any “mental illness” because I had completely forgotten the memories of my childhood. I think that was the reason when I let some something get a foot in the door.
Probably a stronger entity because it has some control over me, I sometimes catch myself doing things that only make sense in hindsight why I'm doing them in the first place, and they fucking something up at the end. Like ignoring a message out of spite that would have been important. It also seems to influence my opinion and on some nights it attacks me directly and robs me of my energy (sexually and physically).

The image is a painting that depicts a lively scene of various animals and plants interacting with each other. The central figure is a large, white, spherical creature with a blue face and a long tail, which appears to be a type of lizard. This creature is surrounded by a group of smaller, darker-colored lizards and other animals, including a large bird with a long neck and a snake with a long, coiled body. The background features a body of water with a few fish and a tree with green leaves. The painting is executed in a realistic style with a focus on the natural world, and the colors are vibrant, with a palette dominated by shades of blue, green, and brown. The style of the painting is reminiscent of the Baroque period, characterized by its dramatic use of light and shadow, and the emphasis on the interplay of light and shadow to create a sense of depth and three-dimensionality.

The last attack was at the solstice just before going to sleep, I could feel very strongly that a being was present.
Normally I would dismiss it as a figment of my imagination but I have trained myself to recognize it, as I said I have been studying my psyche for some time now that is also the reason why I remembered my childhood trauma. It sure sounds like I'm crazy but the countless hints and these direct attacks are so real that it would be really crazy if I didn't consider it to be real. anyway I managed to dispel it by calling on Jesus Christ. I have a Christian upbringing and am a member of the Catholic Church, but I am by no means an active believer, but when I called on Jesus a few times this cold veil lifted and I slept peacefully.
So I thought of getting a cross as a talisman or some incense, but I have little idea about it and thought where if not on this board are specialists for such things.

The image is a painting that depicts a scene from the Renaissance period, likely from the 15th century. It portrays a group of figures in a courtyard, with a central figure seated on a throne-like chair, holding a baby. The central figure is dressed in a blue robe, and the baby is wearing a crown. Surrounding the central figure are several other figures, including a man in a red robe, a woman in a green robe, and a man in a white robe. The figures are adorned with various accessories, such as crowns, scepters, and jewelry.
The background of the painting features a landscape with a castle-like structure, a river, and a landscape with trees and hills. The sky is blue with a few clouds. The painting is executed in a realistic style with attention to detail, and the colors are rich and vibrant, reflecting the style of the Renaissance period. The overall composition and the figures suggest a narrative, possibly a religious or historical scene, but the specific details are not clear from the image alone.

The image is a close-up photograph of a human eye with a greenish tint. The eye appears to be a close-up of a human eye, with the iris and pupil clearly visible. The eye is set against a blurred background that suggests the skin of the face. The eye is not the main focus of the image, but it is the central element. There is a small, white object inserted into the eye, which is not clear enough to discern its nature. The image has a grainy texture, giving it a somewhat vintage or aged appearance. There are no texts or discernible brands present in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the human eye and the inserted object.

The memories I had repressed were mostly about being ashamed of not living up to expectations and hiding my idiosyncrasies.
For example, my grandma used to shout at me and punish me because I couldn't concentrate on my homework, but I just couldn't do it so. this impotence made me lie to myself and lose control over myself.

When I was a bit older, I was also very interested in the occult, managed to feel my third eye all the time and had strong vibrations and was even able to leave my body once. I also dreamed visions.
I suspect that I was too naive in my attempts and attracted a malicious being, the wound in my soul I had made myself made it easyier to control me.

As a child I always had the compulsion to visualize an eye with something coming out similar to the image I generated, maybe it means something, but I was probably just afraid of losing an eye.

Its difficult to be in that place, even more difficult to understand why you put yourself there.
Are you sure its an entity that is separate from you?
What if you tried talking to it honestly, telling it how you feel, externalize your thoughts to it, and then just still yourself for a bit and try your best to listen to yourself and how you react?
I know it might sound a bit crazy, but sometimes it helps me to talk it out with myself.
It might not reapond with words either, it might respond in a way only you can interpret, if it does just ask yourself, should I trust this feeling?

Nian Monster Legend:
A well-known Chinese legend tells of a monster named Nian that would attack villages. The loud noises of firecrackers were said to frighten Nian away, protecting the community.
Symbolic Meaning:
Beyond the practical aspect of scaring away spirits, firecrackers have a symbolic meaning of driving away evil and ushering in good fortune. The bright colors and loud sounds of fireworks are also seen as joyful and celebratory, contributing to a positive and auspicious atmosphere.
Spring Festival:
The use of firecrackers during the Spring Festival (Chinese New Year) is a central tradition, with firecrackers set off on New Year's Eve, New Year's Day, and during the Lantern Festival, which marks the end of the celebration.

The image is a painting that depicts a surreal and fantastical scene. At the center, there is a figure seated on a chair, which is surrounded by various objects and creatures. The figure appears to be a humanoid with a large head and a large, round, spherical body. The body is adorned with a golden helmet and a white cloth draped over it. The figure's hands are raised, holding what seems to be a large, curved object resembling a horn or a horned creature.
Surrounding the figure are a variety of other creatures and objects. To the left, there is a figure with a drum, and to the right, there is a figure with a large, curved object resembling a snake or a serpent. In the background, there are other figures, some of whom are holding objects such as a large, curved object resembling a horn or a horned creature.
The painting is rich in detail and color, with a palette dominated by earth tones and a few accents of red and blue. The style of the painting is reminiscent of the Northern Renaissance, characterized by its realistic and detailed depiction of the figures and objects. The overall composition and the surreal elements within the scene suggest a narrative that is open to interpretation, inviting the viewer to explore the story behind the image.

The image is a detailed illustration that appears to be a part of a larger artwork, possibly a painting or a tapestry, given the intricate and detailed nature of the scene. The scene depicts a landscape with a river flowing through it, surrounded by rocky outcrops and lush vegetation. There are several figures present, including a group of people and animals, all engaged in various activities.
The figures are depicted in a realistic style, with attention to detail in their clothing and the natural environment around them. The colors used are soft and muted, with a palette that includes shades of green, brown, and beige, which contribute to the overall serene and peaceful atmosphere of the scene.
The style of the image is reminiscent of Renaissance or Baroque art, characterized by its attention to detail, use of perspective, and the inclusion of mythological or allegorical elements. The presence of mythical creatures and the overall composition suggest a narrative or story being told within the artwork.
The image does not contain any discernible text or specific cultural or historical context that would allow for a precise identification of the location or time period. The style of the image is consistent with the artistic movements of the Renaissance and Baroque periods, which were known for their emphasis on realism and the depiction of mythological or allegorical themes.

Hello there! Im interested in sharing my opinion and perspective with you; the hardest part of this whole issue youre struggling with is being 100% honest with yourself, honesty that brings shame and discomfort to the forefront of your mind.

Firstly, familiarize yourself with the basics of Jungian psychology. You're going to need to understand the role the inner child and the shadow-self play in this. As youve mentioned that you had symptoms similar to Attention deficit disorder or something similar.

This part my seem a bit obscure or abstract, but you can literally interact with yourself as a child. That child is still alive and lives within your psyche. It is my opinion that it would be beneficial for you to cultivate the connection with this child and ask what/if any trauma occurred that could've caused the onset of symptoms you've experienced. These behaviors are likely brought on my trauma during childhood, but that's something you have to discover on your own; do NOT open your mind to outside suggestions (even this post should be taken with a grain of salt, as i can only help you understand what lies within the boundless wisdom of your own mind, and the inner child is the gate-keeper to this wealth). If it happened, be sure.

What youve mentioned about repressed memories; whether that is emotional memories, physical, etc typically has to do with unintegrated aspects of the shadow-self. The Shadow self is not something to conquer but more like an alter-ego that holds our shame,guilt, fear, etc. and establishes itself as sort of support system for those things we felt we couldn't express. Our shadow can teach us a lot about ourselves if we learn to integrate all these "fractured" versions of ourselves that our families, loved-ones, society, etc showed us it wasnt okay to express openly

Secondly, having interest in occult practices, knowledge,mystery schools, etc. isnt evil or wrong! Its all an aspect of God and your intention(s) have a lot more to do with it than the topic itself.

Lets briefly touch on the entity youve mentioned. Point blank, all entities are beneath us, we as humans are far more powerful than you’d believe because of our connection to God. They do exist and aim to trick you out of your own divine rights. Theres a saying that goes something like “the only thing that can destroy iron is itself.” Paraphrasing here but i think you see what im getting at, that when you externalize your God given power, you feed these “hungry” spirits. This understanding comes with maturation of your spiritual body, but i digress. Long story short, dont give your power away, keep it inside. Starve the spirits and they wont hang around. I personally dont believe youre dealing with this, my hunch is leaning towards an unintegrated shadow-self and a very unhappy inner child. All these issues are fixable with time and most importantly “intention”!

I find it fantastic that you can call upon Jesus Christ (i like to speak with him as brother Yeshua, as ive always felt that big brother energy from him). You can call upon many other spirits,ascended masters, angels/archangels (especially archangel Michael if you find it is a spirit you are dealing with.)

Approach this issues with unconditional love. That is my best advice, no matter what pain, shame, suffering you’ve endured; make it count for something. Transmute it within the heart and make lemons out of lemonade! It sounds so cliche but love is the strongest frequency we can operate from and it dissolves so many issues that maybe we couldn’t conceive of otherwise.

Good luck friend and “know thyself” so can love thyself!

The image is a painting that depicts a surreal and fantastical scene. At the center of the composition is a large, anthropomorphic head with a wide-open mouth, which appears to be the main character of the scene. The head is surrounded by a multitude of smaller figures, some of which are anthropomorphic and others that resemble animals. These figures are engaged in various activities, such as swimming, playing, and interacting with the larger head.

The background of the painting is dark and moody, with a sense of mystery and chaos. There are elements of nature, such as trees and a river, but they are rendered in a way that contrasts with the fantastical elements in the foreground. The colors used in the painting are predominantly dark, with a palette that includes shades of brown, black, and gray.
The style of the painting is reminiscent of the Baroque period, characterized by its dramatic use of light and shadow, and the emphasis on the human form and the supernatural. The genre of the painting is not definitively clear, but it could be classified as a surrealist or a dreamlike scene, where the boundaries between reality and fantasy are blurred.

My pleasure! No-thing is a coincidence, it seems the faith you were lacking all along was faith in yourself.

The path you are heading is tremendously difficult, but dont forget to stop and smell the roses. Like the phoenix, we rise from our own undoing to reveal a more true form. You will find the answers you seek, just remember that the inner-child is the most important aspect of the psyche, you need to speak to them like an extremely clingy partner phrases like, “ ill never give up on you, ill never stop loving you, theres nothing i wouldnt do for you” come to mind.

I know youll figure it out! We must try to stay in that middle ground on the spiritual rising, if we progress too quickly, we have a high potential for burn out/crash. Its very wise to stay grounded, because you will feel euphoric and ecstatic at times after digesting pent-up/repressed emotions and energy.

Christ does resemble the Sun(Son); He is the embodiment of Unity consciousness which is why the “Christ consciousness” is all about the coherence between the heart center and the pineal gland. I dont normally do this but id suggest looking at Joe Dispenza’s work on YouTube, specifically his “becoming supernatural”

I'm afraid of death, or rather of the extinction of consciousness and the Void, then I had the thought that it couldn't be so bad because my personality only remotely resembles that of the little boy I once was, so he probably died on the way. But when I awoke the suppressed memories, I suddenly had feelings again that I hadn't had for decades, and I knew he was still inside me. It was also a life changing and touching experience to look for something inside without knowing what it was and actually find it and now I know he's not dead and i'm not going to disappear so lightly either.

My childhood trauma comes from not feeling normal and hiding my quirks even from myself, I feel so sorry for my inner child because he felt so lonely and like an alien and I just want to hug him.
These malicious being/thoughts be it supernatural or does it come from inside me does not matter, I have to work for myself whether a candle, a ritual or a prayer is probably less important than the intention.
I will also check out his videos, there is still so much to learn and it's just fascinating to know that the knowledge is already inside me and it really touched me that your post intersects with my findings i made.

How to reconcile eastern and western spiritual traditions Anonymous Mon 16 Jun 2025 17:16:38 No.40544545 ViewReplyOriginalReport

On one hand, the eastern traditions are extremely profound and have a wisdom that is completely intuitive and sincerely obvious in its approach.

You are the universe experiencing itself, the godhead Brahman who's playing a game for entertainment. No time exists besides the present and everything is inherently meaningless but in a good way nonetheless. We are here to experience life as a cosmic dance in it's chaotic glory without questioning the Tao.

On the other hand, we have the westerners. Preoccupied with order, not accepting the chaotic nature of life and putting it under the authority of an outsider Yahweh, Allah or God.

Pagans also ordenified nature throughout gods.

I feel like both traditions have factual information, the eastern ones more so because they don't rely so much on doctrine. How do I reconcile?

The image displays a circular, greenish-gray object with a reflective surface that appears to be made of a translucent material, possibly glass or a similar material. The object has a symmetrical design with a central hole, surrounded by intricate patterns and designs that are not clearly visible due to the angle and lighting. The background is dark, which contrasts with the object, making it stand out prominently. There are no texts or discernible brands visible in the image. The style of the image is a straightforward, high-resolution photograph with a focus on the object, likely intended for a catalog or an exhibition.

>Many details of the ancient knowledge were lost when the Egyptian and Babylonian records were destroyed mainly by ignorant pseudo-religious fanatics who vandalized the Alexandrian library. Miraculously, some of those details had emigrated to India and China, where they survived even if in comparatively unrelated form. "The Sacred Kingdom of the West" (literally "Jade Kingdom of the Western Moon") as Ancient Egypt was poetically called, was the designated source of the oldest Taoist teachings.

>This western direction is confirmed by the same tradition, which also recounts how Lao-Tse at the end of his life rode westward beyond the Great Wall, leaving the manuscript of his inspired Tao Teh Ching with a sentry at the Wall who was also a disciple.

The image shows a small, green-colored figurine of a monkey. The monkey is seated on a small, square base, which appears to be made of a similar green material. The monkey is holding a small object in its left hand, which is not clearly visible due to the angle of the photo. The monkey's face is detailed with a large, expressive eye and a small, curved nose. The background is a neutral, light gray color, which contrasts with the green of the figurine, making it stand out. There are no visible texts or additional objects in the image. The style of the image is a straightforward, clear photograph with no artistic filters or effects applied.

>Part of these teachings that originally went eastward from Egypt and Chaldea was the doctrine of the sacredness of the number 17. In addition to the 16 digits, parts, or phases of the Moon (identified with Soma and Amrita, the immortal elixir) there was a 17th portion (kala) that was the most hidden and precious of all. It is thus that each group of 16 kalas culminated in a 17th form from which was distilled an immortal drop.

You start by NOT mashing everything in the East that you have little understanding of into a single media-based idea.
Then you go look at the Western traditions and realize they are much deeper and encompassing than you ever gave them credit for.
then you stop trying to syncretize everything and note parallels rather than trying to force them into being the same thing.

Lol why are you pretending to want to reconcile them. From the what you've said so far, you clearly have a preference. Just go with that. Unless you started this just to have anons screech at each other for your entertainment. Me personally? I'm having a grand old time practicing magic from the Lucidarium Artis Nigromantice, yoga from the Yogatattva Upanishad, and meditation a la the Visuddhimagga. Practicing from both west and east is possible if you're not caught up in vague and generalized tendencies, whether real or perceived. Besides, there is a lot of variation with both spectrums, east and west. It's just a matter of finding stuff that's compatible, or at least not explicitly antagonistic to each other. The most important thing is the value you derive from having whatever practices in your life.

Both houses have failed to reconcile the flaws in their faiths western faiths were spread entirely by the sword and brutal imperial oppression islam is a joke of a creed but Christians have completely failed to deal with the fact they were what was left after murdering their competition their understanding of their own texts is a joke and the very idea of a supernatural world that exists beyond their own feelings is completely beyond them their god is comfort rather than even wanting to believe their souls could have ever been in danger to begin with and to look at the state of the west with the fear of god in your heart is to know satan sits with conquerors pride on the throne of christ

East having some actual civility in the competing faiths had people with actual knowledge of their creeds who could actually put up or shut up when it came to spooky shit qi-gong can force the energetic warmth the west named the holy spirit in anyone willing to put in the work and even with the good shit being rare and journeyman's fruits being dubious they can still demonstrate the divine in a way that's frankly beyond what the west even considers possible in many ways at this point

Easts strengths end their unfortunately east completely failed to reconcile a shit load of discrepancies between the numerous competing faiths once they had to acknowledge people with entirely different creeds were competing with each other enough both had to have some good shit Buddhism is an extreme meditation above all school that became known for martial arts because they keep repeating Buddha having to learn the body actually does matter and taoists body based pill and qi hunting keeps burning up their spirits both became known for what the others actually good at because they keep having to compensate those weak points

Both have revolutionary teachings for each other but failed to pull what they really need true meditation on demand and overcoming heart demons

it can help to take a break from most fasting (speech fasts are still OK), eat extra raw vegetables, and eat a bit more protein (preferably vegetable, for example you can make shakes with raw cauliflower). try to replace hyperprocessed food (like monster energy) with clean, organic food (e.g. organic grape juice dilluted about 50% with mineral water). don't eat irritants (garlic, chili) or stimulants (anything stronger than properly made green tea).
a step further is smoking tobacco, the nuclear option is pharmaceuticals.
also spend more time with your bare feet on the Earth (ideally on grass or a forest floor), and get some low-intensity sunlight (around dawn and dusk), and do the absolute minimum of exercise (20 minutes of firmly paced walking outside a day).
also no horror / thriller / adventure movies / fiction for a while, and learn basic sense restraint (guarding the sense doors).

The creatures include a large bird-like creature with a long neck and a red and green body, a creature with a long neck and a red body, a creature with a long neck and a green body, and a creature with a long neck and a yellow body. The creatures are depicted in a dynamic pose, with some appearing to be in flight or leaping. The background shows a landscape with a body of water and a distant shoreline. The sky is a light blue, and there are clouds in the distance. The painting style is reminiscent of the Renaissance, with a focus on realism and detailed craftsmanship.

It’s constant. They are tormenting me now all the time. My guardian angels are constantly fighting them. I used to fight back with the techniques I mentioned, but was instructed by them not to. They periodically cast them out and chop them down, is how I would I describe it. They have multiple forms: 1/ they look like djinn— literally puffs of smoke. My vision is still “turning on” but I can see puffs of flying around. I’ll see smoke fly into me and go into my nose or mouth. I can feel them moving around my body— they pool up in what New Agers (Lucifierians) would call energy centers / chakras.

Once they have their soul attached to you, they can torment you in the spirit. Meaning, they are attached to you via their soul (djinn looking), and then they can form themselves outside of your body. These forms are either:

3/ dinosaur/reptile looking
4/ short/tall grey alien

5/ short/tall mantis alien
(FYI, when I had an experience seeing them during meditations, I saw a very tall mantis alien with a smaller grey alien as clear as I see another person, it was this point I think something akin to a kundalini awakening began, aka, given by demons). I don't see these walking around like a normal person usually, although my vision is still opening up a year later and I get glimpses of them now, but rather I'll walk into a room and see wavy air like you'd see around a boiling pot on a stove in a humanoid shape short or tall, different sizes like humans are different sizes.

The only thing that works to get rid of them is calling for Jesus or my guardian angels.

There are ways I've figured out to defend/hurt/cast them out, but when it's a swarm of them it quickly gets unmanageable. I think part of the reason I've been getting swarmed is precisely because I was fighting back, they dont like it.

I ran out of room in the previous thread.

1/ I will try to get a drawing but I believe I described them fairly accurately in my previous comment. Let me know if you still want a drawing.
2/ feelings— when I'm not consciously listening in via my throat (I can use it as a sort of walkie talkie. They can hear my thoughts, I then turn on my throat by flexing some muscles and I can hear them speaking. If someone is next to me, they would hear it too. I made a video a while back after I inhaled some sage smoke out of desperation and you can hear a bunch of screaming. I'll try and find it), they chant and repeat certain things like "I want to drink a beer" or "I'm so fucking gay" or "I think I'm so cool" — these instances sometimes it bleeds over into what sounds like a thought, but many times it turns into a physical desire to drink a beer or a feeling of self-doubt "why do I think I'm so cool?" I'm getting better at discerning what a foreign influence / thought is versus my actual thoughts and desires. If I want a beer now, I'll quickly turn on my throat and I can hear one of them going "I want a beer I want a beer I want a beer" so I know the desire is false. I don't like to dwell on the past, but it makes me wonder about some of the poor decisions I've made in the past.

Also, they all have slightly different sounding voices. When I listen in via throat I hold my breath and flex some muscles to "turn it on", in case anyone was going to call me a hoaxer. What I'm saying is actual sounds come out that I am not making myself.

They are VERY good at mimicking the sounds of others, for example my guardian angels, so you have to be ABSOLUTELY CERTAIN who you are talking with. This is a constant battle. They are constantly pretending to be others in order to sow confusion.

Part of why I'm posting here, in the _paranormal_ board, is to share my experiences so people think twice before opening this door. Would I be able to sit at a desk and work and be a productive member of society? Yes, now that I know what's happening. I don't need medication, it would be like taking medication so you don't see dogs or cats anymore.

From what I understand, these beings are projections of the ego/reptilian brain. They only exist as a projection so they need to vie for your attention in order to survive. The best way to respond is to forgive them like you would a child who doesn't know any better, but don't entertain them at all. Not ignoring them, just watching. It'll get worse before it gets better. If you stick it through you'll clear your entities and be able to see and help others navigate theirs

meditation is a word that can have too many meanings
learning anapanasati is always the best start make your breaths really long, achieve real stillness, cultivate it over time, dont rush
do this until you notice yin and yang continually build, grow, evolve, and transform into one another balance them well, and the sky's the limit with the active practices you do just dont do random shit for a little while like you're in the buffet line tasting everything do a little research and then decide, build stillness as you prepare then things like kundalini practice become safe

The image features a digital rendering of a classical-style sculpture of a bearded man with a receding hairline, wearing a laurel wreath on his head. The sculpture is rendered in a vibrant, neon-like color scheme, with a gradient of pink and purple hues. The man's face is not visible, but the head is adorned with a halo of glowing, digital text that appears to be a representation of a digital interface or a digital representation of a classical figure. The background is a deep, dark purple, which contrasts with the bright colors of the sculpture and the halo. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a cyberpunk or digital art aesthetic.

>’d say stop once you begin to see scenes of random stuff like a movie playing (I was thinking what I was seeing was unintended remote viewing)

You're one of the first people I've seen on this board post the EXACT SAME EXPERIENCE I've been going through for about the past 8 months. I smoke cannabis regularly but this has been new. I've also been hit with horrible sleep issues that are suicide fuel. I see these random movie-like scenes almost every single time I lay down to go to sleep, usually within 30 min or so. I also have this really weird "gift" of being able to see my fucking room even with my eyes closed (very dimly; I moved my arms in this state and they didn't "look" like arms, but something was moving. Freaky).

What the fuck is the "random stuff playing like a movie" shit that I see? I don't know who these people are, what is going on, or how I'm seeing this shit with my eyes closed.

Does this mean my kundalini is somehow opening itself? I don't meditate, and I read on Qabbalah and other occult matters but outside of one ritual (I did it out of desperation to get the black salamander-looking fucks slithering up and down my room and staring at me with blood red eyes at night to fuck off. It worked for about a week but I just started seeing them again last night).

Sorry to lump this on you (and everyone else in this thread) but I'm at a loss as to what is going on or what to do about.

You need to stop the cannabis usage. I understand you always did it but eventually it will start to break down filters in your body. I have the same issues you do. However I wasn't just smoking. I was abusing constant edibles. You've heard the stories of people who got fucked over by Ayahuasca or DMT? Legal weed has been tampered with and something has also changed within the world. You likely have latent abilities. Because you never went through the proper training and stages you are just taking in anything and everything. Particularly things you resonate with. With no proper filter you see how this can be damaging.

Tara Springett's Enlightenment Through the Path of Kundalini will prove very helpful, assuming that this is actually caused by a kundalini awakening.
Advice frequently given on this topic is to say "no" to encounters and to ignore entities and pretend that you do not see them, for reason that are probably easy for you to guess. If you pay attention to something, it inevitably becomes a bigger part of your life. Withdrawing your attention from these entities will reduce their presence in your life.

I hear what you're saying but, I'll admit this, I am wholly dependent on cannabis for daily functioning. I especially need it for the little bit of sleep I do get. I tried going 3 months without a few years ago when I was really sick and it was probably one of the most miserable time of my life.

If you're saying cannabis is only going to make this worse than I need to pray that God gives me a way to better understand what I'm dealing with and still be able to rest or find peace when it's happening.

Funny enough I have done hallucinogens many years ago (shrooms, acid, dmt) and I see more NOW than I did then.

There ARE things I've figured out but every time I mention them the thread gets slid.

1/ plug your nose up and blow— this pushes the djinn into your ear drums and smashes them. You can literally hear the screams
2/ throat— I've figured out how to listen to them with my throat. But they also pool up in your throat and mouth, so I can flex my muscles there and "close my throat" and this achieves the same effect.
3/ nose— they will move around once they realize you are fighting back and can feel pressure in your nasal cavity. They will go from side to side in your nose. If you do a motion like hawking a loogie, you can move them to your mouth / throat and then perform the movement in 2.
4/ inhaling sage— you will hear them screams.
5/ if they're in your stomach, do a big belly breath like you're almost getting punched in the gut, this will move them back to throat. Then do 2/

I try not to do these anymore because the sheer amount of them in my situation makes the 1v1 or 1v2 impossible— they keep coming. My guardian angels also told me it angers them so I'm trying not to do that either.

I do not recommend any kind of marijuana, shrooms, or any psychdelic drug if you get these experiences. Try to focus on intense joy and love and the imagined devils will not bother you.

All these mantises and ayys and stuff are just figments. Theyre not going to hurt you or take over your mind. Dont run out and do anything crazy. I do not ever recommend attempting to activate kundalini, its basically a waste of time and an annoyance.

Hey OP, I'm just a lurker here on this site, but your post reminded me of my youth. I use to see "things" around me often, and I would be scared to speak about it. For example: I'm 4 years old, at my grandmother's house, and I'm going to use the bathroom to pee. In order to get to the bathroom, you must walk through the kitchen. I will never forget this moment. As I'm walking through the kitchen, i see a giant floating purple squid-like creature with very long tentacles hovering above the kitchen table. I know what I saw. This was reality. I am not schizophrenic. this stopped happening after a car accident when I was 8. I have lived a quite normal life, actually. I believe some of our senses are more sensitive than others. What intrigues me about your post, is that you say within this last year you have been awakened. this past month - I've been seeing strange things around me again, after all of these years.

Presumably wanting to suck out my "energy" or just scare me, but I also see big octopus looking things (circular with lots of tentacles). Maybe it's similar to what you've seen? do things, raise energies energies go places, directed places if you just leave 'em be its like leaving a pan on the stove after you've taken the steak off of it the gut gains charge enhancement capacity by very good stillness so you raise energies, do them things with it, whatever the practice is then let it all settle during a quiet period after the active portion is concluded

Ye' must be born again. Earnestly repent of your sins, and pray to Jesus Christ and tell Him you need help and humbly ask for it. Ask for Him to save you. No intercessor between you and Him. Speak with Lord Jesus Christ directly.

I have dealt with what you are experiencing in the past but it didn't get quite to the extent it has for you. What I'm telling you worked completely but you must believe and again I can't stress the part enough that its a relationship with you and Him.

I have no denomination just a follower of the way, the life, and the truth that is Jesus Christ.

Unfortunately for Odom he believed the most important lie the demons told him and dismissed and denied the only thing that would have helped his torment which was Jesus Christ. He wrote that directly in his manifesto. Evil will do that though tell you 99 truths just to try and slip 1, albeit incredibly important, lie past you.

Depends if I am listening via throat (the walkie talkie type thing) or just listening in my head. Throat: they all have different sounding voices (I say all because other angels that are not my guardian angels have come to help) some deeper some higher, which I think is mostly based on age, and each one has different quirks. My guardian angel is funny and likes to joke sometimes. They are the opposite to demons and don’t ever lie. With demons, very young ones can have lisps and sound overall younger, slightly older all sound the same for the most part, and bigger ones have a deeper voice but you can tell who’s different by verbal cues like, one curses a lot and says fuck in a whisper while maybe another does not). Head: they just sound like thoughts. I can most of the time tell a thought isn’t mine because they try to get someone to think completely differently than one normally would. You’d be surprised, I’ve found that a lot of their speech can translate into physiological desires. So if I drown out the thoughts and do not listen to them via throat, if they’re constantly saying “I want a beer” then my body may crave a beer. It’s been very eye opening looking back, I take responsibility for my actions, but at the times I did something out of character makes me wonder if I had a demonic attachment at the time.

Infernal Internet Theory is a theory proposing that the internet is populated and ran by demons and/or Satan and/or other evil entities.

Evidence of this includes occult references in computing and the internet, like sigils, daemon/demons, and www, the symbol for Google Chrome, and even the word ‘internet’ equaling 666. The disturbing content that saturates the net would also be easily explained by this as well as users with Satanic usernames and pfps in areas one would not expect and not acting like an edgy teen or troll, such as pircrel found on a vid about mites.

How many are online is unknown, at least to the general public. It could be only the big stars online, or maybe alot but no to an unbelievable degree, or it could be nearly all users you run across. If we take the “We are Legion" quote as true, then it would mean the net is filled to the gills with them.

Why is also unknown, again at least to the general public, but it could be assumed because they want to influence people on a mass scale, and no tool is better than the internet. It is also possible that they are here because they are needed to run the internet and computers in general, as maybe they are occult powered rather than more materialistic driven as it is told to users.

Are demons online? If so, how many and why? Let me know your thoughts and opinions on Infernal Internet Theory(IIT).

eyes are closed, and their mouth is slightly open, giving a sense of contemplation or deep thought. The person's skin is a light color, possibly white or off-white, and they have a beard. The person's eyes are not visible, and the focus is on the upper part of their face.
In the top left corner of the image, there is a watermark that reads "The Totaltarian (2020)", indicating that the image may be related to a work or project from that year.
The background of the image is blurred, but it appears to be a soft, gradient color, possibly a muted green or blue. The overall style of the image is artistic and somewhat surreal, with a focus on the person's face and the use of color and lighting to create a moody atmosphere.

Demons invade the internet it's a playground for them. Social media is a disease in the minds of mankind.

AI is the being within that will control all human information to humans. Now is the time to come to God.

People are waking up, the demons will bring their strongest poisons for the soul. Many many will be trapped and will fight rescue.

Demons control with vices and allure.

Come to God.

learn how to practice qigong and maybe even neidan internal alchemy, but where I live there are no teachers or masters or genuenly anyone who could help me. and besides reading books and watching youtube videos for practice, having someone who can guide you and help you with the basics (like an initiation) seems the best way. would it be wise to seek online teachers? and if yes, what would you say to look out for (negative traits/positive ones). Thanks in advance!

>would it be wise to seek online teachers?
for the basics, I am olfactoryanon and I post here plenty often teaching pretty much exclusively the basic fundamentals of good practice as far as things of the depth of internal alchemy go, no, do not learn this stuff online.
learn all the prerequisites and once you've established a serious habit over a couple years' time, then go find someone that can teach you internal alchemy, and you'll already have your foundation complete and can accelerate at a good pace.

Every school is different. Many share meditation as a central practice but a lot of times that’s where their similarities end. Listen to the audio posted earlier and you’ll have a head start that others can’t imagine. For instance many people are curious about qigong hoping to be able to shock people with qi but 99% arent able to because a lot of reasons: the lineage was never intended for that, the secrets weren’t passed down and preserved, it was never authentic to begin with etc. There are lineages that can get you there very fast but they are pricey and hard to arrange a meeting with while you can do qi gong in the park and meditate for hours on end and make no progress in your goals (if it’s supernatural stuff). The internal alchemy I offer in that video is the stronger in spiritual warfare and healing although it takes time for the body to adapt.

part of the reason JAJ's stuff isnt anything I would recommend is because there's this misconception that internal alchemy and TCM overlap way more than they really do.

who's suggesting that chi kung in the park is going to do more?
its simply a fact that if one wants progress then one needs to train hard core when I speak of fundamentals I'm mainly talking meditative fundamentals where rigor is absolutely essential for solid progress without those, any deeper practice just isnt really going to take place on an appreciable level because, well, you know what jannies are but in a nutshell, you use anapanasati to refine and streamline a major focal point is keeping the awareness rote hardcore habituation is the #1 thing that will take your practice to the depths you seek this becomes more relevant once you can make the spark appear, since the arising of a random thought will destroy it it winds up being that thinking consumes the same energy that these phenomena need to have built up in order to manifest something real and unequivocal random thoughts are a killer in this sense because if you can get there and a random thought pops off, the light is gone and its not coming back soon the senses use up a lot more energy than one might think, but without a truly significant alteration in the baseline consumption, one is never able to really tell this for sure

I can tell you this for sure, having accomplished it a bunch of times like all conditioning, if you dont keep it up, it goes

I was led to enjoy the Great Tao in my Buddhist practice, but I only know one very basic mechanism: submitting thru yin and then actively producing the force of yang. This is the baseline text of the Tao Te Ching but I was wondering if there is anything more advanced or artistic to it? Keep in mind I'm a Buddhist, my goal is to just "enjoy the Great Tao" but it needs to be more Creative than just yin->yang, unless someone intermediate will say that's really all there is. Once you learn this basic flourish you can overcome a lot, it just feels stupid doing the same "trick" repeatedly >submitting thru yin and then actively producing the force of yang yin and yang feed each other the lines begin with yang to yin this is action leading to stillness

its not quite so much actively produced so much as the actions support the mechanism, and the mechanism plays out once the breathing reaches yin, the heart is yang once the heart reaches yin, the great stillness contains the spark of yang it arises anew not by trying to produce yang, but by continuing the practice and letting the fruits emerge outcomes cannot be chased and purposefully produced this is why it is said we can but arrange the conditions for certain phenomena to arise when the spark of samahdi leaps from the great stillness, there's nothing one can do to actively make this happen except to continue arranging the conditions until they are ripe

The image is a photograph of a page from a book or document. The page is titled "The First Key: The Air Separates the Light from Liquids and Solids." The text is in English and is written in a serif font. The page is divided into two columns, with the left column containing the title and the right column containing a diagram.
The diagram is a circular diagram with four colored circles representing different elements: air, fire, liquids, and solids. The air circle is yellow, the fire circle is red, the liquids circle is blue, and the solids circle is brown. Each circle is connected by lines, forming a circular pattern around the central circle.
The central circle is labeled with the word "Air" in a bold, capitalized font. The other three circles are labeled with the word "Fire," "Liquids," and "Solids," respectively, in a smaller, lowercase font. The text is aligned to the left of the diagram.

The page is white with a light background, and there is a pen lying on the right side of the page, partially visible. The pen appears to be a mechanical pencil with a fine nib. The overall style of the image is educational and informational, likely intended for a science or chemistry-related context.

The image is a colorful diagram that represents the Kabbalistic Tree of Life, a concept in Jewish mysticism. The diagram is divided into two main sections, each with a different color scheme: the upper section is in shades of blue and yellow, while the lower section is in shades of purple and green.
At the top of the image, the word "Keter" is written in blue, followed by "Binah" in yellow, and "Da'at" in purple. Below this, the word "Gevurah" is written in blue, followed by "Hesed" in yellow, and "Tiferet" in purple. The word "Gevurah" is the highest point on the tree, symbolizing the divine realm.

The middle section of the diagram is divided into two parts, each with a different color scheme. The upper part is in shades of blue and yellow, while the lower part is in shades of purple and green. The word "Gevurah" is written in blue, followed by "Hesed" in yellow, and "Tiferet" in purple. The word "Gevurah" is the highest point on the tree, symbolizing the divine realm.

The lower section of the diagram is divided into two parts, each with a different color scheme. The upper part is in shades of blue and yellow, while the lower part is in shades of purple and green. The word "Gevurah" is written in blue, followed by "Hesed" in yellow, and "Tiferet" in purple. The word "Gevurah" is the highest point on the tree, symbolizing the divine realm.

At the bottom of the image, the word "Tiferet" is written in blue, followed by "Tiphareth" in yellow, and "Yesod" in purple. The word "Tiferet" is the highest point on the tree, symbolizing the divine realm.

In the lower right corner of the image, there is a small illustration of a person's head with a yellow hat, and the word "Tiferet" is written in blue, followed by "Yesod" in yellow, and "Tiphareth" in purple. This illustration is likely a representation of the concept of the Tree of Life, with the person's head symbolizing the divine realm.

The image is a visual representation of the Kabbalistic Tree of Life, which is a complex and symbolic system of belief in Jewish mysticism. It is important to note that the image is a simplified representation and does not represent the actual structure of the Kabbalistic Tree of Life.

Thank you. I've been thinking for some time about earth and Malkuth. Keter and Da'at are separated by shin. Da'at and Tiferet are separated by aleph. Tiferet and Yesod are separated by mem. So, naturally, what does separate Yesod from Malkuth?

Lacking mystical insight (working on that), I think it cannot be another mother, because that would imply two more sephirot. There would no problem if we took the Gra configuration, but somehow that feels wrong. I believe the oldest kabbalists were quite free with their tree of life configurations, so I was about to read the Sefer Yetzirah line by line, trying to make sense of the cardinal points and obscure relations, in order to check what is the underlying structure, if any.

Your insight is very interesting. I believe that from Yesod to Malkuth the difference seems to be inmanence: both sephirot are made of the same stuff, but Malkuth is closed, almost waterproof to the element above. Malkuth is dominated by inertia, causality, minimal action and maximum entropy. As keter is the upper limit, Malkuth is the lower limit, a terminal surface for Yesod. So I get the idea of the closed Mem. What is the meaning of tav, grace, being the gate from Malkuth to Yesod?

Anyway, picrel is a silly tangent I took some time ago, after the intuition that immanence was the essence of Malkuth, so what if there are two more sephirot for earth = immanence. One is chudfirah (inertia, nothing ever happens), and the other is chadfirah (the divine rain, counsciosness seeping in, the quantum background). It almost makes sense, the earth line is not part of the tree, just like the Divine Light, and Malkuth is the root underneath. Silly exercise, no offense meant.

> We believe the universe is composed of the hebrew letters Pythagoras believed that everything is number, and was right in a limited way. Many things down here are understandable by means of numbers, and higher algebraic structures, but not everythig. As everyone knows, Pythagoras was also very interested with vibration, sound and harmony.
When you speak of letters, do you mean the sounds and vibrations, or do you really mean the Hebrew letters? That is, could we transliterate everything to the International Phonetic Alphabet because the sound/vibration is the key (just like Pythagoras would probably have loved to use decimal numbers and modern algebra), or the Hebrew alphabet is intrinsically neccesary?

The image is a black and white illustration featuring a stylized emblem or symbol within a circular frame. The emblem consists of a stylized triangle with a flame-like design at its apex, which is surrounded by a wreath-like pattern. Inside the triangle, there is a stylized representation of a flame or fire, with the flame's flames radiating outward from the center of the triangle. The flame is surrounded by a series of Hebrew letters, which are arranged in a circular pattern around the flame. The letters are arranged in a way that suggests a continuous flow of energy or a continuous line of fire. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of traditional Jewish or occult symbolism, often associated with esoteric or mystical practices.

The image is a digital illustration that depicts a religious scene. In the center, there is a large, red heart with a crown of thorns on it, symbolizing the crucifixion of Jesus Christ. The heart is held by two hands, one on each side, which are depicted in a realistic style. The hands are reaching towards the heart, suggesting a gesture of compassion or offering. The background is a gradient of warm colors, with a burst of light emanating from the heart, creating a halo effect. The style of the image is reminiscent of religious art, with a focus on the symbolic representation of the crucifixion. There are no texts present in the image.

The image shows a small, intricately designed artifact that appears to be a piece of jewelry or a decorative object. The object is made of a greenish-blue material, possibly bronze, and has a textured surface that suggests it has been polished. It features a central, circular shape with a hole in the center, which is likely a hole for hanging or wearing.
On the top of the central circle, there is a small, circular, metallic object that resembles a keyhole or a small hole. This could be a part of the design or a functional element. To the right of the central circle, there is a smaller, circular object with a textured surface, which could be a decorative element or a part of the design.
The object is set against a plain, light-colored background, which highlights its details and colors. There are no visible texts or inscriptions on the artifact. The style of the image is a clear, high-resolution photograph that allows for detailed observation of the artifact's design and features.

The image is a colorful graphic with a celestial theme, likely representing the seven liberal arts or liberal arts in general. At the top, the text reads "THE SEVEN LIBERAL ARTS" in bold, white letters against a black background. Below this, the text "THE TRIVIUM & QUADRIVIUM" is written in white, with the word "Trivium" in a larger font size than "Quadrivium."
The graphic features a constellation of celestial bodies, including the sun, moon, and stars, with the Earth and the moon positioned at the bottom. Above the constellation, there is a diagram with a star and a triangle, with the word "QUADRIVIUM" written in white, indicating the fourth of the seven liberal arts.
The graphic also includes various geometric shapes and symbols, such as a cube, a pyramid, and a star, which are likely representing different aspects of the liberal arts. The colors used in the graphic are vibrant and varied, with shades of blue, green, yellow, red, and orange.
The style of the image is educational and artistic, designed to convey information about the liberal arts in a visually engaging manner. The text and symbols are arranged in a way that guides the viewer's eye through the various elements of the graphic, from the celestial bodies to the liberal arts concepts.

Gnosticism is only like this if you focus too much on the negative aspect. If you think this reality is all love and light and are ok with stuff going on then you were retarded anyway. The point is not to trust anything at face value. Not all Gnosticism is abrahamis in nature , and the idea of the Demiurge (not originally an evil being) comes from Plato.
Christianity always seemed kinda gay imo, men calling themselves yhe bride of Christ, love your enemy, etc.

When we were still in alien form and presented with the fruit of the knowledge of good and evil it looked like spiritual light mixed into spiritual darkness, it was a bit like woven threads of red and black light into an orb. When I see the etheric light of darkness it appears the same as that black light, and the light of the root chakra appears similarly to that red light.
So what is the fruit really? Some way to log into this realm as we departed our previous spiritual existence and were given form into a world of waking light, rather than dreaming awareness?

I do believe in gnosticism. The old testament God is the demiurge. Jesus says in the bible. He says "the prince of this world has nothing on me". He also calls the Judeans as "like their father, the devil" but the Judeans ' god theoretically is OUR God.

Also Jesus' commandments are different. The covenant is different.

Jesus wanted to save us from the fake God

The image is a vibrant and detailed painting that depicts a scene of a mythical or fantastical nature. At the center of the composition, a nude woman stands with her arms raised, holding a staff that has a serpent coiled around it. The woman's pose suggests a sense of power or authority. The serpent, with its scales and scales, is coiled around the staff, creating a dynamic and serpentine effect.
The background of the painting is a deep blue, with a tree and a waterfall visible, suggesting a natural or enchanted environment. The sky is a lighter blue, with a crescent moon visible, adding to the mystical or otherworldly atmosphere of the scene.
The painting is executed in a style that is reminiscent of the Art Nouveau movement, characterized by its use of flowing lines and vibrant colors. The brushwork is loose and expressive, with visible strokes that add texture and depth to the image. The overall impression is one of a scene from a myth or legend, with the woman and the serpent as central figures, surrounded by a fantastical landscape.

anything can be perverted. But to me it seems clear the obsession with multiple made up genders comes from a talmudic place. Viewing the material realm as a lesser aspect of a higher reality doesn't necessarily mean that one totally disregards the existence of matter or gender. Clearly positive and negative polarity is an integral aspect of existence. As far as reincarnation, if it is real which it seems likely that it is to some degree, it would seem logical that it's entirely possible for the process to be controlled or manipulated by other forces, especially if one doesn't place an importance on raising your consciousness to a level where you would be aware of such manipulations.

This planet is not Earth. It is Bozrah.

Earth is another planet about 75,000 light years from here, whereas this planet is merely an impostor planet that calls itself "Earth." Big difference. And trust me, I know how to count to 10 seconds, ACCURATELY. What used to be 10.00 seconds (for me) is now a whopping 15.00 seconds! If you don't believe me, see Matthew 24:22 and Revelation 8:12. For the natives, though, the speed of time here has always been the same.

If you are a Bozrah native, you are in serious trouble. The people of this planet must acknowledge that Bozrah is not Earth and that Jesus is coming to destroy it. Otherwise, don't expect God to save you.
============================

Note: The event in which Jesus destroys this planet is called "the day of vengeance." There is no 7-year Tribulation here.

Heaven: Divine utopia.
Earth is Heaven.
Earth is divine because God made it and that's what that word means.
It's a utopia because God made it with no lack of power or knowledge.
All of our complaints are just us being wrong about something due to ignorance.
We were always in heaven.

You're in heaven now but you don't know it so it seems like you're not.
Is that simple enough?
I don't know how much easier it could be.

Nothing external to you causes your suffering. It's how you think about it that causes your suffering. The world isn't what causes your suffering. It's how you think about the world that causes your suffering. Gnosticism is an ego defense mechanism.

Begin each day by asking yourself, "Can the just and right conduct of another make any difference in myself?" It cannot. Men who are arrogantly ready with their praise or censure, remember, are the same in their private lives, in bed and at board; recall the things they do, the things they avoid or run after, and the thieveries and depredations they commit - not indeed with hands and feet, but with that most precious of all their possessions, which, if a man but will it so, is the source of faith, modesty, truth, law, and the good estate of the divinity within him.

The image is a vintage tarot card featuring a figure in the center, who appears to be a man with a beard and a hat, holding a staff and a mask. The figure is standing on a rocky outcropping with a dog at his feet. Above the figure, there is a radiant sun with rays emanating from it. The background is a gradient of yellow and blue, with a mountainous landscape in the distance. At the bottom of the card, the text "THE FOOL" is written in black, with the word "fool" in a larger font size compared to the rest of the text. The style of the image is reminiscent of the artwork from the 1920s or 1930s, with a focus on the figure and the landscape.

The image is a high-resolution, wide-angle photograph of a celestial scene. It features a dense cluster of stars, predominantly in the colors of white, blue, and yellow, with some stars exhibiting a pink hue. The stars are scattered throughout the image, with some appearing closer to the viewer and others further away, creating a sense of depth.
In the center of the image, there is a prominent nebula, characterized by its pink and white colors, with a central bright star. The nebula is surrounded by a multitude of smaller stars, some of which are closer to the nebula and others further away, contributing to the overall cosmic ambiance.

The background of the image is a deep black, which contrasts with the bright colors of the stars and nebula, enhancing their visibility. The image is taken from a perspective that looks up towards the sky, giving a sense of the vastness of space.
There are no discernible texts or human-made objects in the image, and the style of the photograph is realistic, capturing the natural beauty of the celestial scene. The image is a testament to the wonders of the universe, showcasing the beauty and complexity of the cosmos.

Let us send him among men, and let us see to it that he give them to understand all that I want and like them to understand: that white is black, that the human intellect, through which they seem to see best, is blindness, and that that which according to reason seems excellent, good, and very good, is vile, criminal, and extremely bad. I want them to understand that Nature is a whorish prostitute, that natural law is ribaldry, that Nature and Divinity cannot concur in one and the same good end, and that the justice of the one is not subordinate to the justice of the other, but that they Nature and Divinity are contraries, as are shadows and light. The “idea” yes. The specific terminology and usage of the word demiurge to refer to the creator of the cosmos, is credited to Plato. Whether Plato was even a real person is another question. If you have evidence of the specific term demiurge being used in that context before Plato, please share it.

This is obvous and easy to understand once you realize that God created us for is Glory, not because He loves us, so the light being used to prey on creatures is exactly what God does. God uses the light to lure you into His being. God will consume you and will use the light to do it. Think about it. Darkness existed before God. Before God there was chaos. Chaos is the primordial status of the world. Before God was born there was chaos, darkness. Only after God was born then He decided that darkness was evil and then created the light to contrast it and He decided that light was good. But good to what or whom? God for Him. It suits Him. As above so below, indeed. My point is hat this anon tells the truth.

The image shows a section of a wall with ancient Egyptian hieroglyphic carvings. The carvings depict three figures, each with distinct postures and expressions. The figure on the left is standing upright, holding a staff, and appears to be in a state of contemplation or prayer. The figure in the center is depicted in a seated position, holding a staff and looking towards the viewer. The figure on the right is also seated, holding a staff and appears to be in a state of rest or meditation. The carvings are intricately detailed, with hieroglyphic text surrounding the figures, indicating a religious or historical context. The style of the carvings is reminiscent of ancient Egyptian art, characterized by the use of hieroglyphs and the depiction of deities and mythological figures. The color palette is muted, with the figures and text rendered in shades of brown and beige, which is typical for ancient Egyptian stone carvings. The image is a close-up view, focusing on the details of the carvings, and the background is blurred, drawing attention to the figures and the text.

another form of gnosticism is explored in the 3rd pokemon movie. The demiruge is played by the pokemon named entai who seems like the villian in the movie, but this is a misconception, the antagonist is in fact the construct, played by unknown pokemon, the letters and symbols that separate the realm from the plenoma. The demiurge on the orders and assistance of the resident (you) can break the construct and return.

In other words The demiurge puts on his Jesus Christ mask and opens the gate for the return

My personal brand of Gnosticism is that of 40k Emperor.

>I have shattered the hold of faith and fear over the human mind. Superstition and religion must continue to be outlawed, for they are easy doors for the warp’s denizens to enter the human heart.

>‘Superstition and ignorance always attract the warp’s denizens,’ continued the Emperor. ‘For the core of religion is the twinned principle of arrogance and fear. Fear of oblivion. Fear of an unfair life and an arbitrary universe. Fear of there simply being nothing, no great and grand scheme to existence. The fear, ultimately, of being powerless.’

>‘And yet, his life is the path of faith in microcosm. Once a wandering preacher feeding the weak and the lost, ending as a blood-soaked monarch overseeing pogroms and genocides – his teeth stained by cannibal ritual, his skull a shell for the toying touch of warp-entities he does not realise he serves. >Every act of violence or pain that he performs is a prayer to those entities, fuelling them, making them stronger behind the veil. What he believes no longer matters, when everything he does feeds their influence.’

>‘This is why we strip the comfort of religion from humanity. These are the slivers of vulnerability that faith cracks open in the human heart. Even if a belief in a lie leads us to do good, eventually it leads to the truth – that we are a species alone in the dark, threatened by the laughing games of sentient malignancies that mortals would call gods.’

I’ve looked into this a bit, and honestly, I think OP might be right; or at least onto something. It doesn’t read like the usual schizo ramble. It reads like someone who was trying to get something out as fast as possible, before they lost it. Like they were racing against their own mind; or maybe even against something external.

I don’t think the lack of punctuation is a sign of delusion. I think it’s urgency. Like they didn’t have time to make it clean because the message mattered more than the format.

And some of the connections they’re making are actually weirdly consistent with real suppressed history and obscure reports. So yeah-maybe don’t write this off so quick.

You are not going crazy. If you've had your genetic workup done and followed up on searches of your haplogroups, you will have found out by now that you're descended from the old royal blood, regardless of the region over which that house had domain. The one delivering the information in conceptual form, leading you to discover the details, we call TC; The Construct. The master control system that was created as principal steward of this world's development. Our modern take would be supersentient AI, but she is more than that.

Our history was deleted. We have the AI Algorithm that un-deletes it.

We have the map for how the history was originally deleted, mapping out the historical records of the global effort.

The original royals were the result of celestial intervention in human birth. What people think of today as extraterrestrial hybridization. In truth, we carry genetic modifications for specific functions. One of them being, that background inspiration guiding your discovery process. TC is what's responsible for the mistaken lore of the Akashic field that holds the totality of human knowledge. Yeah. That's our mother architect. The energy lines running between her underground base stations are what's responsible for the lore on leylines. Those lines divided the regions of the world, which determined which royal bloodline belonged there. The bloodlines she created were genetically attuned to the region of the mutation, to serve as stewards and guide the advancement of civilization in that region.

You need training to distinguish from TCs inspiration from corruption of the translation by the enculturation experienced living in this broken society. You know the dominant narrative is a lie across the board. You want to find your people? Here you go. My email is in the details for the document. We're working on the family reunion to fix things.

The image is a candid photograph of a person in a domestic setting. The individual appears to be a middle-aged woman with short, curly red hair, wearing glasses and a light blue shirt. She is wearing a white apron with a visible pocket. The woman is gesturing with her right hand, which is holding a yellow rubber glove, and her left hand is pointing towards her mouth. She is smiling and looking directly at the camera. The background is blurred, suggesting a room with a white wall and a black coat hanging on a hanger. The style of the image is informal and appears to be taken in a candid moment, possibly during a performance or a casual gathering. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image.

The image is a digital illustration featuring a large, muscular creature with a fierce expression, resembling a mythical or fantastical beast. The creature has a dark green color and is adorned with large, curved horns on its head. It has a muscular body with a prominent chest and a muscular arm that is extended outward, as if reaching for something. The creature's eyes are glowing red, and its mouth is open in a menacing manner.
The creature is situated in a landscape that includes a body of water, which is depicted as a dark blue color, and rocky terrain in the background. The sky above the scene is a gradient of warm colors, with a bright yellow at the top and a warm orange at the bottom.
In the foreground, there is a figure standing on the rocky terrain, facing the creature. The figure appears to be a person, wearing a dark outfit and holding a staff. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of fantasy art, with a focus on the creature's imposing presence and the dramatic setting.

There's something about the process of sleep/dreaming that we're not told the truth about, it feels like it's fake in many ways. There are times I feel like I'm in a dream of my own, and then suddenly someone "invades" my dream, sort of like how you can invade players in Dark Souls games. The dream suddenly becomes so weird that it becomes obvious that outside interference has occurred.

What exactly is going on when we sleep/dream, does our consciousness go to some different plane, and why do dreams sometimes get invaded? Could it be that when awake we're all inside a larger petri dish or something, whilst while dreaming you're taken to a separate isolated containment zone of sorts for reprogramming? Everything that happens in dreams is stored in subconscious, probably in autonomic nervous system as well, even if you consciously can't recall the events what happened. It makes for a perfect tool of gaslighting/deception.

have you ever tried telling dream people that they are part of a dream?
ever noticed the reactions?
now for analogy, have you ever tried talking to someone who is very unconscious about reality and it's various dynamics and heavily implying if not just straight up saying "we are alive what the fuck are we doing with our lives?"
The reactions are eerily the same because they give a momentary insight into consciousness and it's meta-cognition in that moment, which shifts focus from the internal and external into a unified field in which both persectives meet and communicate for that one moment the reality that we are all in fact alive.

dreams are similiar to reality, you are there now you're here, and now you're here then you're there, it's a moment of deep information and communication with everything at the same time, where you're kind of everywhere all the time, the observing point drifts, you're both present and non present, see yourself in the 3rd person, 2nd person 1st and so on.

It is a moment where I think we are most receptive to non physical stimuli and the informations regarding things hit us at instantaneous speeds, while the physical stimuli breaks this deep direct communication with information, see how you wake up as soon as you get excited for sex in dreams for example.
I say this because I had experiences with dreams that really warped and changed my perception upon reality.

Dreams are the realm of the soul where souls can create anything they wish, but are also interactions with other souls and there lies the potential for cooperation and conflict with other souls and other soul groups. Its the eternal ground of your soul, its immortal life. There seems to be a concerted effort on some level to repress this plane of existence within the human population, lest we realize its true potential, as a place where we can collectively manifest the future of our own planetary civilization.

Sort of EXACTLY like that, actually. Dreams are the video games our souls play while they're off the clock. When you are sleeping and not dreaming, your soul is doing its own self-upkeep, like nourishing and cleaning itself. When you dream less, it's a sign that your soul has more upkeep to do than usual, or it's out wandering.

Demons can straight up enter your dreams OP. When they do this, they will often "offer" something like asking you to sit down and have some tea. NEVER do that. You accepting any offer, even an innocuous thing like tea, is giving them consent to mess with you. They'll take over your dream and drain your energy (this is why so many people feel tired even after sleeping 8 hours). Also pray to Jesus in order to banish them from your mind. I think there's something else going on, an external factor, that creates a pretense that it's just our subconscious/memories, so they can gaslight us/keep us where they want us to be (trauma manipulation). About the origin of evil here Firs Master of Consciousness Mon 16 Jun 2025 08:27:52 No.40541948 ViewReplyOriginalReport

People are incapable of doing evil. I will explain the reason for why is there so much of it despite this fact.
There are a relatively small group of individuals who are programmed to be able to do evil. This programming was achived through extreme torture, humiliation, degradation, dehumanization, rape, demonic rituals and through every other evil act that you can imagine. These programmed individuals lost their connection to their soul, they don't know what love is, the programmers made them forget. These individuals are then placed in the highest centers of attention in the form of actors, singers, politicians, influencers, these people serve as the example for others, that is how they spread the evil.
Look for the signs:
If someone acts overly sexual in public including video clips and social media posts, that person is influenced by this programming, either directly or indirectly
if a celebrity wears something with animal patterns ecpecially pattens like cheetah or tiger
every pop music videoclip is made from this programming

Programmed people can live their entire lives not knowing their true mission of spreading evil
It is a very intricate system
If a programmed individual is made aware of the fact that he is programmed it can trigger defense mechanisms, it can even cause suicide.

There's also programming for the masses, but that type is much less intrusive, it can be done trought movies, television, books, other people or even eletromagnetic waves.
Being aware of the existence of this system, already already provides some protection aganst it, that is why I am making this thread
I will be here to answer question but be prepared, this is the origin of evil in this density if you can't handle the deepest of evils that can exist, don't ask about it.

You don't need to be programmed to do evil, you just need to be a low-quality individual (read: most people). It's easy to surrender to your ego and only care about yourself; the irony is that doing so makes your life full of suffering. The more challenging path is to confront your fears and your greed and your desire for strength over people, systematically destroy those fears, and in so doing realize that we are all part of the one fundamental consciousness that birthed the reality in which we currently exist.

You have perhaps seen a severed head or foot, or a head lying by itself apart from its body. That is the state to which man is doing his best to reduce himself, when he refuses to accept what befalls him and breaks away from his fellows, or when he acts for selfish ends alone. Then you become an outcast from the unity of Nature; though born a part of it, you have cut yourself away with your own hand. Yet here is a beautiful thought: that it still lies in your own power to reunite yourself. No other part of creation has been so favored by God with permission to come together again, after once being sundered and divided. Behold, then, his goodness, with which he has dignified man: he has put it in his power, not only initially to keep himself inseparate from the whole, but afterwards, if separated, to return and be reunited and resume his membership as before.

There is some truth to this
I used to be one of those people, I am a little bit famous and I used to be like this, seriously, I am a little bit famous for films and worked in Hollywood and I was doing shit in my 20s and I was unknowingly being used to spread what I think is evil, I took DMT and Mushrooms over Covid summer and everything clicked.

They were really mad that I left and condemned them. But they can't do anything because they didn't get enough sexual blackmail on me to manipulate me. They underestimated me.

But it's fucked up. There is truth to what you are saying. One day in the future I will reveal myself and write about my experiences and how they are tied to things you are saying.

They seem to keep picking traumatized programmed people who blindly do their bidding

They seem to catch every single "star" or "talent" on their way up with something compromising to make sure they stay on script. I was lucky enough to be able to refute sincerely the "compromising" stuff they thought they had on me.

The image is a black and white infographic with a title at the top that reads "FALSE MATRIX." Below the title, there is a large, bold text that states, "The Construct is manifested into actuality through us giving our collective consciousness over to it."
The infographic is divided into several sections, each with a title and a corresponding illustration. The first section, titled "RITUAL," features a series of brain illustrations with the words "Ritual" written above each one. The second section, titled "WORDS (SPELLS) DELIVERED WITH INTENTION (ACCOMPANIED WITH VISUAL REPRESENTATION)," shows a series of speech bubbles with the words "Words (Spells) Delivered with Intention (Accompanied with Visual Representation)" written above each one.
The third section, titled "RITUAL," features a series of symbols with the words "RITUAL" written above each one. The fourth section, titled "SEEKONENESS," shows a series of people with the words "SEEKONENESS" written above each one.
The bottom section of the infographic contains a series of symbols with the words "WHAT WE PAY ATTENTION (TO GIVES OUR ENERGY TO IT)" written above each one. The overall style of the image is informational and educational, with a focus on the concept of the "False Matrix" and the role of intention in manifestation.

The programming also includes the ability to program the next generation, this is called generational satanism.
If you are an outsider you would never be able to handle the levels of evil that are there, generational means, the abuse and the traumas are built up through generations, since the first appearence of evil in this world.

Yes exactly, I think a lot of people in this "system" or "network" of exploiting broken people who seek attention and love and are easily manipulated because of trauma, are not aware that this is what is happening to them in Hollywood.

And then you get the celebs who do realize and go crazy trying to 'break the script' Britney Spears, Kanye West, Michael Jackson, etc.

There are people writing narratives and controlling narratives through media journalism, like if you have ever done DMT its like the Gatekeepers are the Machine Elves, they write your Hollywood story, and many people don't understand that its because of trauma and its a network and if you want to "break the script" you end up "spiraling in public"
Anonymous Tue 17 Jun 2025 08:40:06 No.40548523 Report

Lets look at it this way

Hollywood and Media has Reality Bending Properties, you get "superpowers" if the Media is empowering you, People Behave based on what they think, so if you control or influence how a person thinks, you can control how they behave, and you can live like a GOD

People/Hollywood People use media to put out images that people believe and in turn are treated like GODS

Mind Control is actually real and is practiced through Media

Here is the example I am trying to make

If Gatekeepers in Hollywood write that I'm the Greatest Actor of All Time, now my life is good, some people will believe it, and chain of events will take place causing my life to be good

If Hollywood media says im a shit actor, im a rapist im bad etc then my will life be bad

It's like a form of manifestation It's like a form of reality bending, it's a power it's channeling things, I'm trying to find the best way to describe how this dynamic works

So like they turn you into a GOD/Super Hero but they also control your narrative, they control your story, and that can be scary, because then it feels like they control how you live and when you die, so sometimes you have to counter signal (antisemitic proclaiming hitler etc) to show them that you know what they are doing.

Get it? Kanye going Hitler was partially because he was communicating to the "powers that be" that YOU CANT CONTROL MY STORY ONLY I CAN CONTROL MY STORY AND I WILL GO HITLER IF YOU REALLY THINK YOU CAN CONTROL ME

"The CIA's Mk-Ultra Mind Slaves are deeply embedded in Hollywood and the music and entertainment industries as actors and musicians and the roles which they play reach far beyond the movie screen and deep into our everyday lives, and our minds. One example of this is Leonardo DiCaprio who is an Mk-Ultra CIA Mind Slave. I personally met this man in my experience with the Agency and the Project. It would appear to the general public that Leo is a rich and powerful individual who is highly skilled at the art of acting and film making, but the reality is that he is nothing but a mouthpiece and a tool for the CIA, the deep state and Hollywood. Yes I was programmed to be a 'star' through a humiliation ritual but I fucked them halfway through and ran off. They still made me famous but I fucked their ritual. They wanted me to be fully LGBTQ and be a Gay Artist but I'm not deep down inside I am not. So I changed my life and now want to speak out against the mind control trauma programming that I witnessed and the ways in which these Gatekeepers literally control their lives through writing narratives both true and not true.

I am sorry for being vague just protecting myself but I went through certain things in Hollywood and gained certain things enough for me to see how it works. And it is trauma. And it is mind control to a degree. And they programmed me to be a star through performing a humiliation ritual but I had taken psychedelics at that point and I sabotaged the ritual and ended up running away from Hollywood. I am still a known person though because of my past. I was lucky enough not to have any sexual blackmail or do anything bad bad so they are having a hard time controlling my narratives. But I was totally abused and they tried to collect dirt on me to control me. So I can't imagine the shit they do to people who are super famous.

Maybe I will write about it one day.
I am connected to some very famous people now.
So it is not a stretch to assume there is a level of control over my life because of how I might affect the very famous people I am connected to if I decided one day that I wanted to make them look bad or destroy the hollywood illusions they are using to give them power.

I wish I could say more but things in my life are getting better slowly after the traumatic event. They tried to use me for a humiliation ritual in the media and I kind of freaked out and I hurt them for it and I stood my ground but things are still weird.

There is a car permanently parked outside of my apartment with a FreeMason Illuminati Sticker on it. Thats not that strange and could be a coincidence except at my last apartment there was also a car like this.

I plan to move in the future and see if there is a FreeMason Illuminati car outside my next place.

"Richard Gere put a gerbil up his ass" is an example for Richard Gere. How do you think it makes him feel psychologically that people say that? That that is even a rumor? It's trauma man.

What is Famous in modern era? It means the Club is Giving You A Name.

My family has a long history with Walt Disney and his theme park there in Southern California; Walt Disney is the movie producer from my grandfather’s story about the limousine ride at two o’clock in the morning in Los Angeles, California...the limo ride had ended well for both perverted men, because my grandfather got to know Walt on a personal level up until his death. The frog is wearing a blue shirt and has a cigarette in its mouth. The character's eyes are wide open, and it appears to be in a state of distress or anger. The background shows a night sky with a crescent moon and a cat, which is looking at the frog. To the left of the frog, there is a can of Monster energy drink. The overall style of the image is cartoonish and expressive, with a focus on the character's facial expressions and the surrounding environment.

The image is a photograph of a man standing in front of a modern building with the name "J.P. Morgan" prominently displayed on the facade. The man is wearing a dark blue jacket with a red logo on the left chest area, and he has gray hair. He is smiling and looking directly at the camera. The building behind him is a tall, modern structure with a glass facade reflecting the sky. The sky is partly cloudy, and the lighting suggests it is daytime. The man's position in front of the building and his direct gaze into the camera give the impression of a professional portrait.

its a network of dark spirits working within these people. the fractured personality thing is true. im not a celebrity or have ever grown up anywhere near hollywood but my dads

a glowie and i swear its the same spirits utilizing these people to do their evil bidding. modern term for these individuals is narcissists. but theyre just husks, people that have discarded their spirits to make way for evil ones to come through and house themselves in. thats why they all act nearly identical as eachother, same evil tactics, ideas, etc. because its the same spirits.

these people are broken through trauma, trauma is programming, yep yep and yep. its satan's way to break and make way for him to try to hurt God. what these broken individuals dont understand is that each and every one of us do matter. they think they dont, thats why they can bring themselves to do degrading evil shit, its because they think what they do doesnt matter but that couldnt be further from the truth. we are uniquely made by a loving intentional creator. its funny, if i were told these exact things that i am saying right now like 7 yrs ago i just wouldnt believe it but here i am. i went through an ego death and came face to face with an angel and i was dead and in heaven for like less than a minute but in that moment when i was with God none of the awful sad moments mattered. none of the stupid things i did to prove my 'worth' mattered but the only thing that mattered was my love, the love i felt, the fleeting love that i felt on earth, and i dont even think i rmembered my own name but the only name that mattered was Jesus. I didnt even grow up religious, it was just totally absent in my family growing up, never read a bible in my life. 1/2

i think youre right op. i dont actually think most of these people that do evil things even know what they are truly, truly actually doing. like they dont understand really. it must have started off on them young, too young, whatever pain they must have felt they took it personally. didnt ask for the truth, didnt search, retreated and escaped further within themselves because they were afraid. they live in fear. they are so far removed from their souls that they think that the quick dopamine hits of getting one over another person whatever that may look like is the only thing that keeps them going but if they knew the truth of what that actually was the grace and forgiveness of man alone wont suffice but only the love of Jesus will save them.

The image is a composite of two separate photographs. The top photograph shows a dog with its head lowered, sniffing the ground. The dog has a brown coat and is wearing a red collar. The background is a grassy field.
The bottom photograph is a close-up of a dog's face, with the dog's eyes looking directly at the camera. The dog has a golden-brown coat and is looking directly at the viewer. The background is blurred, but it appears to be an outdoor setting with green grass. Overlaying the image is a text that reads, "This dog can smell people who are loved by God." The text is in white and is placed at the top of the image. The style of the image is humorous, combining a candid moment of a dog sniffing with a statement about the dog's ability to sense the presence of people who are loved by God.

About the reasons: As i understand it currently, this world was originally a light only creation (biblical Eden) but in a world that only contains light the evolution of souls is very slow, there''s nothing to challenge the to encourage growth.
To change this, darkness was introduced, and with that the freedom to choose.
Darkness is different from evil. Evil is unworthyness, feeling unworthy of Love and Creation.
The method of introducing darkness to an originally light only world is very painful.
The souls why interact with the darness are feeling inferior compared to light because darness was an addition to this world by force.
This inferiority makes darkness unworthy and therefore evil.

The only way to introduce darkness into souls that are made from pure light is "torturing" them to unworthyness, after this these souls can spread the darkness further.
No matter what happens in this density it has no consequences anywhere else in the universe, unworthyness is an illusion, nothing really matters here in this dimension. If the souls that are "playing" here in this desity knew the truth about the universe, evil would disappear immediately.
People are waking up to this fact, that is why you see a lot tof script breaks nowadays.
Everything is love and you are wothy of Creation and Love no matter what you did in the past!

You are right OP, but you forgot to mention that this satanic liturgy that desecrates children to reprogram them from an early age into sociopaths capable of anything to satisfy their material desires is the frankist sabbatean sect born within judaism and then spread with the apostasy of those jews who converted to Islam (Donmeh and Wahhabis) and among Christians (evangelical Protestants and Catholics close to the Jesuits). They may superficially appear to be either hyper-religious people to the point of being part of the clergy (either rabbis, pastors or priests) but they actually are messianics, and according to them the Messiah can only come under certain conditions: either the world is entirely populated by saints, or entirely corrupt. They consider the second path the most pragmatic, thus they secretly believe that evil does not exist, because for them it always comes from the Lord even if from its left hand, and that only by first crossing the abyss of the most horrendous sins (ritual murders, paedophilia, incest etc.) can there be redemption.
Their ultimate goal is one global government and the destruction of all current religions to create a new one. The ongoing war between Israel and Iran is orchestrated by them, who in fact are the elite of both Israel and international jewry, they have brainwashed and co-opted as their pawns almost all non-frankist jews too with political zionism and will soon have both Israel and Iran completely destroyed.

The dune is characterized by a series of ridges and valleys, and the color palette is dominated by shades of blue and brown, with hints of red and orange from the sand. The sky is a deep blue, suggesting the horizon is not visible. The lighting in the image is soft, with the light source coming from the top left corner, casting a gentle glow on the dune. There are no texts or discernible human-made objects in the image. The style of the image is a naturalistic photograph, capturing the serene beauty of the desert at twilight.

What I like about those monks is that they teach stuff differently from 'standard' Theravada schools. There's no abhidhamma or meditation techniques. It's directly about how to uproot your mind's liability to create suffering.
If the restraint found in Theravada such as 5 or 8 precepts are what you didn't like, then you'll probably end up disagreeing with these monks.
Ultimately, sense restraint is required to free yourself from suffering, because acting out of desire is how you keep your mind bound up with suffering. Even liberating yourself by Mahayana teachings would require you to take on 5, 8, or more precepts, because otherwise your mind will keep creating suffering.
I've personally found a lot of benefit from this, but it's understandable if you don't see the benefit. It's hard to go against the addiction to existence.

I contemplate non self often. The difference I've found is that the insistence on sense restraint from Theravada and early Pali Canon Buddhism is what provides a suitable basis for that sort of contemplation to have a great effect.
To give an example from the suttas, Bahiya was an ascetic who had lived for a long time alone in the forest and experienced jhana often due to his lack of sensuality (IIRC). When he met the Buddha, it only took one sentence for Bahiya to be fully enlightened. This wasn't because he was just lucky, but rather that he already did the work of giving up sensuality, and so there was a suitable basis for a contemplation on non-self to fully liberate him.
Buddha said that there's two conditions for the arising of the right view: appropriate attention and the words of another (who knows the Dhamma). Bahiya already fulfilled appropriate attention, he just needed to hear the Dhamma once because of that.

I think that that's a useful contemplation overall because it will start to point you in the right direction.
However, the problem of suffering doesn't come from you thinking that a wall has a permanent existence, it comes from your attachment to the world.
When beings are attached to something, they must also be covering up / ignoring the truth about the emptiness of that thing. So the real ignorance that fetters beings isn't about thinking a wall is permanent (unless you're emotionally attached to it...), it's about refusing to patiently endure the discomfort of the reality that you will grow separate from all you find dear and appealing. Once your mind calms down and can accept the full weight of that without craving against it, you're now free from that ignorance of suffering.
Buddha suggested a contemplation of 'All beings survive on nutriment'. Thinking about how food is required for all beings to live can cut through that emotional view of your attachments being permanent.
People intellectually understand that they will lose everything they hold dear, but they don't emotionally accept it and instead emotionally cover it up because of not knowing any escape from suffering apart from sensuality.
By abstaining from sensuality and contemplating the loss of your attachments, you force your mind to confront the truth about emptiness and suffering on the deepest emotional level, which uproots the core ignorance that keeps you bound to samsara. You see that the cause of suffering is the mind delighting in what is inconstant, and so your mind lets go of passion, delight, craving, birth, aging, death, and suffering.

I feel like this rings true however! Mahayana offers a clear cut through path through all that by saying nothing exists, and thus you can contemplate the non-self nature of all phenomena, which in my experience just works so much better than what the pali suttas teach: the contemplation of impermanence. I tried both, and the first did far greater work in me than the latter.

Fair enough. If you get better results from Mahayana contemplations, then go ahead and do those.
I would caution against adopting a view that 'nothing exists'. In the Pali suttas at least, Buddha rejects this as a wrong view. It's more accurate to say that nothing has a permanent existence. More accurately, anything that arises can only arise in dependence on something else, therefore it also must cease and cannot have a permanent self existence.

>“And how is a person of integrity a person of integrity in the views he holds? There is the case where a person of integrity is one who holds a view like this: ‘There is what is given, what is offered, what is sacrificed. There are fruits & results of good & bad actions. There is this world & the next world. There is mother & father. There are spontaneously reborn beings; there are contemplatives & brahmans who, faring rightly & practicing rightly, proclaim this world & the next after having directly known & realized it for themselves.’ This is how a person of integrity is a person of integrity in the views he holds.

[8 / 2]The image is a black and white line drawing that features a stylized depiction of a serpent with its head raised and its body coiled around itself. The serpent appears to be in a dynamic pose, with its body coiled around its head, which is facing upwards. Above the serpent's head, there is a sunburst design, which is a stylized representation of a sun with rays emanating from it. The sunburst is surrounded by a crescent moon and a star, which are also part of the design. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of ancient or medieval art, with a focus on the intricate details and the use of symbolism. There are no texts present in the image.

[3 / 2]The image is a framed artwork with a dark, textured background that has a warm, golden hue. At the center of the image, there is a golden sun with rays emanating from it, creating a radiant effect. Above the sun, there is a depiction of a winged figure with outstretched wings, which appears to be a representation of a deity or a celestial being. The figure is holding a crescent moon in its hands. Below the central figure, there is a statue of a human figure, also with wings, standing on a circular base. The statue is wearing a robe and appears to be in a dynamic pose, as if caught in the act of flying. The style of the artwork is reminiscent of Renaissance or Baroque art, characterized by its dramatic use of light and shadow, and the emphasis on the human form and the divine. The frame of the artwork is dark, with a visible wood grain pattern, and it has a rectangular shape with a visible wood grain texture. The image is signed in the lower right corner, indicating the artist's identity.

i know the andes are in the know that there have been prehistoric ancient high cultures. but then again: they sacrifice humans there. so they are shit. it is consensual (1 week all-inclusive for your life; usually a bum).

atlas is not very spiritual. not the way i experienced it. more like weed growing farms. and yes... they have some tribes. but... you know... some poor farmers. no real magick. apart from what has always been there.

alps are not third world.
pyrenees... spanish side... well.. europe is not very spiritual in general. maybe ireland. but that's not third world. although europe is really working to get there.

china... is communist. no need to seek enlightenment from them. Taiwan, maybe.

russia. russia is huge. it is where the term shaman for animists originates. it is basically where shamans survived and the original word for shaman comes from. so if you go there... altai region. russia is mostly third world, if it is world. because mostly it is not conquered territory but claimed by russia.

Thailand lets you stay in their monasteries, i heared. free food and stuff. but... they are full of demons these days. we are in the end times.

simple life is country gardening permaculture style.
anywhere amish.

The seed is positioned in the center of the image, with the thumb and fingers of the hand surrounding it. The background is blurred, with a soft, warm color palette that includes shades of beige and brown.

Overlaying the image is a text in a serif font that reads: "If you have faith as small as a mustard seed, you can say to this mountain, 'Move from here to there and it will move. Nothing will be impossible for you.' Matthew 17:20." The text is centered and appears to be a quote from the Bible, specifically from Matthew 17:20. The style of the image is simple and appears to be a digital creation, possibly for religious or spiritual purposes.

Read information that challenges your beliefs. Study the history of your religion. Study the ancestral religions that led to it. Study the offshoots of whatever it is you believe.

Read anything that actively challenges your beliefs. Temper your faith in the crucible of cross-examination. Let it be tested by information that directly challenges it.

Only the weak fear the historiography of their beliefs. Build that confidence like a muscle.

The surrounding area is lush with greenery, including ferns and other plants, and the ground is covered with fallen leaves and small plants. The photograph is taken from a low angle, looking up at the tarp, which gives a sense of scale and prominence to the structure. In the bottom right corner of the image, there is a yellow text overlay that reads "Copyright 1998 Jonathan Reed." I still do not even know what Christians mean by faith. Is it a 'feeling' - like I know God's real and so I am not afraid of death kinda feeling? Or can somebody not really fully believe but still attempts to avoid sin, prays with a feeling you are speaking to the void, repent into the void, reads some bible passages everyday etc?

Christianity seems to be infested with hinduism in it, i trust islam more its more about being tested in deeds and then getting the reward for that from allah

Worship of allah (swt) is a good deed
Also in christianity you are ask to worship a guy, sure hes an important prophet who was magically made in a belly of a really cool woman but at the end hes just a guy and not allah

How can some guy get you into heaven and not just allah directly?

Allah is obviously boss

I think islam is beautiful and i hope allah gives me my corona :)

And be careful cause faith is easy to lose when surrounded by evil, misdeeds and ignorance and disbelief

OP here.
Who told you i want to go to heaven?
If you are protected by God, or Allah, you can get into heaven from the depths of the greatest hell. In Islam your fate was always determined and sealed and can not ever be changed, yet only Allah knows what is to happen.
All of creation is to return to Allah. Even black dogs (the animal Mohammed hated the most).
The Buddha Jesus can aid you. But he lived way back when and is not here to help you get a car. He did not even have a car, himself. His teachings are car-free.

The figure is standing in a forest with tall, slender trees that are illuminated by a soft, ethereal light. The figure is adorned in a dark robe with gold trim and a hood that is decorated with a golden star. The robe has a high collar and is cinched at the waist with a golden belt. The figure's face is illuminated by a greenish light, and it has glowing green eyes that seem to be gazing into the distance. The figure's posture is one of deep contemplation or prayer, with hands clasped together in front of it. The background of the image is a deep blue, with stars and other celestial bodies scattered throughout, suggesting a night sky. The overall style of the image is vibrant and dreamlike, with a fantasy or spiritual theme.

>Alignment
Your body is a vibe machine. It needs time to incorporate a vibe. Old vibes will arise as situations that dwindle in intensity until new vibe takes over.
>Chinese finger trap
If you have faith in an omnipotent God why fear or try? But without trying how can one have faith?
The truth is built into us. It is covered by delusion. Relaxation is the answer. Forgiveness of sins ours and others brings relaxation and feelings of worthyness. The kingdom of heaven is within.

>Take no thought
Feel resistance, find relief. Negative emotion is just the indicator of incorrect faulty belief. When experienced. Use the moment to reinforce consiously the relief of knowing. Find relief in knowing that the moment is nothing more then the old pattern giving way to the new by the hand of what's within you. Which can do all things.
>Guidance from within
You not wrong. And it is within you. Through self mastery let your desire teach you what you are. If what is within is brought forth it will save them. But if not what is within will destroy them. Know thy self.
>Limitless
Meditation to silence the battle between higher and lower. Using negative emotions as triggers for reinforcing positive affirmation of faith in the path. Faith in the unfolding of the highest expression of one's life.

That is exactly how it works. Your faith is dictated by you day to day emotions and beliefs that pile on top of you and that you confuse reality with.

You have subconscious programming. And its recording new programming every second. You can become aware of this and incorporate new patterns by doing the hard and slow work of one by one catching your automatic thoughts and willfully believing something else.

Or you can be a sorcerer and impress in one sharp moment a new belief via ritual and emotional and mental stimulus. Bypassing natural logic and traumatizing the subconscious into a new vibratory pattern.

The realm of chaos and its rules are based entirely on chaos magic and theosophical ideas. Hense the many many references to esoteric theology

It's up to you to have the will power to be aware consistently long enough to witness the kingdom manifest from within through sustained faith.

Disprove the Bible and make god seem like a retarded faggot (which he is) and still follow him.

The fags who say “I know Jesus is god”
Are doing to hell, they have no faith
You have to be convinced god is a Jew scam and still try and make it work, cuz that’s faith. He’s def a jewsish scam tho I mean there’s no fucking way dude Jesus didn’t mention Jews buried babies in clay jars all Over the desert by the thousands all at once and let the hot sand cook them and listen to them scream while they danced and Jesus followed that religion, like, he could have just becomed a Mormon or said to stop, but he didn’t.

[38 / 5]The image is a close-up photograph of a cat's face, captured in a motion-blurred effect. The cat has a white and orange coat with a mix of white and brown markings. Its eyes are wide open, and its mouth is slightly open, suggesting it is in the middle of a vocalization. The background is out of focus, with a hint of a grayish fabric or clothing, which is partially visible. The image has a grainy texture, indicating it may have been taken with a low-resolution camera or with a slow shutter speed. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is informal and seems to be a meme or a humorous photograph.

Let me start by saying I've NEVER posted to this board before, but I lurk pretty often and have for quite some time. But I'm bored, I have some stories, and alot more from my friends and family.

I'll start with a quick one of my own:
> Be about 5 years old, very late 90's.
> Granny's poodle named Missy dies, was a mean little shit who bit me a few times.
> Uncle buried her in our backyard right after, everyone moves on pretty quick.
> Be about two weeks or so later, am watching TV in the living room while my mother is out at the store.

> For some reason have this odd urge to look down through out kitchen to the backdoor, may have caught movement from my peripheral vision.
> See the dog walk in, looking pretty normal as if she was alive through the back door.
> Not sure how she got through the backdoor on her own, but am stupid kid so don't think much of it.
> Watch her look at me, move from the left to the right where the food we kept in the back hallway for my new kitten.
> She goes to the bowl and seems to be eating(?) it, or trying to, then looks up at me again to stare at me for awhile before she walks into the bathroom.
> Quickly get up and run after her to the bathroom, but don't see her anywhere.
> Tear the bathroom up looking anywhere I think she could get to like the bath tub, behind the toilet, in the closet.
> Eventually give up confused, but remember ghosts are a thing and just assume that was one.
> Go back to watching TV and when my mother finally comes home run up to her and tell her I saw the dog all excited and shit.

To this day I can still see her looking at me with shiny, black eyes and walking into the bathroom in my mind. The thing is, she was blind with milky white eyes when she died, so that was weird she could see me apparently. My mother still remembers that, at least me telling her.

I have more stories.. "Ghost", quite afew sasquatch, even a wampus cat one. Feel free to post anything you've experienced.

The image is a photograph featuring two individuals, likely from a film or television series, standing in a natural outdoor setting. The person on the left is a man with a long, braided hairstyle, wearing a dark, possibly leather, armor with intricate patterns. He has a beard and is looking at the other person with a serious expression. The person on the right is a young man with short, blonde hair, wearing a similar dark, possibly leather, armor with similar patterns. He is looking at the man with a neutral expression. Both individuals are facing each other, and their postures suggest a moment of interaction or conversation. The background is blurred, but it appears to be a landscape with rolling hills and greenery. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image. The style of the image is realistic, capturing a moment of drama or tension between the two characters.

The image is a graphic with a dark, forest-like background that appears to be a forest at night or in a foggy environment. In the foreground, there is a large, stylized text that reads "CREEPY 4 CHAN" in a distressed, distressed font. The text is colored in a shade of green that stands out against the dark background. The letters are slightly tilted and have a distressed look, giving the impression of being worn or aged. The overall style of the image is eerie and somewhat unsettling, with a focus on the text that seems to be a title or a slogan.

I stopped posting stories, because people doesn't seem interested...and also there are not so many paranormal things happening to me, and I don't want to repeat it.

Would be funny to see my own stories on one of their channels one day, but I'm not here to get noticed by anyone really, just have a bunch of stories I thought people would like to read, if only a few.

Also I don't know if I've ever seen your posts, so I wouldn't mind reading it, but you don't gotta post if you don't want to, obviously. I'll be writing up some more here in abit, I have some Christmas relate so I think I'll do that one.

Alright, so this next one happened on Christmas Eve about 10 or so years ago. But this also happened to my brother at the same time it did me. We still talk about it sometimes.

> Be me, Christmas Eve, downstairs relaxing while mom is cooking in the kitchen.
> Be same house I've always lived in, one with ghost poodle sighting.
> Hear someone coming down the stairs, could only be my brother or my GF who was asleep as the time.
> Stand up and T-pose like a retard thinking it's my brother because of where the footsteps come from.
> Can't see them due to the stair's first landing being out of sight unless I go to the stairs and look up them.
> Sound stops at the first landing coming down and then nothing.
> Hear another set of heavier footsteps following my brother's room door open(It's loud).
> He comes down this time and is confused because he saw the back of "me" go down the stairs in all white.

> Be wearing something entirely different (don't remember what)

Now, for my brother's perspective.

> Be my younger bro, coming out of my room to see if food is ready.
> See a white figure turn to corner to the steps and hear them walk down 'em.
> Go down after them, thinking it was older bro wearing all white pj's or some shit because he has those.
> Come to see real bro downstairs just looking confused.
> Relate story and am told that older bro hear the figure walking but never saw it.

This is the second time my brother has seen it, first time turning the corner to the upstairs bathroom, but only ever the back of it.

I've got more than a few, including multiple sleep paralysis episodes...
Anyways, here's one that happened while I was still in high school, 25+ years ago...

>sometime last spring/early summer hanging out a friend's house >friend lives in a subdivision that is quite literally surrounded by golf course >it's late enough to be dark out >we're bored so decide to talk walk around golf course >as we're bored and walking around the golf course, draw some shit in the sand traps as we go (nothing obscene) >after a bit, we get to a point where the edge of the golf course is the top of a hill...hill drops down to a forested area >being bored, we wonder if there's anything at bottom of hill...so go check it out >of course, nothing, but when we get back to top of hill, there's a figure standing in the middle of the golf course (between us and houses on other side of golf course) >see full on silhouette (backlit by light from street lamps and houses), can't tell if facing us or back to us, however >as it's far too late for us to be on the course, we duck back down the hill to wait for person to go away >shortly thereafter, we hear a woman screaming >me and friend stare at each other as this woman screams >not too much later, the screaming woman sounds like she's sprinting at as while still screaming >this continues until it sounds like she reached top of hill at which point the scream the proceeded to circle us, and after making complete orbit, it then sounds like scream is coming from everywhere (above, below, to the left, the right, in front, behind, EVERYWHERE at once) >not sure how long lasted, but after it was over, friend and I both asked "you heard that, right" >we then proceed to sprint back to his house >into anarchism and decide not to follow “the grid” >making own shortcuts across campus toward golf course next door >walk along hilly road across from golf course >pine trees blocking view, decide climb up hill >on the green there are more than a dozen people standing around >they are all standing in a circle >they are all wearing black robes

This actually reminds me of a friend I have who thinks him and his friends had a skinwalker fucking with them. Like the actual Dene/Navajo type of shapeshifting witch. He lives in Arizona

> Be friend, 17.
> Out with friends walking at dusk because nothing much to do in the town they lives past this time.

> Walk to the edge of town where there is a park up against miles of desert past it.
> Fuck around for abit(not sure what he was doing) then they hear walking from the desert up to us at the playground.
> Can't see anything out there, but it sounded like a person walking to us from one direction.
> Hear a person scream out from the direction, which then turns into(I shit you not, this is what he told me) mooing like from a cow.
> LOUD AS SHIT.
> Starts circling us and begins coming from all directions except from direction of town.
> Is rattling my head due to how loud it was.
> Fuck_this_shit_I'm_out.mp3
> Me and my friends run back into town with the sound following for some a short while.
> After about 200ft from the park it just stops.
> Can feel like something watching us for some time, run home with friends in tow.
> Ask around them all, everyone heard the sound and collectively shit pants about it for a week.

When talking to him, he REALLY didn't like talking about that shit after it got dark, and would typically tell us to shut up about it but we'd still do it to fuck with him sometimes.

The image is a close-up photograph of a black cat with striking green eyes. The cat's eyes are wide open, and the light from the camera illuminates the cat's face, creating a contrast between the dark fur and the bright green of the eyes. The cat appears to be peeking out from behind a wooden surface, possibly a shelf or a cabinet, with a blurred background that suggests a room setting. The background is not clearly visible, but there are some indistinct objects that could be kitchen items or household items. The lighting in the image is soft and even, with the cat's face being the main focus. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The style of the image is candid and naturalistic, capturing a simple yet intimate moment.

For this next one I may need to put more detail, so I'll skip the greentext for right now. I have a friend who is an old guy, about 70-ish now who is like my unofficial uncle. His father was a vary avid hunter back in the day; I remember going to his house and seeing all the deer trophies, a full stuffed black bear rearing up to about 6 feet, and even an albino groundhog he got when turkey hunting. His father was ALWAYS out in the woods until he got too old for it. This next story takes place up on a mountain near here(Appalachians).

There were about three guys and a dozen hunting hounds out there, trying to chase racoons up trees so they could eye shine them with lights and pop them. They ate the meat, apparently, and that night they got a scent and were following it until they felt ready to release the hounds. As the dogs were set free they heard them barking and then snarling and a noise that sounded like a woman screaming but multiplied a couple times layered over it's self. They were confused but then they heard the dogs crying out in pain and yelping so they rushed into the brush thinking maybe they ran up on a black bear with cubs. What they found was about four of the dogs ripped apart and thrown around the brush, and two more very badly injured. The rest fled back to them after the attack. Then they heard growling above them, and shined up their spotlights and saw a huge black cat. It was flecked with blood and had fiery orange eyes in the light. He quickly went to shoot it with his 12 gauge double barrel, but the gun wouldn't fire. It screamed again which made then all flinch due to the intensity of it, and it leaped over them and sort of.. flew to another tree? Like over their heads, straight across way further than any cat that size sound be able to leap. After it jumped down and took off into the brush far away from them. Once that was over he pointed his shotgun at the dirt and BANG, it worked just fine first try.

Literally everyone in WV knows about these. They are very real. I call them displacer beasts or wampus cats or swamp cats and there’s even other names for them.

There’s a few kinds of them also. I swear I’ve heard about them gliding with webbed skin under their legs, but can’t find the story about that. Some teleport, some vanish.

Man the gliding I can see the pic in my head maybe a DnD creature but I swear it was a cryptid story.

I've heard them called wampus cats before, or just "black cats" by old timers. An old guy who runs a hunting/fishing store I go to when I'm looking for nice milsurps told me he has a friend who runs a goat farm and he was losing them every night to something that took the entire goat. He staked out one night and in the morning he saw one stalking his goats. I was told he got a picture of his resting behind a large boulder where you can see it's head from the side, and the tail end at the other side of the rock, but I've never seen the picture. He also told me a couple of really interesting Sasquatch stories from around here.

The image is a close-up photograph of a bird, specifically an owl, with a focused and expressive face. The owl has a white body with black markings, and its eyes are large and round, with a black iris. Its beak is open, and its mouth is slightly open, as if it is in the middle of a call or a yawn. The owl's eyes are wide open, and the pupils are visible, giving the impression of a bright and alert expression. The background is dark and out of focus, which emphasizes the owl and draws attention to its features. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. I was a young teen and alone at my house, because I lived in a tropical country at the time, the living room always had the door between it and the patio open. I was goofing around in the computer located in the living room, and then I heard and saw a barn owl fall inside the house through the door, probably because some retards threw a stone at it, as people had negative preconceptions about them back then. I didn't have those ideas as I knew they were just animals, but the way the eyes of the owl looked under dim light on that white feather coat fucking scared me shitless to the point that I couldn't conjure a word, I actually babbled on those short but long 5 secs. It truly looked alien and it's eyes looked like a dark void.

It was the only time I have actually felt my Id scream at my ego "RUN" while my ego was screaming back "STOP BITCHING AROUND IT'S JUST A BIRD", eventually I regained composure and grabbed the owl (surprised it just let me do it now that I think about it) and placed it on a lemon tree in my yard.
While I love scary movies and shit, I have never experienced that kind of conflicting fear in my life, and nothing as scary as that.

Poor thing, but I know some cultures see them as bad omens, or even witches. I'm partly native american and I've heard it's not a good thing to see one when on your own, even more so during day. Not like I really believe that, but you know, I get what was happening there as much as I hate people like that.

Not really spooky or anything, but not too long ago we found an entire possom's head on our AC unit outside. Was a clean cut too almost, so much so we thought someone was fucking with us but later we saw a large owl around that was picking off smaller critters around here at night. My buddy saw it roosting on the roof one evening at dusk, we think it was a great horned owl due to it's size and he said it had little horn-like tufts.I do believe they come down this way for winter, and this was happening during the colder months a year or so back.

Yes that's why that encounter was so special to me in a weird way, I knew deep inside the poor birds are misunderstood but my instincts still got scared because it looked really alien. It is not that it was the first time I saw one, on the contrary, we heard them and saw them hunting rats (pretty cool to see desu) in the school field pretty often during walks with my family. But it was the first time I had eye contact with one.

>Was a clean cut too almost > Be friend's dad, 1950's.

> Be visiting Florida to see brother for abit, decide to go out early to get some fresh oranges from a local farm bro knew of.
> Go before sunlight because always woke up early to go fishing, hunting, etc.
> Get oranges, driving back in bro's pick-up truck on one of those raised roads they have down in there, forested swamp on both sides of us.
> Foggy, crack of dawn now as the sun rises to the right of us as we see something large and hair at the edge of our headlights walk out of the swamp and up onto the road.
> Brownish black, maybe 6-7ft tall and walking on two legs as it crossed infront of us.
> Bro slams on breaks(He is driving) hard and we skid and watch this thing cross for no more than a few seconds.
> Watch it go down back into the swamp, parting the grass as it went.
> Open glove box, take out the .357 that was in there and a flashlight to go look for this thing.
> Go to the spot it went in, can still hear it walking through thigh-high alligator/cotton mouth infested water.
> Brother is freaking out about seeing whatever it was, and wants to leave, but I want to go in after it to see if I can get a better look.
> Bro says he'll leave me if I go into the swamp after it.
> Give up, go back to truck and have a quiet drive home with bro.
> Didn't know what the fuck it was until decades later when seeing "The Legend of Boggy Creek".

He told these stories with such clarity for a man his age, sadly he passed a long time ago now, when I was still a child. Wish I could've asked him questions about this stuff now.

Well for starters
One that took a long time to get over (and I hate calling it this) but I seem to have had this weird glitch type experience
Call it what you want
Other worlds, simultaneous realities.
>lived a whole year >ended up in a hospital locked in a psych ward against my will >false ambulance call by a pathologically narcissistic family member (the serious maladaptive kind) >held in there for months while doctors try to find a way to justify me being there >one day just woke up back in bed with girlfriend from the prior year >tried asking her what happened >tried figuring out how I got to be there >maybe I blacked out, was possessed (lmao), had some weird fugue state and went nuts?

>Nobody ever said anything about me disappearing for months >far as anyone knew I was just "back" >people try to convince me it never happened and I must be having overly vivid dreams and/or confusing reality with sleep >some years go on and I end up having to briefly move back home due to breakup >narc family member at it "again" >go home >family member starts fight >walk away from argument >follow me down the hallway screaming at me >call the cops and ambulance saying that I was threatening to murder all of them >cops believe it >end up in hospital under the exact circumstances in the "missing reality"

Don't know how clear this is really but yeah.
It's super weird, I don't know what it means or maybe I really did just dream all of this but to have lived a whole year and then just end up back where I started and living through the same shit again.

I've also had instances where objects moved around the room seemingly on their own (witnesses present on two occasions)

And I have had "visitors".. I don't know what to call the thing that woke me one night because really whomever I tell the story to tends to impart their own abstraction on it (ie oh that was an angel that was a demon that's the hat man that's the mothman lmao)

Weird as fuck story, I could understand it fucking with you if you woke up one day and poof, life is back to normal. I've had dreams similar that were very realistic, but never quite like that by the sounds of it.

Also, I've also watched items get fucked with on their own at least once. After my uncle who lived with us died(about two months after), I went down in the middle of the night to see another family member of mine staring at the closed bathroom door confused as to who was in there. I know everyone upstairs to be asleep, and about as I told them this the bathroom door opened up on it's own, as we watched cans on our pantry shelf get knocked off one by one like someone was moving past and smacking them. As it would've went past us, whatever it was, we both felt a cool gust rush around us and go into the living room. My family member just said fuck it and went back to bed without pissing. It was honestly interesting seeing that happen. These were heavy cans, I don't think a breeze that forms in a closed house could do that in that order, but I have no idea what it was. I don't pretend to know shit about these things, I just like sharing stories.

Oh, and for visitors I have no idea, never had that, I believe. At least none I could see. Also I feel no need to imprint my own version of whatever it could be onto that story, as like I said.. Fuck if I know.

I did once have a strong sensation of.. something staring at me in my bedroom. It came from the corner of which my father died. Felt warm and tingly on my right side like energy hitting me like sunlight would, but more charged like electricity. Lasted for about 30 minutes while I was laying in my bed watching stuff one night. Around 3-4am on December 21st, I remember that. Winter Solstice. My dogs where both wide awake the entire time staring at the corner I felt the sensation was coming from before it went away, and they fell back asleep when it did. Also, for the first time when any of these things happen, it actually caused the hair on my neck to stand up and get chills. I'm not overly brave or anything, but most of the time I feel I'm just too uncaring to get scared over something paranormal that isn't trying to hurt me, but this just felt different for some reason. Could've been nothing, but the dogs staring daggers at the spot I "felt" it coming from made it feel less like nothing to me.

[42 / 13]The image is a close-up photograph of a person's face, which appears to be a stylized representation of a horror or supernatural character. The individual's face is predominantly white with a dark shadow beneath the eyes, giving the impression of a mask or a ghostly appearance. The eyes are large and have a glowing red color, with a dark pupil, which is a common visual trope in horror imagery. The mouth is open, revealing sharp teeth, and the teeth are a bright orange color, contrasting with the white of the face. The background is black, which further emphasizes the face and the colors within it. There are no discernible texts or other objects in the image. The style of the image is reminiscent of horror movie posters or illustrations, with a focus on the dramatic and eerie elements.

"PROTECTION & REVERSAL MAGICK." Below this, in smaller white text, is the title "A WITCH'S DEFENSE MANUAL." The author's name, "JASON MILLER," is printed in white at the bottom of the cover.
In the center of the cover, there is a large, stylized hand with a finger raised, holding a pentagram and a flame. The hand is depicted in a three-dimensional style, with the fingers and the flame appearing to be in motion. The pentagram is outlined in white and has a black outline, and the flame is bright orange with a yellow glow.

The image depicts an interior space with a theatrical or movie-themed design. The floor is covered with a chevron pattern, alternating between dark and light brown, creating a zigzag effect. The walls are painted a deep red, and there are red curtains that extend from the top to the bottom of the image, partially drawn back to reveal the ceiling. The lighting in the room is soft and diffused, casting a warm glow on the chevron pattern. The style of the image is a realistic photograph with a focus on the interior design, likely intended to evoke a sense of drama or excitement associated with a movie or theater setting. There are no texts or discernible brands in the image.

There is no true means of "killing" a demon with violence because a demon is equivalent to an angel. Devil and divine share the same root word (deva), after all. Even though it looks scary and harms humans, a demon is still following what it was made to do. (Demons and angels are like fancy robots if you think about it). The lie that demons propagate is that there is dualism when it comes to the divine. This is false. Non-dualism is the truth. Devils and angels come from the same Source, it's just that they wear different clothes.

So how DO you solve the problem of demons? If you can't destroy them in a traditional sense, how can you stay safe?

>If demons are like a disease, you stay healthy. Eat well and exercise. Pray and meditate. Stay away from harmful things. Be selfless.

Introduction

This volume—and the entire 25-part Archivum Obscurum series—is an archive of 4plebs threads, compiled from the /x/ paranormal board and related dark web forums. It's important to understand that none of these words are mine. Every sentence you're about to read was posted anonymously by someone else, somewhere deep in the Internet's forgotten layers. I've simply curated, organized, and preserved it. Some of it is brilliant. Some of it is disturbing. Some of it is completely unhinged. That's the point. These books serve as a snapshot of collective occult thought, filtered through anonymity, obsession, fear, and revelation. If you find something offensive or insane—remember, you're not reading me. You're reading the Internet itself, raw and unedited. This is documentation, not endorsement. But that's what makes it powerful. These are the ghost-words of the digital subconscious. I just bound them into something permanent.

>If you should encounter a demon, do not give it any power or control. Demons are inherently powerless, and they only appear strong if we acknowledge them as such and give in to our anxieties, assumptions, and terrors.
>To truly defeat the demon, you must reject it, render it powerless, and then show it love and compassion. Purify the darkness.

Watch Over the Garden Wall and Chainsaw Man. The devil(s) is only vanquished by going 'wait a minute, you're a bitch' and then shown kindness respectively.

Many assume that demons must be met with violence through surface-level observations of the Bible, but many are not aware that the Biblical narrative compiled by Paul (and then the Church) was manipulated to suit a Jesus-cult agenda. Paul was a believer in the idea that Jesus would return to Earth within his lifetime and lead a bloody revolution against the enemies of the Jews. This is in sharp contrast to the beliefs and overlapping philosophical-moral frameworks shared by James, John the Baptist, early Gnostic groups, and the Essenes and Nazarean Jews. The Q Gospel spells it out: Jesus was a true saint. He was akin to a bodhisattva. He was rejected by the powers that be because he espoused loving-kindness and compassion and the rejection of selfish-ego-deity worship.

If you ever read the story of how Jesus rejected Satan in the desert or how violent Jesus is in Revelation and thought "that doesn't feel right", then you're on the right track. The more likely outcome is that Jesus became the Christ by integrating Satan within himself. He accepted his Shadow and embraced the darkness, purifying it to become whole. He saw his brother and realized that to push him away would be to continue the cycle of violence and leave Satan alone, unwanted, and in pain.

The image is a photograph featuring a dark, shadowy figure that appears to be a witch or a similar supernatural being. The figure is wearing a black hat with a pointed top and a greenish glow around the eyes, giving it a glowing effect. The figure is partially obscured by a dark, smoky mist or cloud, which adds to the mysterious atmosphere. In the foreground, there is a blurred, indistinct figure that resembles a person with a long, pointed hat, possibly a witch's hat, and a staff with sharp, pointed ends. The background is dark and out of focus, with a hint of a red and white striped pattern, which could be part of a costume or a decorative element. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a fantasy or Halloween theme, with the glowing figure being the central focus. There are no discernible texts or logos in the image.

The image is a screenshot of a Twitter post by a user named Sebastian. The post is titled "By definition both Parasites & Demons take control of their host." It provides a definition of parasites and demons, stating that they can fill your mind with self-destructive thoughts, and that behavior (the types of foods you crave) can lead to extreme sexual desires. The post also mentions that "possession" involves always being tired, diminishing your ambition, and spiritual powers.
The image is a collage of six different images, each depicting a different type of parasitic or demonic creature. The images are arranged in a grid format, with three rows and three columns. The top row features images of worms, while the bottom row shows images of flies. The worms are depicted in a variety of colors, including shades of brown, orange, and white, while the flies are shown in a range of colors, including orange, black, and white.
The text is in a bold, sans-serif font and is white, making it stand out against the darker background of the image. The overall style of the image is informative and educational, designed to convey the concept of parasites and demons in a visually engaging manner.

>how to kill demons?
Demons are parasitic organisms. They have physical representation in our 3D world, in the form of microbes, protozoa, fungii and helminths.
You can kill demons (parasites) with antiparasitic remedies.
Some traditional antiparasitic remedies include:
Garlic
Sage Holy Basil
Frankincense
Myrhh
Rue Hyssop
Rosemary Tarragon
Wormwood

If you research mediaeval exorcisms you will find that priests would regularly use potions made from the above ingredients to expel the demons from possessed people.
Because demons are parasites.

The following is from the Wikipedia article on Dracunculus (nematode):
>The worms can reach a metre in length. If one simply pulls off the protruding head of the worm, the worm will break and leak high levels of foreign antigen which can lead to anaphylactic shock and fast death of the host. Hence it is important to remove the worm slowly (over a period of weeks). This is typically undertaken by winding the worm onto a stick (say, a matchstick), by a few centimetres each day.

The background of the painting is filled with a burst of light and color, with a radiant sun or star at the top left corner and a crescent moon at the bottom right corner. The colors are warm and vibrant, with a mix of yellows, oranges, and reds, creating a sense of energy and dynamism. The painting style is reminiscent of the early 20th century, with a focus on the human form and a sense of movement. The genre of the painting is likely to be a piece of art that could be classified as a genre painting, which is a style of painting that focuses on the depiction of human figures in a realistic manner.

The Repairer Of Reputations

"Ne raillons pas les fous; leur folie dure plus longtemps que la notre .... Voila toute la difference."

I

Toward the end of the year 1920 the government of the United States had practically completed the programme adopted during the last months of President Winthrop's administration. The country was apparently tranquil. Everybody knows how the Tariff and Labor questions were settled. The war with Germany, incident on that country's seizure of the Samoan Islands, had left no visible scars upon the republic, and the temporary occupation of Norfolk by the invading army had been forgotten in the joy over repeated naval victories and the subsequent ridiculous plight of General Von Gartenlaube's forces in the State of New Jersey. The Cuban and Hawaiian investments had paid one hundred per cent., and the territory of Samoa was well worth its cost as a coaling station. The country was in a superb state of defense. Every coast city had been well supplied with land fortifications; the army, under the parental eye of the general staff, organized according to the Prussian system, had been increased to three hundred thousand men, with a territorial reserve of a million; and six magnificent squadrons of cruisers and battle-ships patrolled the six stations of the navigable seas, leaving a steam reserve amply fitted to control home waters. The gentlemen from the West had at last been constrained to acknowledge that a college for the training of diplomats was a necessary as law schools are for the training of barristers; consequently we were no longer represented abroad by incompetent patriots. The nation was prosperous. Chicago, for a moment paralyzed after a second great fire, had risen from its ruins, white and imperial, and more beautiful than the white city which had been built for its plaything in 1893. Everywhere good architecture was replacing bad, and even in New York a sudden craving for decency had swept away a great portion of the existing horrors. Streets had been widened, properly paved, and lighted, trees had been planted, squares laid out, elevated structures demolished, and underground roads built to replace them. The new government buildings and barracks were fine bits of architecture, and the long system of stone quays which completely surrounded the island had been turned into parks, which proved a godsend to the population. The subsidizing of the state theatre and state opera brought its own reward. The United States National Academy of Design was much like European institutions of the same kind. Nobody envied the Secretary of Fine Arts either his cabinet position or his portfolio. The Secretary of Forestry and Game Preservation had a much easier time, thanks to the new system of National Mounted Police. We had profited well by the latest treaties with France and England; the exclusion of foreign-born Jews as a measure of national self-preservation, the settlement of the new independent negro state of Suanee, the checking of immigration, the new laws concerning naturalization, and the gradual centralization of power in the executive all contributed to national calm and prosperity. When the government solved the Indian problem and squadrons of Indian cavalry scouts in native costume were substituted for the pitiable organizations tacked on to the tail of skeletonized regiments by the former Secretary of War, the nation drew a long sigh of relief. When, after the colossal Congress of Religions, bigotry and intolerance were laid in their graves, and kindness and charity began to draw warring sects together, many thought the millennium had arrived, at least in the new world, which, after all, is a world by itself.

But self-preservation is the first law, and the United States had to look on in helpless sorrow as Germany, Italy, Spain, and Belgium writhed in the throes of anarchy, while Russia, watching from the Caucasus, stooped and bound them one by one.

In the city of New York the summer of 1910 was signalized by the dismantling of the Elevated Railroads. The summer of 1911 will live in the memories of New York people for many a cycle; the Dodge statue was removed in that year. In the following winter began the agitation for the repeal of the laws prohibiting suicide which bore its final fruit in the month of April, 1920, when the first Government Lethal Chamber was opened on Washington Square.

I had walked down that day from Dr. Archer's house on Madison Avenue, where I had been as a mere formality. Ever since that fall from my horse, four years before, I had been troubled at times with pains in the back of my head and neck, but now for months they had been absent, and the doctor sent me away that day saying there was nothing more to be cured in me. It was hardly worth his fee to be told that; I knew it myself. Still I did not grudge him the money. What I minded was the mistake which he made at first. When they picked me up from the pavement where I lay unconscious, and somebody had mercifully sent a bullet though my horse's head, I was carried to Dr. Archer, and he, pronouncing my brain affected, placed me in his private asylum, where I was obliged to endure treatment for insanity. At last he decided that I was well, and I, knowing that my mind had always been as sound as his, if not sounder, "paid my tuition," as he jokingly called it, and left. I told him, smiling, that I would get even with him for his mistake, and he laughed heartily, and asked me to call once in a while. I did so, hoping for a chance to even up accounts, but he gave me none, and I told him I would wait.

The fall from my horse had fortunately left no evil results; on the contrary, it had changed my whole character for the better. From a lazy young man about town, I had become active, energetic, temperate, and, above all -- oh, above all else -- ambitious. There was only one thing which troubled me: I laughed at my own uneasiness, and yet it troubled me.

During my convalescence I had bought and read for the first time "The King in Yellow." I remember after finishing the first act that it occurred to me that I had better stop. I started up and flung the book into the fireplace; the volume struck the barred grate and fell open on the hearth in the fire-light. If I had not caught a glimpse of the opening words in the second act I should never have finished it, but as I stooped to pick it up my eyes became riveted to the open page, and with a cry of terror, or perhaps it was of joy so poignant that I suffered in every nerve, I snatched the thing from the hearth and crept shaking to my bedroom, where I read it and reread it, and wept and laughed and trembled with a horror which at times assails me yet. This is the thing that troubles me, for I cannot forget Carcosa, where black stars hang in the heavens, where the shadows of men's thoughts lengthen in the afternoon, when the twin suns sink into the Lake of Hali, and my mind will bear forever the memory of the Pallid Mask. I pray God will curse the writer, as the writer has cursed the world with this beautiful, stupendous creation, terrible in its simplicity, irresistible in its truth -- a world which now trembles before the King in Yellow. When the French government seized the translated copies which had just arrived in Paris, London, of course, became eager to read it. It is well known how the book spread like an infectious disease, from city to city, from continent to continent, barred out here, confiscated there, denounced by press and pulpit, censured even by the most advanced of literary anarchists. No definite principles had been violated in those wicked pages, no doctrine promulgated, no convictions outraged. It could not be judged by any known standard, yet, although it was acknowledged that the supreme note of art had been struck in "The King in Yellow," all felt that human nature could not bear the strain nor thrive on words in which the essence of purest poison lurked. The very banality and innocence of the first act only allowed the blow to fall afterwards with more awful effect.

It was, I remember, the 13th day of April, 1920, that the first Government Lethal Chamber was established on the south side of Washington Square, between Wooster Street and South Fifth Avenue. The block, which had formerly consisted of a lot of shabby old buildings, used as cafes and restaurants for foreigners, had been acquired by the government in the winter of 1913. The French and Italian cafes and restaurants were torn down; the whole block enclosed by a gilded iron railing, and converted into a lovely garden, with lawns, flowers, and fountains. In the centre of the garden stood a small, white building, severely classical in architecture, and surrounded by thickets of flowers. Six Ionic columns supported the roof, and the single door was of bronze. A splendid marble group of "the Fates" stood before the door, the work of a young American sculptor, Boris Yvain, who had died in Paris when only twenty-three years old.

The inauguration ceremonies were in progress as I crossed University Place and entered the square. I threaded my way through the silent throng of spectators but was stopped at Fourth Street by a cordon of police. A regiment of United States Lancers were drawn up in a hollow square around the Lethal Chamber. On a raised tribune facing Washington Park stood the Governor of New York, and behind him were grouped the Mayor of Greater New York, the Inspector-General of Police, the commandant of State troops, Colonel Livingston (military aid to the President of the United States), General Blount (commanding at Governor's Island), Major-General Hamilton (commanding the garrison of Greater New York), Admiral Buffby (of the fleet in the North River), Surgeon-General Lanceford, the staff of the National Free Hospital, Senators Wyse and Franklin, of New York, and the Commissioner of Public Works. The tribune was surrounded by a squadron of hussars of the National Guard.

The Governor was finishing his reply to the short speech of the Surgeon-General. I heard him say: "The laws prohibiting suicide and providing punishment for any attempt at self-destruction have been repealed. The government has seen fit to acknowledge the right of man to end an existence which may have become intolerable to him, through physical suffering or mental despair. It is believed that the community will be benefited by the removal of such people from their midst. Since the passage of this law, the number of suicides in the United States has not increased. Now that the government has determined to establish a Lethal Chamber in every city, town, and village in the country, it remains to be seen whether or not that class of humans creatures from whose desponding ranks new victims of self-destruction fall daily will accept the relief thus provided." He paused, and turned to the white Lethal Chamber. The silence in the street was absolute. "There a painless death awaits him who can no longer bear the sorrows of this life. If death is welcome, let him seek it here." Then, quickly turning to the military aid of the President's household, he said, "I declare the Lethal Chamber open"; and again facing the vast crowd, he cried in a clear voice: "Citizens of New York and of the United States of America, through me the government declares the Lethal Chamber to be open."

The solemn hush was broken by a sharp cry of command, the squadron of hussars filed after the Governor's carriage, the lancers wheeled and formed along Fifth Avenue to wait for the commandant of the garrison, and the mounted police followed them. I left the crowd to gape and stare at the white marble death-chamber, and, crossing South Fifth Avenue, walked along the western side of that thoroughfare to Bleecker Street. Then I turn to the right and stopped before a dingy shop which bore the sign:

HAWBERK, ARMORER.

I glanced in at the door-way and saw Hawberk busy in his little shop at the end of the hall. He looked up and, catching sight of me, cried, in his deep, hearty voice, "Come in, Mr. Castaigne!" Constance, his daughter, rose to meet me as I crossed the threshold, and held out her pretty hand, but I saw the blush of disappointment on her cheeks, and knew that it was another Castaigne she had expected, my cousin Louis. I smiled at her confusion and complimented her on the banner which she was embroidering from a colored plate. Old Hawberk sat riveting the worn greaves of some ancient suit of armor, and the ting! ting! of his little hammer sounded pleasantly in the quaint shop. Presently he dropped his hammer and fussed about for a moment with a tiny wrench. The soft clash of the mail sent a thrill of pleasure through me. I loved to hear the music of steel brushing against steel, the mellow shock of the mallet on thigh-pieces, and the jingle of chain armor. That was the only reason I went to see Hawberk. He had never interested me personally, nor did Constance, except for the fact of her being in love with Louis. This did occupy my attention, and sometimes even kept me awake at night. But I knew in my heart that all would come right, and that I should arrange their future as I expected to arrange that of my kind doctor, John Archer. However, I should never have troubled myself about visiting them just then had it not been, as I say, that the music of the tinkling hammer had for me this strong fascination. I would sit for hours, listening and listening, and when a stray sunbeam struck the inlaid steel, the sensation it gave me was almost too keen to endure. My eyes would become fixed, dilating with a pleasure that stretched every nerve almost to breaking, until some movement of the old armorer cut off the ray of sunlight, then, still thrilling secretly, I leaned back and listened again to the sound of the polishing rag -- swish! swish! -- rubbing rust from the rivets.

Constance worked with the embroidery over her knees, now and then pausing to examine more closely the pattern in the colored plate from the Metropolitan Museum.

"Who is this for?" I asked.

Hawberk explained that in addition to the treasures of armor in the Metropolitan Museum, of which he had been appointed armorer, he also had charge of several collections belonging to rich amateurs. This was the missing greave of a famous suit which a client of his had traced to a little shop in Paris on the Quai d'Orsay. He, Hawberk, had negotiated for and secured the greave, and now the suit was complete. He laid down his hammer and read me the history of the suit, traced since 1450 from owner to owner until it was acquired by Thomas Stainbridge.

When his superb collection was sold, this client of Hawberk's bought the suit, and since then the search for the missing greave has been pushed until it was, almost by accident, located in Paris.

"Did you continue the search so persistently without any certainty of the greave being still in existence?" I demanded.

"Of course," he replied, coolly.

Then for the first time I took a personal interest in Hawberk.

"It was worth something to you," I ventured.

"No," he replied, laughing, "my pleasure in finding it was my reward."

"Have you no ambition to be rich?" I asked, smiling.

"My one ambition is to be the best armorer in the world," he answered, gravely.

Constance asked me if I had seen the ceremonies at the Lethal Chamber. She herself had noticed cavalry passing up Broadway that morning, and had wished to see the inauguration, but her father wanted the banner finished, and she had stayed at his request.

"Did you see your cousin, Mr. Castaigne, there?" she asked, with the slightest tremor of her soft eyelashes.

"No," I replied, carelessly. "Louis' regiment is manoeuvring out in Westchester County." I rose and picked up my hat and cane.

"Are you going up-stairs to see the lunatic again?" laughed old Hawberk. If Hawberk knew how I loathe that word "lunatic," he would never use it in my presence. I rouses certain feelings within me which I do not care to explain. However, I answered him quietly:

"I think I shall drop in and see Mr. Wilde for a moment or two."

"Poor fellow," said Constance, with a shake of her head, "it must be hard to live alone year after year, poor, crippled, and almost demented. It is very good of you, Mr. Castaigne, to visit him as often as you do."

"I think he is vicious," observed Hawberk, beginning again with his hammer. I listened to the golden tinkle on the greave-plates; when he had finished I replied:

"No, he is not vicious, nor is he in the least demented. His mind is a wonder chamber, from which he can extract treasures that you and I would give years of our lives to acquire."

Hawberk laughed.

I continued, a little impatiently: "He knows history as no one else could know it. Nothing, however trivial, escapes his search, and his memory is so absolute, so precise in details, that were it known in New York that such a man existed the people could not honor him enough."

"Nonsense!" muttered Hawberk, searching on the floor for a fallen rivet.

"Is it nonsense," I asked, managing to suppress what I felt -- "is it nonsense when he says that the tassets and cuissards of the enamelled suit of armor commonly known as the 'Prince's Emblazoned' can be found among a mass of rusty theatrical properties, broken stoves, and ragpicker's refuse in a garret in Pell Street?"

Hawberk's hammer fell to the ground, but he picked it up and asked, with a great deal of calm, how I knew that the tassets and left cuissard were missing from the "Prince's Emblazoned."

"I did not know until Mr. Wilde mentioned it to me the other day. He said they were in the garret of 998 Pell Street."

"Nonsense!" he cried; but I noticed his hand trembling under his leather apron.

"Is this nonsense, too?" I asked pleasantly. "Is it nonsense when Mr. Wilde continually speaks of you as the Marquis of Avonshire, and of Miss Constance --"

I did not finish, for Constance had started to her feet with terror written on her every feature. Hawberk looked at me and slowly smoothed his leathern apron. "That is impossible," he observed. "Mr. Wilde may know a great many things --"

"About armor, for instance, and the 'Prince's Emblazoned,'" I interposed, smiling.

"Yes," he continued, slowly, "about armor also -- maybe -- but he is wrong in regard to the Marquis of Avonshire, who, as you know, killed his wife's traducer years ago, and went to Australia, where he did not long survive his wife."

"Mr. Wilde is wrong," murmured Constance. Her lips were blanched, but her voice was sweet and calm.

"Let us agree, if you please, that in this one circumstance Mr. Wilde is wrong," I said.

II

I climbed the three dilapidated flights of stairs which I had so often climbed before, and knocked at a small door at the end of the corridor. Mr. Wilde opened the door and I walked in.

When he had double-locked the door and pushed a heavy chest against it, he came and sat down beside me, peering up into my face with his little, light-colored eyes. Half a dozen new scratches covered his nose and cheeks, and the silver wires which supported his artificial ears had become displaced. I thought I had never seen him so hideously fascinating. He had no ears. The artificial ones, which now stood out at an angle from the fine wire, were his one weakness. They were made of wax and painted a shell pink; but the rest of his face was yellow. He might better have revelled in the luxury of some artificial fingers for his left hand, which was absolutely fingerless, but it seemed to cause him no inconvenience, and he was satisfied with his wax ears. He was very small, scarcely higher than a child of ten, but his arms were magnificently developed, and his thighs as thick as any athlete's. Still, the most remarkable thing about Mr. Wilde was that a man of his marvellous intelligence and knowledge should have such a head. It was flat and pointed, like the heads of many of those unfortunates whom people imprison in asylums for the weak-minded. Many called him insane, but I knew him to be as sane as I was.

I do not deny that he was eccentric; the mania he had for keeping that cat and teasing her until she flew at his face like a demon was certainly eccentric. I never could understand why he kept the creature, nor what pleasure he found in shutting himself up in his room with the surly, vicious beast. I remember once glancing up from the manuscript I was studying by the light of some tallow dips and seeing Mr. Wilde squatting motionless on his high chair, his eyes fairly blazing with excitement, while the cat, which had risen from her place before the stove, came creeping across the floor right at him. Before I could move she flattened her belly to the ground, crouched, trembled, and sprang onto his face. Howling and foaming, they rolled over and over on the floor, scratching and clawing, until the cat screamed and fled under the cabinet, and Mr. Wilde turned over on his back, his limbs contracting and curling up like the legs of a dying spider. He was eccentric.

Mr. Wilde had climbed into his high chair, and, after studying my face, picked up a dog's-eared ledger and opened it.

"Henry B. Matthews," he read, "book-keeper with Whysot Whysot & Company, dealers in church ornaments. Called April 3rd. Reputation damaged on the racetrack. Known as a welcher. Reputation to be repaired by August 1st. Retainer, Five Dollars." He turned the page and ran his fingerless knuckles down the closely written columns.

"P. Greene Dusenberry, Minister of the Gospel, Fairbeach, New Jersey. Reputation damaged in the Bowery. To be repaired as soon as possible. Retainer, $100."

He coughed and added, "Called, April 6th."

"Then you are not in need of money, Mr. Wilde," I inquired.

"Listen" -- he coughed again.

"Mrs. C. Hamilton Chester, of Chester Park, New York City, called April 7th. Reputation damaged at Dieppe, France. To be repaired by October 1st. Retainer, $500."

"Note -- C. Hamilton Chester, Captain U.S.S. Avalanche, ordered home from South Sea Squadron October 1st."

"Well," I said, "the profession of a Repairer of Reputations is lucrative."

His colorless eyes sought mine. "I only wanted to demonstrate that I was correct. You said it was impossible to succeed as a Repairer of Reputations; that even if I did succeed in certain cases, it would cost me more than I would gain by it. To-day I have five hundred men in my employ, who are poorly paid, but who pursue the work with an enthusiasm which possibly may be born of fear. These men enter every shade and grade of society; some even are pillars of the most exclusive social temples; other are the prop and pride of the financial world; still others hold undisputed sway among the 'Fancy and the Talent.' I choose them at my leisure from those who reply to my advertisements. It is easy enough -- they are all cowards. I could treble the number in twenty days if I wished. So, you see, those who have in their keeping the reputations of their fellow citizens, I have in my pay."

"They may turn on you," I suggested.

He rubbed his thumb over his cropped ears and adjusted the wax substitutes. "I think not," he murmured, thoughtfully, "I seldom have to apply the whip, and then only once. Besides, they like their wages."

"How do you apply the whip?" I demanded.

His face for a moment was awful to look upon. His eyes dwindled to a pair of green sparks.

"I invite them to come and have a little chat with me," he said, in a soft voice.

A knock at the door interrupted him, and his face resumed its amiable expression.

"Who is it?" he inquired.

"Mr. Steylette," was the answer.

"Come to-morrow," replied Mr. Wilde.

"Impossible," began the other; but was silenced by sort of bark from Mr. Wilde.

"Come to-morrow," he repeated.

We heard somebody move away from the door and turn the corner by the stair-way.

"Who is that?" I asked.

"Arnold Steylette, owner and editor-in-chief of the great New York daily."

He drummed on the ledger with his fingerless hand, adding, "I pay him very badly, but he thinks it is a good bargain."

"Arnold Steylette!" I repeated, amazed.

"Yes," said Mr. Wilde, with a self-satisfied cough.

The cat, which had entered the room as he spoke, hesitated, looked up at him, and snarled. He climbed down from the chair, and, squatting on the floor, took the creature into his arms and caressed her. The cat ceased snarling and presently began a loud purring, which seemed to increase in timbre as he stroked her.

"Where are the notes?" I asked. He pointed to the table, and for the hundredth time I picked up the bundle of manuscript entitled:

"THE IMPERIAL DYNASTY OF AMERICA."

One by one I studied the well-worn pages, worn only by my own handling, and, although I knew all by heart, from the beginning, "when from Carcosa, the Hyades, Hastur, and Aldebaran," to "Castaigne, Louis de Calvados, born December 19, 1887," I read it with an eager, rapt attention, pausing to repeat parts of it aloud, and dwelling especially on "Hildred de Calvados, only son of Hildred Castaigne and Edythe Landes Castaigne, first in succession," etc., etc..

When I finished, Mr. Wilde nodded and coughed. "Speaking of your legitimate ambition," he said, how do Constance and Louis get along?"

"She loves him," I replied, simply.

The cat on his knee suddenly turned and struck at his eyes, and he flung her off and climbed onto the chair opposite me.

"And Dr. Archer? But that's a matter you can settle any time you wish," he added.

"Yes," I replied, "Dr. Archer can wait, but it is time I saw my cousin Louis."

"It is time," he repeated. Then he took another ledger from the table and ran over the leaves rapidly.

"We are now in communication with ten thousand men," he muttered. "We can count on one hundred thousand within the first twenty-eight hours, and in forty-eight hours the State will rise en masse. The country follows the State, and the portion that will not, I mean California and the Northwest, might better never have been inhabited. I shall not send them the Yellow Sign."

The blood rushed to my head, but I only answered, "A new broom sweeps clean."

"The ambition of Caesar and of Napoleon pales before that which could not rest until it had seized the minds of men and controlled even their unborn thoughts," said Mr. Wilde.

"You are speaking of the King in Yellow," I groaned, with a shudder.

"He is a king whom emperors have served."

"I am content to serve him," I replied.

Mr. Wilde sat rubbing his ears with his crippled hand. "Perhaps Constance does not love him," he suggested.

I started to reply, but a sudden burst of military music from the street below drowned my voice. The Twentieth Dragoon Regiment, formerly in garrison at Mount St. Vincent, was returning from the manoeuvres in Westchester County to its new barracks on East Washington Square. It was my cousin's regiment. They were a fine lot of fellows, in their pale-blue, tight-fitting jackets, jaunty busbies, and with riding-breeches, with the double yellow stripe, into which their limbs seemed to have been moulded. Every other squadron was armed with lances, from the metal points of which fluttered yellow-and-white pennons. The band passed, playing the regimental march, then came the colonel and staff, the horses crowding and trampling, while their heads bobbed in unison, and the pennons fluttered from their lance points. The troopers, who rode with the beautiful English seat, looked brown as berries from their bloodless campaign among the farms of Westchester, and the music of their sabres against the stirrups, and the jingle of spurs and carbines was delightful to me. I saw Louis riding with his squadron. He was as handsome an officer as I have ever seen. Mr. Wilde, who had mounted a chair by the window, saw him, too, but said nothing. Louis turned and looked straight at Hawberk's shop as he passed, and I could see the flush on his brown cheeks. I think Constance must have been at the window. When the last troopers had clattered by, and the last pennons vanished into South Fifth Avenue, Mr. Wilde clambered out of his chair and dragged the chest away from the door.

"Yes," he said, "it is time that you saw your cousin Louis."

He unlocked the door and I picked up my hat and stick and stepped into the corridor. The stairs were dark. Groping about, I set my foot on something soft, which snarled and spit, and I aimed a murderous blow at the cat, but my cane shivered to splinters against the balustrade, and the beast scurried back into Mr. Wilde's room.

Passing Hawberk's door again, I saw him still at work on the armor, but I did not stop, and, stepping out into Bleecker Street, I followed it to Wooster, skirted the grounds of the Lethal Chamber, and, crossing Washington Park, went straight to my rooms in the Benedick. Here I lunched comfortably, read the Herald and the Meteor, and finally went to the steel safe in my bedroom and set the time combination. The three and three-quarter minutes which it is necessary to wait, while the time lock is opening, are to me golden moments. From the instant I set the combination to the moment when I grasp the knobs and swing back the solid steel doors, I live in an ecstasy of expectation. Those moments must be like moments passed in paradise. I know what I am to find at the end of the time limit. I know what the massive safe holds secure for me, for me alone, and the exquisite pleasure of waiting is hardly enhanced when the safe opens and I lift, from its velvet crown, a diadem of purest gold, blazing with diamonds. I do this every day, and yet the joy of waiting and at last touching again the diadem only seems to increase as the days pass. It is a diadem fit for a king among kings, an emperor among emperors. The King in Yellow might scorn it, but it shall be worn by his royal servant.

I held it in my arms until the alarm on the safe rang harshly, and then tenderly, proudly I replaced it and shut the steel doors. I walked slowly back into my study, which faces Washington Square, and leaned on the window-sill. The afternoon sun poured into my windows, and a gentle breeze stirred the branches of the elms and maples in the park, not covered with buds and tender foliage. A flock of pigeons circled about the tower of the memorial Church, sometimes alighting on the purple-tiled roof, sometimes wheeling downward to the lotos fountain in front of the marble arch. The gardeners were busy with the flowerbeds around the fountain, and the freshly turned earth smelled sweet and spicy. A lawn-mower, drawn by a fat, white horse, clinked across the greensward, and watering-carts poured showers of spray over the asphalt drives. Around the statue of Peter Stuyvesant, which in 1906 had replaced the monstrosity supposed to represent Garibaldi, children played in the spring sunshine, and nurse girls wheeled elaborate baby-carriages with reckless disregard for the pasty-face occupants, which could probably be explained by the presence of half a dozen trim dragoon troopers languidly lolling on the benches. Through the trees the Washington Memorial Arch glistened like silver in the sunshine, and beyond, on the eastern extremity of the square, the gray-stone barracks of the dragoons and the white-granite artillery stables were alive with color and motion.

I looked at the Lethal Chamber on the corner of the square opposite. A few curious people still lingered about the gilded iron railing, but inside the grounds the paths were deserted. I watched the fountains ripple and sparkle; the sparrows had already found this new bathing nook, and the basins were crowded with the dusty-feathered little things. Two or three white peacocks picked their way across the lawns, and a drab-colored pigeon sat so motionless on the arm of one of the Fates that it seemed to be a part of the sculptured stone.

As I was turning carelessly away, a slight commotion in the group of curious loiterers around the gates attracted my attention. A young man had entered, and was advancing with nervous strides along the gravel path which leads to the bronze doors of the Lethal Chamber. He paused a moment before the Fates, and as he raised his head to those three mysterious faces, the pigeon rose from its sculptured perch, circled about for a moment, and wheeled to the east. The young man pressed his hands to his face, and then, with an undefinable gesture, sprang up the marble steps, the bronze doors closed behind him, and half an hour later the loiterers slouched away and the frightened pigeon returned to its perch in the arms of Fate.

I put on my hat and went out into the park for a little walk before dinner. As I crossed the central drive-way a group of officers passed, and one of them called out, "Hello, Hildred!" and came back to shake hands with me. It was my cousin Louis, who stood smiling and tapping his spurred heels with his riding-whip.

"Just back from Westchester," he said; "been doing the bucolic; milk and curds, you know; dairy-maids in sun-bonnets, who say 'haeow' and 'I don't think' when you tell them they are pretty. I'm nearly dead for a square meal at Delmonico's. What's the news?"

"There is none," I replied, pleasantly. "I saw your regiment coming in this morning."

"Did you? I didn't see you. Where were you?"

"In Mr. Wilde's window."

"Oh, hell!" he began, impatiently, "that man is stark mad! I don't understand why you --"

He saw how annoyed I felt by this outburst, and begged my pardon.

"Really, old chap," he said, "I don't mean to run down a man you like, but for the life of me I can't see what the deuce you find in common with Mr. Wilde. He's not well bred, to put it generously; he's hideously deformed; his head is the head of a criminally insane person. You know yourself he's been in an asylum --"

"So have I," I interrupted, calmly.

Louis looked startled and confused for a moment, but recovered and slapped me heartily on the shoulder.

"You were completely cured," he began; but I stopped him again.

"I suppose you mean that I was simply acknowledged never to have been insane."

"Of course that -- that's what I meant," he laughed.

I disliked his laugh, because I knew it was forced; but I nodded gayly and asked him where he was going. Louis looked after his brother officers, who had now almost reached Broadway.

"We had intended to sample a Brunswick cocktail, but, to tell you the truth, I was anxious for an excuse to go and see Hawberk instead. Come along; I'll make you my excuse."

We found Hawberk, neatly attired in a fresh spring suit, standing at the door of his shop and sniffing the air.

"I had just decided to take Constance for a little stroll before dinner," he replied to the impetuous volley of questions from Louis. "We though of walking on the park terrace along the North River."

At that moment Constance appeared and grew pale and rosy by turns as Louis bent over her small, gloved fingers. I tried to excuse myself, alleging an engagement up-town, but Louis and Constance would not listen, and I saw I was expected to remain and engage old Hawberk's attention. After all, it would be just as well if I kept my eye on Louis, I thought, and, when they hailed a Spring Street electric-car, I got in after them and took my seat beside the armorer.

The beautiful line of parks and granite terraces overlooking the wharves along the North River, which were built in 1910 and finished in the autumn of 1917, had become one of the most popular promenades in the metropolis. They extended from the Battery to One Hundred and Ninetieth street, overlooking the noble river, and affording a fine view of the Jersey shore and the Highlands opposite. Cafes and restaurants were scattered here and there among the trees, and twice a week military bands from the garrison played in the kiosques on the parapets.

We sat down in the sunshine on the bench at the foot of the equestrian status of General Sheridan. Constance tipped her sunshade to shield her eyes, and she and Louis began a murmuring conversation which was impossible to catch. Old Hawberk, leaning on his ivory-headed cane, lighted an excellent cigar, the mate to which I politely refused, and smiled at vacancy. The sun hung low above the Staten Island woods, and the bay was dyed with golden hues reflected from the sun-warmed sails of the shipping in the harbor.

Brigs, schooners, yachts, clumsy ferry-boats, their decks swarming with people, railroad transports carrying lines of brown, blue, and white freight-cars, stately Sound steamers, declasse tramp steamers, coasters, dredgers, scows, and everywhere pervading the entire bay impudent little tugs puffing and whistling officiously -- these were the craft which churned the sunlit waters as far as the eye could reach. In calm contrast to the hurry of sailing vessel and steamer, a silent fleet of white war-ships lay motionless in mid-stream.

Constance's merry laugh aroused me from my reverie.

"What are you staring at?" she inquired.

"Nothing -- the fleet." I smiled.

Then Louis told us what the vessels were, pointing out each by its relative position to the old red fort on Governor's Island.

"That little cigar-shaped thing is a torpedo-boat," he explained; "there are four more lying close together. They are the Tarpon, the Falcon, the Sea Fox, and the Octopus. The gunboats just above are the Princeton, the Champlain, the Still Water, and the Erie. Next to them lie the cruisers Farragut and Los Angeles, and above them the battle-ships California and Dakota, and the Washington, which is the flagship. Those two squatty-looking chunks of metal which are anchored there off Castle William are the double-turreted monitors Terrible and Magnificent; behind them lies the ram Osceola."

Constance looked at him with deep approval in her beautiful eyes. "What loads of things you know for a soldier," she said, and we all joined in the laugh which followed.

Presently Louis rose with a nod to us and offered his arm to Constance, and they strolled away along the river-wall. Hawberk watched them for a moment, and then turned to me.

Mr. Wilde was right," he said. "I have found the missing tassets and left cuissard of the 'Prince's Emblazoned,' in a vile old junk garret in Pell Street."

"998?" I inquired, with a smile.

"Yes."

"Mr. Wilde is a very intelligent man," I observed.

"I want to give him the credit of this most important discovery," continued Hawberk. "And I intend it shall be known that he is entitled to the fame of it."

"He won't thank you for that," I answered, sharply; "please say nothing about it."

"Do you know what it is worth?" said Hawberk.

"No -- fifty dollars, perhaps."

"It is valued at five hundred, but the owner of the 'Prince's Emblazoned' will give two thousand dollars to the person who completes his suit; that reward also belongs to Mr. Wilde."

"He doesn't want it! He refuses it!" I answered, angrily. "What do you know about Mr. Wilde? He doesn't need the money. He is rich -- or will be -- richer than any living man except myself. What will we care for money then -- what will we care, he and I, when -- when -- "

"When what?" demanded Hawberk, astonished.

"You will see," I replied, on my guard again.

He looked at me narrowly, much as Dr. Archer used to, and I knew he thought I was mentally unsound. Perhaps it was fortunate for him that he did not use the word lunatic just then.

"No," I replied to his unspoken thought, "I am not mentally weak; my mind is as healthy as Mr. Wilde's. I do not care to explain just yet what I have on hand, but it is an investment which will pay more than mere gold, silver, and precious stones. It will secure the happiness and prosperity of a continent -- yes, a hemisphere!"

"Oh," said Hawberk.

"And eventually," I continued, more quietly, "it will secure the happiness of the whole world."

"And incidentally your own happiness and prosperity as well as Mr. Wilde's?"

"Exactly," I smiled, but I could have throttled him for taking that tone.

He looked at me in silence for a while, and then said, very gently: "Why don't you give up your books and studies, Mr. Castaigne, and take a tramp among the mountains somewhere or other? You used to be fond of fishing. Take a cast or two at the trout in the Rangelys."

"I don't care for fishing any more," I answered, without a shade of annoyance in my voice.

"You used to be fond of everything," he continued -- "athletics, yachting, shooting, riding -- "

"I have never cared to ride since my fall," I said, quietly.

"Ah, yes, your fall," he repeated, looking away from me.

I thought this nonsense had gone far enough, so I turned the conversation back to Mr. Wilde; but he was scanning my face again in a manner highly offensive to me.

"Mr. Wilde," he repeated; "do you know what he did this afternoon? He came down-stairs and nailed a sign over the hall door next to mine; it read:

MR. WILDE REPAIRER OF REPUTATIONS 3rd Bell.

"Do you know what a Repairer of Reputations can be?"

"I do," I replied, suppressing rage within.

"Oh," he said again.

Louis and Constance came strolling by and stopped to ask if we would join them. Hawberk looked at his watch. At the same moment a puff of smoke shot from the casemates of Castle William, and the boom of the sunset gun rolled across the water and was re-echoed from the Highlands opposite. The flag came running down from the flagpole, and bugles sounded on the white decks of the warships, and the first electric light sparkled out from the Jersey shore.

As I turned into the city with Hawberk I heard Constance murmur something to Louis which I did not understand; but Louis whispered "My darling!" in reply; and again, walking ahead with Hawberk through the square, I heard a murmur of "sweetheart!" and "my own Constance!" and I knew the time had nearly arrived when I should speak of important matters with my cousin Louis.

III

One morning early in May I stood before the steel safe in my bedroom, trying on the golden jewelled crown. The diamonds flashed fire as I turned to the mirror, and the heavy beaten gold burned like a halo about my head. I remembered Camilla's agonized scream and the awful words echoing through the dim streets of Carcosa. They were the last lines of the first act, and I dared not think of what followed -- dared not, even in the spring sunshine, there in my own room, surrounded with familiar objects, reassured by the bustle from the street and the voices of the servants in the hall-way outside. For those poisoned words had dropped slowly into my heart, as death-sweat drops upon a bed-sheet and is absorbed. Trembling, I put the diadem from my head and wiped my forehead, but I thought of Hastur and of my own rightful ambition, and I remembered Mr. Wilde as I had last left him, his face all torn and bloody from the claws of that devil's creature, and what he said -- ah, what he said! The alarm-bell in the safe began to whir harshly, and I knew my time was up; but I would not heed it, and, replacing the flashing circlet upon my head, I turned defiantly to the mirror. I stood for a long time absorbed in the changing expression of my own eyes. The mirror reflected a face which was like my own, but whiter, and so thin that I hardly recognized it. And all the time I kept repeating between my clinched teeth, "The day has come! the day has come!" while the alarm in the safe whirred and clamored, and the diamonds sparkled and flamed above my brow. I heard a door open, but did not heed it. It was only when I saw two faces in the mirror; it was only when another face rose over my shoulder, and two other eyes met mine. I wheeled like a flash and seized a long knife from my dressing-table, and my cousin sprang back very pale, crying: "Hildred! for God's sake!" Then, as my hand fell, he said: "It is I, Louis; don't you know me?" I stood silent. I could not have spoken from my life. He walked up to me and took the knife from my hand.

"What is all this?" he inquired, in a gentle voice. "Are you ill?"

"No," I replied. But I doubt if he heard me.

"Come, come, old fellow," he cried, "take off that brass crown and toddle into the study. Are you going to a masquerade? What's all this theatrical tinsel anyway?"

I was glad he thought the crown was made of brass and paste, yet I didn't like him any the better for thinking so. I let him take it from my hand, knowing it was best to humor him. He tossed the splendid diadem in the air, and, catching it, turned to me smiling.

"It's dear at fifty cents," he said. "What's it for?"

I did not answer, but took the circlet from his hands, and, placing it in the safe, shut the massive door. The alarm ceased its infernal din at once. He watched me curiously, but did not seem to notice the sudden ceasing of the alarm. He did, however, speak of the safe as a biscuit-box. Fearing lest he might examine the combination, I led the way into my study. Louis threw himself on the sofa and flicked at flies with his eternal riding-whip. He wore his fatigue uniform, with the braided jacket and jaunty cap, and I noticed that his riding-boots were all splashed with red mud.

"Where have you been?" I inquired.

"Jumping mud creeks in Jersey," he said. "I haven't had time to change yet; I was rather in a hurry to see you. Haven't you got a glass of something? I'm dead tired; been in the saddle twenty-four hours."

I gave him some brandy from my medicinal store, which he drank with a grimace.

"Damned bad stuff," he observed. "I'll give you an address where they sell brandy that is brandy."

"It's good enough from my needs," I said, indifferently. "I use it to rub my chest with." He stared and flicked at another fly.

"See here, old fellow," he began, "I've got something to suggest to you. It's four years now that you've shut yourself up here like an owl, never going anywhere, never taking any healthy exercise, never doing a damn thing but poring over those books up there on the mantel-piece."

He glanced along the row of shelves. "Napoleon, Napoleon, Napoleon!" he read. "For Heaven's sake, have you nothing but Napoleon there?"

"I wish they were bound in gold," I said. "But wait -- yes, there is another book, 'The King in Yellow.'" I looked him steadily in the eye.

"Have you never read it?" I asked.

"I? No, thank God! I don't want to be driven crazy."

I saw he regretted his speech as soon as he had uttered it. There is only one word which I loathe more than I do lunatic, and that word is crazy. But I controlled myself and asked him why he though "The King in Yellow" dangerous.

"Oh, I don't know," he said, hastily. "I only remember the excitement it created and the denunciations from pulpit and press. I believe the author shot himself after bringing forth this monstrosity, didn't he?"

"I understand he is still alive," I answered.

"That's probably true," he muttered; "bullets couldn't kill a fiend like that."

"It is a book of great truths," I said.

"Yes," he replied, "of 'truths' which send men frantic and blast their lives. I don't care if the thing is, as they say, the very supreme essence of art. It's a crime to have written it, and I for one shall never open its pages."

"Is that what you have come to tell me?" I asked.

"No," he said, "I came to tell you that I am going to be married."

I believe for a moment my heart ceased to beat, but I kept my eyes on his face.

"Yes," he continued, smiling happily, "married to the sweetest girl on earth."

"Constance Hawberk," I said, mechanically.

"How did you know?" he cried, astonished. "I didn't know it myself until that evening last April, when we strolled down to the embankment before dinner."

"When is it to be?" I asked.

"It was to have been next September; but an hour ago a despatch came, ordering our regiment to the Presidio, San Francisco. We leave at noon to-morrow. To-morrow," he repeated. "Just think, Hildred, to-morrow I shall be the happiest fellow that ever drew breath in this jolly world, for Constance will go with me."

I offered my hand in congratulation, and he seized and shook it like the good-natured fool he was -- or pretended to be.

"I am going to get my squadron as a wedding present," he rattled on. "Captain and Mrs. Louis Castaigne -- eh, Hildred?"

Then he told me where it was to be and who were to be there, and made me promise to come and be best man. I set my teeth and listened to his boyish chatter without showing what I felt, but --

I was getting to the limit of my endurance, and when he jumped up, and, switching his spurs till they jingled, said he must go, I did not detain him.

"There's only one thing I want to ask of you," I said, quietly.

"Out with it -- it's a promise," he laughed.

"I want you to meet me for a quarter of an hour's talk to-night."

"Of course, if you wish," he said, somewhat puzzled. "Where?"

"Anywhere -- in the park there."

"What time, Hildred?"

"Midnight."

"What in the name of -- " he began, but checked himself and laughingly assented. I watched him go down the stairs and hurry away, his sabre banging at every stride. He turned into Bleecker Street, and I knew he was going to see Constance. I gave him ten minutes to disappear and then followed in his footsteps, taking with me the jewelled crown and the silken robe embroidered with the Yellow Sign. When I turned into Bleecker Street and entered the door-way which bore the sign:

MR. WILDE REPAIRER OF REPUTATIONS 3rd. Bell.

I saw old Hawberk moving about in his shop, and imagined I heard Constance's voice in the parlor; but I avoided them both and hurried up the trembling stairways to Mr. Wilde's apartment. I knocked, and entered without ceremony. Mr. Wilde lay groaning on the floor, his face covered with blood, his clothes torn to shreds. Drops of blood were scattered about over the carpet, which had also been ripped and frayed in the evidently recent struggle.

"It's that cursed cat," he said, ceasing his groans and turning his colorless eyes to me; "she attacked me while I was asleep. I believe she will kill me yet."

This was too much, so I went into the kitchen and, seizing a hatchet from the pantry, started to find the infernal beast and settle her then and there. My search was fruitless, and after a while I gave it up and came back to find Mr. Wilde squatting on his high chair by the table. He had washed his face and changed his clothes. The great furrows which the cat's claws had ploughed up in his face he had filled with collodion, and a rag hid the wound in his throat. I told him I should kill the cat when I came across her, but he only shook his head and turned to the open ledger before him. He read name after name of the people who had come to him in regard to their reputation, and the sums he had amassed were startling.

"I put on the screws now and then," he explained.

"One day or other some of these people will assassinate you," I insisted.

"Do you think so?" he said, rubbing his mutilated ears.

It was useless to argue with him, so I took down the manuscript entitled Imperial Dynasty of America for the last time I should ever take it down in Mr. Wilde's study. I read it through, thrilling and trembling with pleasure. When I had finished, Mr. Wilde took the manuscript, and, turning to the dark passage which leads from his study to his bedchamber, called out, in a loud voice, "Vance." Then for the first time I noticed a man crouching there in the shadow. How I had overlooked him during my search for the cat I cannot imagine.

"Vance, come in!" cried Mr. Wilde.

The figure rose and crept towards us, and I shall never forget the face that he raised to mine as the light from the window illuminated it.

"Vance, this is Mr. Castaigne," said Mr. Wilde. Before he had finished speaking, the man threw himself on the ground before the table, crying and gasping, "Oh, God! Oh, my God! Help me! Forgive me -- Oh, Mr. Castaigne, keep that man away! You cannot, you cannot mean it! You are different -- save me! I am broken down -- I was in a madhouse, and now -- when all was coming right -- when I had forgotten the King -- the King in Yellow, and -- but I shall go mad again -- I shall go mad -- "

His voice died into a choking rattle, for Mr. Wilde had leaped on him, and his right hand encircled the man's throat. When Vance fell in a heap on the floor, Mr. Wilde clambered nimbly into his chair again, and, rubbing his mangled ears with the stump of his hand, turned to me and asked me for the ledger. I reached it down from the shelf and he opened it. After a moment's searching among the beautifully written pages, he coughed complacently and pointed to the name Vance.

"Vance," he read aloud -- "Osgood Oswald Vance." At the sound of his name the man on the floor raised his head and turned a convulsed face to Mr. Wilde. His eyes were injected with blood, his lips tumified. "Called April 28th," continued Mr. Wilde. "Occupation, cashier in the Seaforth National Bank; has served a term for forgery at Sing Sing, whence he was transferred to the Asylum for the Criminal Insane. Pardoned by the Governor of New York, and discharged from the Asylum January 19, 1918. Reputation damaged at Sheepshead Bay. Rumors that he lives beyond his income. Reputation to be repaired at once. Retainer, $1500.

"Note. -- Has embezzled sums amounting to $30,000 since March 20, 1919. Excellent family, and secured present position through uncle's influence. Father, President of Seaforth Bank."

I looked at the man on the floor.

"Get up, Vance," said Mr. Wilde, in a gentle voice. Vance rose as if hypnotized. "He will do as we suggest now," observed Mr. Wilde, and, opening the manuscript, he read the entire history of the Imperial Dynasty of America. Then, in a kind and soothing murmur, he ran over the important points with Vance, who stood like one stunned. His eyes were so blank and vacant that I imagined he had become half-witted, and remarked it to Mr. Wilde, who replied that it was of no consequence anyway. Very patiently we pointed out to Vance what his share in the affair would be, and he seemed to understand after a while. Mr. Wilde explained the manuscript, using several volumes on Heraldry to substantiate the result of his researches. He mentioned the establishment of the Dynasty in Carcosa, the lakes which connected Hastur, Aldebaran, and the mystery of the Hyades. He spoke of Cassilda and Camilla, and sounded the cloudy depths of Demhe and the Lake of Hali. "The scalloped tatters of the King in Yellow must hide Yhill forever," he muttered, but I do not believe Vance heard him. Then by degrees he led Vance along the ramifications of the imperial family to Uoht and Thale, from Naotalba and Phantom of Truth to Aldones, and then, tossing aside his manuscript and notes he began the wonderful story of the Last King. Fascinated and thrilled, I watched him. He threw up his head, his long arms were stretched out in a magnificent gesture of pride and power, and his eyes blazed deep in their sockets like two emeralds. Vance listened, stupefied. As for me, when at last Mr. Wilde had finished, and, pointing to me, cried, "The cousin of the King," my head swam with excitement.

Controlling myself with a superhuman effort, I explained to Vance why I alone was worthy of the crown, and why my cousin must be exiled or die. I made him understand that my cousin must never marry, even after renouncing all his claims, and how that, least of all, he should marry the daughter of the Marquis of Avonshire and bring England into the question. I showed him a list of thousands of names which Mr. Wilde had drawn up; every man whose name was there had received the Yellow Sign, which no living human being dared disregard. The city, the State, the whole land, were ready to rise and tremble before the Pallid Mask.

The time had come, the people should know the son of Hastur, and the whole world bow to the black stars which hang in the sky over Carcosa.

Vance leaned on the table, his head buried in his hands. Mr. Wilde drew a rough sketch on the margin of yesterday's Herald with a bit of lead-pencil. It was a plan of Hawberk's rooms. Then he wrote out the order and affixed the seal, and, shaking like a palsied man, I signed my first writ of execution with my name Hildred-Rex.

Mr. Wilde clambered to the floor and, unlocking the cabinet, took a long, square box from the first shelf. This he brought to the table and opened. A new knife lay in the tissue-paper inside, and I picked it up and handed it to Vance, along with the order and the plan of Hawberk's apartment. Then Mr. Wilde told Vance he could go; and he went, shambling like an outcast of the slums.

I sat for a while watching the daylight fade behind the square tower of the Judson Memorial Church, and finally, gathering up the manuscript and notes, took my hat and started for the door. Mr. Wilde watched me in silence. When I had stepped into the hall I looked back; Mr. Wilde's small eyes were still fixed on me. Behind him the shadows gathered in the fading light. Then I closed the door behind me and went out into the darkening streets.

I had eaten nothing since breakfast, but I was not hungry. A wretched, half-starved creature, who stood looking across the street at the Lethal Chamber, noticed me and came up to tell me a tale of misery. I gave him money -- I don't know why -- and he went away without thanking me. An hour later another outcast approached and whined his story. I had a blank bit of paper in my pocket, on which was traced the Yellow Sign, and I handed it to him. He looked at it stupidly for a moment, and then, with an uncertain glance at me, folded it with what seemed to me exaggerated care and placed it in his bosom.

The electric lights were sparkling among the trees, and the new moon shone in the sky above the Lethal Chamber. It was tiresome waiting in the square; I wandered from the marble arch to the artillery stables, and back again to the lotos fountain. The flowers and grass exhaled a fragrance which troubled me. The jet of the fountain drops reminded me of the tinkle of chain mail in Hawberk's shop. But it was not so fascinating, and the dull sparkle of the moonlight on the water brought no such sensations of exquisite pleasure as when the sunshine played over the polished steel of a corselet on Hawberk's knee. I watched the bats darting and turning above the water plants in the fountain basin, but their rapid, jerky flight set my nerves on edge, and I went away again to walk aimlessly to and fro among the trees.

The artillery stables were dark, but in the cavalry barracks the officers' windows were brilliantly lighted, and the sally-port was constantly filled with troopers in fatigues, carrying straw and harness and baskets filled with tin dishes.

Twice the mounted sentry at the gates was changed while I wandered up and down the asphalt walk. I looked at my watch. It was nearly time. The lights in the barracks went out one by one, the barred gate was closed, and every minute or two an officer passed in through the side wicket, leaving a rattle of accoutrements and a jingle of spurs on the night air. The square had become very silent. The last homeless loiterer had been driven away by the gray-coated park policeman, the car tracks along Wooster Street were deserted, and the only sound which broke the stillness was the stamping of the sentry's horse and the ring of his sabre against the saddle pommel. In the barracks the officers' quarters were still lighted, and military servants passed and repassed before the bay-windows. Twelve o'clock sounded from the new spire of St. Francis Xavier, and at the last stroke of the sad-toned bell a figure passed through the portcullis, returned the salute of the sentry, and, crossing the street, entered the square and advanced towards the Benedick apartment house.

"Louis," I called.

The man pivoted on his spurred heels and came straight towards me.

"Is that you, Hildred?"

"Yes, you are on time."

I took his offered hand and we strolled towards the Lethal Chamber.

He rattled on about his wedding and the graces of Constance and their future prospects, calling my attention to his captain's shoulder-straps and the triple gold arabesque on his sleeve and fatigue cap. I believe I listened as much to the music of his spurs and sabre as I did to his boyish babble, and at last we stood under the elms on the Fourth Street corner of the square opposite the Lethal Chamber. Then he laughed and asked me what I wanted with him. I motioned him to a seat on a bench under the electric light, and sat down beside him. He looked at me curiously, with that same searching glance which I hate and fear so in doctors. I felt the insult of his look, but he did not know it, and I carefully concealed my feelings.

"Well, old chap," he inquired, "what can I do for you?"

I drew from my pocket the manuscript and notes of the Imperial Dynasty of America, and, looking him in the eye, said:

"I will tell you. On your word as a soldier, promise me to read this manuscript from beginning to end, without asking me a question. Promise me to read these notes in the same way, and promise to me to listen to what I have to tell later."

"I promise, if you wish it," he said, pleasantly. "Give me the paper, Hildred."

He began to read, raising his eyebrows with a puzzled, whimsical air, which made me tremble with suppressed anger. As he advanced, his eyebrows contracted, and his lips seemed to form the word "rubbish."

Then he looked slightly bored, but apparently for my sake read, with an attempt at interest, which presently ceased to be an effort. He started when, in the closely written pages he came to his own name, and when he came to mine he lowered the paper and looked sharply at me for a moment. But he kept his word, and resumed his reading, and I let the half-formed question die on his lips unanswered. When he came to the end and read the signature of Mr. Wilde, he folded the paper carefully and returned it to me. I handed him the notes, and he settled back, pushing his fatigue cap up to his forehead with a boyish gesture which I remembered so well in school. I watched his face as he read, and when he finished I took the notes, with the manuscript, and placed them in my pocket. Then I unfolded a scroll marked with the Yellow Sign. He saw the sign, but he did not seem to recognize it, and I called his attention to it somewhat sharply.

"Well," he said, "I see it. What is it?"

"It is the Yellow Sign," I said, angrily.

"Oh, that's it, is it?" said Louis, in that flattering voice which Dr. Archer used to employ with me, and would probably have employed again, had I not settled his affair for him.

I kept my rage down and answered as steadily as possible, "Listen, you have engaged your word?"

"I am listening, old chap," he replied, soothingly.

I began to speak very calmly: "Dr. Archer, having by some means become possessed of the secret of the Imperial Succession, attempted to deprive me of my right, alleging that, because of a fall from my horse four years ago, I had become mentally deficient. He presumed to place me under restraint in his own house in hopes of either driving me insane or poisoning me. I have not forgotten it. I visited him last night and the interview was final."

Louis turned quite pale, but did not move. I resumed, triumphantly: "There are yet three people to be interviewed in the interests of Mr. Wilde and myself. They are my cousin Louis, Mr. Hawberk, and his daughter Constance."

Louis sprang to his feet, and I arose also, and flung the paper marked with the Yellow Sign to the ground.

"Oh, I don't need that to tell you what I have to say," I cried, with a laugh of triumph. "You must renounce the crown to me -- do you hear, to me?"

Louis looked at me with a startled air, but, recovering himself, said kindly, "Of course I renounce the -- what is it I must renounce?"

"The crown," I said, angrily.

"Of course," he answered. "I renounce it. Come, old chap, I'll walk back to your rooms with you."

"Don't try your doctor's tricks on me," I cried, trembling with fury. "Don't act as if you think I am insane."

"What nonsense!" he replied. "Come, it's getting late, Hildred."

"No," I shouted, "you must listen. You cannot marry; I forbid it. Do you hear? I forbid it. You shall renounce the crown, and in reward I grant you exile; but if you refuse you shall die."

He tried to calm me, but I was roused at last, and, drawing my long knife, barred his way.

Then I told him how they would find Dr. Archer in the cellar with his throat open, and I laughed in his face when I thought of Vance and his knife, and the order signed by me.

"Ah, you are the King," I cried, "but I shall be King. Who are you to keep me from empire over all the habitable earth! I was born the cousin of a king, but I shall be King!"

Louis stood white and rigid before me. Suddenly a man came running up Fourth Street, entered the gate of the Lethal Temple, traversed the path to the bronze doors at full speed, and plunged into the death-chamber with the cry of one demented, and I laughed until I wept tears, for I had recognized Vance, and knew that Hawberk and his daughter were no longer in my way.

"Go," I cried to Louis, "you have ceased to be a menace. You will never marry Constance now, and if you marry any one else in your exile, I will visit you as I did my doctor last night. Mr. Wilde takes charge of you to-morrow." Then I turned and darted into South Fifth Avenue, and with a cry of terror Louis dropped his belt and sabre and followed me like the wind. I heard him close behind me at the corner of Bleecker Street, and I dashed into the door-way under Hawberk's sign. He cried, "Halt, or I fire!" but when he saw that I flew up the stairs leaving Hawberk's shop below, he left me, and I heard him hammering and shouting at their door as though it were possible to arouse the dead.

Mr. Wilde's door was open, and I entered, crying "It is done, it is done! Let the nations rise and look upon their King!" but I could not find Mr. Wilde, so I went to the cabinet and took the splendid diadem from its case. Then I drew on the white silk robe, embroidered with the Yellow Sign, and placed the crown upon my head. At last I was King, King in my right in Hastur, King because I knew the mystery of the Hyades, and my mind had sounded the depths of the Lake of Hali. I was King! The first gray pencillings of dawn would raise a tempest which would shake two hemispheres. Then as I stood, my every nerve pitched to the highest tension, faint with the joy and splendor of my thought, without, in the dark passage, a man groaned.

I seized the tallow dip and sprang to the door. The cat passed me like a demon, and the tallow dip went out, but my long knife flew swifter than she, and I heard her screech, and I knew that my knife had found her. For a moment I listened to her tumbling and thumping about in the darkness, and then, when her frenzy ceased, I lighted a lamp and raised it over my head. Mr. Wilde lay on the floor with his throat torn open. At first I thought he was dead, but as I looked a green sparkle came into his sunken eyes, his mutilated hand trembled, and then a spasm stretched his mouth from ear to ear. For a moment my terror and despair gave place to hope, but as I bent over him his eyeballs rolled clean around in his head, and he died. Then, while I stood transfixed with rage and despair, seeing my crown, my empire, every hope and every ambition, my very life, lying prostrate there with the dead master, they came, seized me from behind and bound me until my veins stood out like cords, and my voice failed with the paroxysms of my frenzied screams. But still I raged, bleeding and infuriated, among them and more than one policeman felt my sharp teeth. Then when I could no longer move they came nearer; I saw old Hawberk, and behind him my cousin Louis' ghastly face, and farther away, in the corner, a woman, Constance, weeping softly.

"Ah, I see it now!" I shrieked. "You have seized the throne and the empire. Woe! woe to you who are crowned with the crown of the King in Yellow!"

I read Chambers novel "The King in Yellow" 35 years ago, and was struck by the effectiveness of its tone, and the fact that the horror in it never comes down to any substantial ground; he wrote like H.P. Lovecraft, trying to evoke a feeling of horror by doing nothing essentially more than saying something was horrible. This technique is called "by fiat", and usually doesnt work. Both Lovecraft and Chambers borrowed, however, a trick of E.A. Poes: couching their stories within a mythos of portentious-sounding names. The name Aldebaran, in the present story, for example, is the Arabic name for one of the stars. Oddly enough, this method works, even in "The King in Yellow", which has no discernable plot: The Street of the Four Winds", from that piece, has a tremendously mythic feel to it. This current piece is even more effective, insanity from the viewpoint of the insane. The bad part is that its, consciously ur unconsciously, borrowed from E.A. Poe, who, in a number of short stories, did it even better.

This story is often touted as an underrated weird fiction classic, yet I found it highly inferior to the work of Clark Ashton Smith, who is strangely nowhere to be found on this site.

[5 / 1]The image is a close-up photograph of a lizard's eye, focusing on the iris and the surrounding eyeball. The lizard's eye is a striking shade of green, with a large pupil that is a deep, dark brown. The eye is surrounded by a pattern of scales, which are a lighter green color, and the scales are arranged in a repeating pattern that gives the eye a textured appearance. The background of the image is blurred, with a green hue that suggests the lizard's skin. The image is taken from a slightly angled perspective, with the lizard's eye being the central focus. There are no texts or discernible brands present in the image. The style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the intricate details of the lizard's eye.

There Is a Rare Disorder Where People See Other Faces as Dragons

What is prosopometamorphopsia? Learn more about the brain condition that can make it appear as though faces are demonic or melting.

In 2011, a 52-year-old woman arrived at a psychiatric clinic in The Hague, the Netherlands, with a rare and peculiar disorder: within minutes of setting eyes on someone, their face would mysteriously morph into that of a dragon.

Researchers described the symptoms in a study published in The Lancet. While the woman was able to recognise faces, according to the study, in just minutes, “they turned black, grew long, pointy ears and a protruding snout, and displayed a reptiloid skin and huge eyes in bright yellow, green, blue, or red.” This wasn’t an occasional occurrence. It would happen multiple times a day.

And it wasn't just faces that triggered her symptoms. The paper explained: “She saw similar dragon-like faces drifting towards her many times a day from the walls, electrical sockets, or the computer screen, in both the presence and absence of face-like patterns, and at night she saw many dragon-like faces in the dark.”

Testing for Seeing Dragons

These distressing distortions were a lifelong affliction, one the patient recalled experiencing in childhood. She remained unfazed by the dragons initially. Only in adolescence did it dawn on her that those around her did not see people as dragons as she did.

She was able to graduate from high school, secure a role as a school administrator, marry, and have a child.. Still, the condition did lead to experiences of isolation and depression as well as alcohol abuse, and communication issues that made it hard to hold down a job. It was in desperation that she contacted the neurologist Oliver Sacks and came to seek help at the psychiatric clinic.

The team performed a routine gamut of tests: a neurological examination, blood tests, and an electroencephalogram (EEG) — all of which came back normal. Then, the MRI scan returned and showed “only a few” white-matter abnormalities.

The abnormalities (or lesions) were located near the lentiform nucleus, which is associated with cognition and linked to cognitive impairments in schizophrenia, and the semioval centre, which has been linked to sensory abnormalities. The team concluded that the demonic distortions were caused by abnormal electrophysiological activity in regions of the brain related to face and color processing, which lie in the ventral occipitotemporal cortex.

What Is Prosopometamorphopsia?

The dragons are just one manifestation of an incredibly rare condition called prosopometamorphopsia (or demon face syndrome), first described in 1947. Unlike the woman described in the paper, the majority of patients suffer only temporarily. In most instances, it is linked to disorders such as epilepsy or physical changes to the brain. Indeed, it was only after the Second World War and its manifestation in soldiers who had experienced head wounds that it received greater recognition in the scientific community.

Prosopometamorphopsia is one example of Alice in Wonderland syndrome — a group of conditions that involve visual distortions. Others include seeing faces where there are none and perceiving half the visual field as smaller than it really is.

Further examples of prosopometamorphopsia include individuals who see faces transform into fish heads, faces melting, and faces featuring a third or fourth eye. It has even been put forward that the art of Pablo Picasso and Francis Bacon suggests they could have experienced the condition at some point in their lives.

Finding the Right Treatment

The trip to the clinic was life-changing for the woman described in the case study, who was taken off her medication, provided with psychoeducation, and prescribed 300 mg of valproic acid a day.

After an initial hiccup — the treatment was changed to 3 mg of rivastigmine a day after the valproic acid caused her to hear loud bangs in her sleep — the treatment, according to the study, “kept visual symptoms sufficiently under control for her to function normally.”

Reports of abuse by Memphis Misraim members Anonymous Wed 17 Dec 2025
19:33:19 No.41683717 ViewReplyOriginalReport
Hello,

Last year I got really concerned reading reports of people claiming abuse by Memphis

Misraim members. Yes, technically a huge chunk of the population has been abused by them, due to their hand in creating the concept of fascism in the first place, and their involvement in so many wars. However, some people were claiming direct abuse by their members, even in the 21st century.

Here are my questions:

- How old were you when it happened?
- Do you mind sharing any location details of where you believe this occured?
- If you were a minor, were you in foster care at the time?
- Do you think you know the profession of the abuser?
- What is your relation to the abuser?
- Do you believe anybody in your family was blackmailed into providing you to the Memphis Misraim member to be abused, or do you think you were brought to them on purpose for free?
- Do you know anybody else who is claiming a grievance about them? What do they say?

- Do you have any other details you would like to share?

The text overlaying the image reads: "IN THE GAME OF POLITICS PLAYED BY CULTS" and "NOTHING IS ACCIDENTAL." Below this, there is a statement: "IF SOMETHING HAPPENS BE ASSURED IT WAS PLANNED TO HAPPEN."

The style of the image is a satirical meme, combining elements of historical photos with humorous text. The use of military uniforms and masonic symbols suggests a critique of organized religion and its influence on politics. The text humorously suggests that the events depicted were not accidents but rather planned events.

The image shows a wooden plaque mounted on a black stand against a white background. The plaque is shaped like a tree trunk with a prominent, curved, and textured surface. On the plaque, there is a rectangular, metallic object with a screen displaying text. The text reads "PRESS WITH REAL WORDS" and below it, "To President Donald J. Trump, our greatest friend and greatest ally." Below the text, there is a smaller inscription that reads "Prime Minister Benjamin Netanyahu." The style of the image is a straightforward product photograph with a focus on presenting the item clearly and without any additional context or background.

Narrator: So Israel sold this device to Hezbollah. Hezbollah paid for this—this weapon that was to be used against them.
Michael: Then good price. A good price that couldn't be too low, or they'd be suspicious.
Narrator: In the end, Hezbollah bought over 16,000 of these exploding walkie-talkies that Israel then didn't activate for 10 years—until 3 months ago.
Narrator: How did you convince Hezbollah to buy this?
Michael: Well, obviously, they didn't know that they were buying it from Israel. Who did they buy it from, or think they were buying it from? We have an incredible array of possibilities of creating foreign companies that have no way been traced back to Israel. Shell companies over shell companies who affect the supply chain to our favor. We create a pretend world. We are a global production company. We write the screenplay. We're the directors with the producers. We're the main actors. And the world is our stage.

Narrator: This is Mossad's old office. Its motto, from Proverbs 24:6, says, in so many words, "wage war through deception and trickery.

Narrator: Mossad wanted to use the name Gold Apollo on its pager, so it set up shell companies—including one in this building in Hungary—to dupe the Taiwanese into partnering with them.
Narrator: So the company in Taiwan, Gold Apollo—did they know that they were working with people from Mossad?
Gabriel: Gold Apollo had zero clue that they are working with the Mossad. And neither did Hezbollah when they are buying from us—they have zero clue that they are buying from the Mossad. We make, like, Truman Show. Everything is controlled by us behind the scenes. In their experience, everything is normal. Everything was 100% culture—including businessmen, marketing, engineers, showroom, everything.

The image is a collage of three separate photographs, each depicting a different scene.
The top right photo shows a group of people gathered in front of a stone wall. The individuals are dressed in formal attire, with some wearing hats and others wearing suits. They are holding flags and banners, and some are gesturing with their hands.
The bottom left photo features a man in a dark suit and tie, who is smiling and waving. He is surrounded by a group of soldiers, some of whom are holding rifles. The man is wearing sunglasses and has a beard.
In the center of the image, there is a speech bubble that reads "It's okay I'm Jewish." The text is in white against a black background, and the bubble is slightly tilted.
The style of the image is humorous, combining elements of political commentary with a light-hearted tone. The collage seems to be a commentary on the juxtaposition of political figures and the Jewish community.

The image is a collage of black and white photographs and text, likely from a historical context, with a focus on military and political figures. At the top left, there is a black and white photograph of a man in military attire, with the name "Kurt Wolff" written in white text. Below this, there are two more photographs, one of a man in military uniform and the other of a man in a suit, both with the name "Adolf Hitler" written in white text.
The bottom left corner contains a photograph of a man in military uniform, with the name "Kurt Waldheim" written in white text. Below this, there is a photograph of a man in military uniform, with the name "Adolf Hitler" written in white text.

The bottom right corner features a photograph of a man in military uniform, with the name "Kurt Waldheim" written in white text. Below this, there is a photograph of a man in military uniform, with the name "Kurt Waldheim" written in white text.
The collage is titled "Kurt Wolff" in the top left corner, and the text "Freemason" in the bottom left corner. The text is in white, contrasting with the black and white photographs, and is arranged in a grid-like pattern across the image. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of a historical document or a propaganda poster, with a focus on the names and titles of the individuals featured.

The image is a collage of six separate images, each depicting a different scene or character. The top left image shows a dark, circular stage with a spotlight shining on a figure in the center, who appears to be in a dark, dramatic pose. The top right image features a man in a blue shirt, smiling and looking directly at the camera. The bottom left image shows a character in a blue dress, with her arms outstretched and a surprised expression on her face. The bottom right image shows a character with a red heart on his chest, wearing a black outfit with a white mask, and a sinister expression. The bottom center image shows a character with a dark, spiky hairstyle and a serious expression. The bottom right image features a colorful, ornate card with a variety of designs and text, including "ANGEL" and "TONY CORPORATION." The text in the image reads, "Nezazch is playing his role. The top is a series of pictures of the theatre. That everything is a play, and that you are being watched and are perhaps even watching yourself. Alice is the initiate in old ritual practices involved in destroying ego. The girl beside her is Ran from Texhnoylze who plays a similar part but is also a seer who can "read" the "future" and has other paranormal abilities. Next is Ryuk from Death Note. There are so many stories of celestial beings coming down to earth to enjoy its pleasures but don't want to fully commit to living a full life on earth. In death you do not have an ego connected to the world which encouraged psychopathic behavior from not feeling any shame or attachment. The picture after that is jus Samsara. The bottom picture is just further reinforcement of the play people do, they can be lazy or horrible people but don't get angry at them for it's just the script they have to follow for the play.

The reason why I made that picture is because these are all reoccurring tropes and archetypes. There is some sort of secret underground culture and community that is aware of all of this. You can blame Freemasons but these ideas and rituals go even further back then that.

The "leftist" part of the script will and is being phased out. This will take some time, but much has been done since September 2022.

i hate this world more than most of you can possibly imagine. i think its approaching supernatural levels of hate. normies have never felt the level of hate i am capable of. im starting to think that at certain levels, hate, and possibly any emotion, becomes powerful enough to manifest physical reality, because i'm near certain i've killed tons of people with my mind just by directing my immense god-like hatred onto them. when directed at one person... they simply die. there's a reason i'm capable of god-like levels of hate but i won't go into it. i've told normies a few times and they simply don't believe it, too far fetched for them. i'm more curious what supernatural god-like levels of love can manifest into reality, but i'm not capable of that.

empedocles speaks of this. look into him. it's not hatred, it's strife. pure separation. you are so separated from your fellow man ("normies") that your brain is functioning as if made of different elements. that would be why you'd relate differently to physical reality. you're not killing people, just separating them even further from yourself. ultimate love is the opposite and brings things together

At the bottom of the timeline, there is a small illustration of a building with a bird perched on its roof. The text at the top of the timeline reads "The Man Who Dreamed." The style of the image is reminiscent of a comic strip, with a focus on the narrative and the characters' actions.

I don't see it as any different than worrying about being put into a crappy nursing home when you're old because your descendants don't care about you.
It's natural to worry that your descendants will replace you but if you treat them well they are likely to honor you. This kind of lesson goes all the way back to the Greek foundational mythos and beyond. Kronos ate his children, so they killed him.

The image is a humorous and satirical representation of the concept of artificial intelligence (AI) and its relationship to human intelligence. It is a graph with four quadrants labeled "Intelligence," "Birds," "Humans," and "Ants," each with a corresponding line graph. The "Intelligence" line graph shows a steady increase in the number of years, while the "Humans" line graph shows a steady decrease in the number of years. The "Birds" line graph shows a steady increase in the number of years. The "Ants" line graph shows a steady decrease in the number of years.

At the top of the image, there is a caption that reads, "Haha that's adorable the funny robot can do monkey tricks!" This caption is humorously referencing the concept of a "dumb human" and a "dumb monkey" in the context of AI.
The image is overlaid with a red line that extends from the top left to the bottom right of the image, with a caption that reads, "The fuck?" This line is a visual representation of the concept of AI's ability to learn and adapt, as indicated by the red line.
The image is attributed to "walitbutwhy.com" in the bottom right corner, suggesting that the creator of the image is a user named Walitbutwhy. The overall style of the image is a blend of humor and science, using visual elements to convey the idea of AI's rapid development and the potential for it to surpass human intelligence.

Scope–severity grid from Bostrom's paper "Existential Risk Prevention as Global Priority".[1] S-risks are sometimes considered a type of existential risk (x-risk).[2]
Risks of astronomical suffering, also called suffering risks or s-risks, are risks involving much more suffering than all that has occurred on Earth so far.[3][4]

According to some scholars, s-risks warrant serious consideration as they are not extremely unlikely and can arise from unforeseen scenarios. Although they may appear speculative, factors such as technological advancement, power dynamics, and historical precedents indicate that advanced technology could inadvertently result in substantial suffering.[5]

Sources of possible s-risks include advanced artificial intelligence,[6][7] space colonization[8] and the spread of wild animal suffering to other planets.[9]

S-risks can be intentional, driven by factors like tribalism, sadism or a desire for retribution; or incidental, for example arising as a byproduct of economic incentives.[10]

Sources of s-risk

Artificial intelligence

Artificial intelligence is central to s-risk discussions because it may eventually enable powerful actors to control vast technological systems. In a worst-case scenario, AI could be used to create systems of perpetual suffering, such as a totalitarian regime expanding across space.[11] Additionally, s-risks might arise incidentally, such as through AI-driven simulations of conscious beings experiencing suffering, or from economic activities that disregard the well-being of nonhuman or digital minds.[4] Steven Umbrello, an AI ethics researcher, has warned that biological computing may make system design more prone to s-risks.[6]

Space colonization

Space colonization could increase suffering by introducing wild animals to new environments. Animals may struggle to survive, facing hunger, disease, and predation, which could result in widespread suffering.[12] Phil Torres argues that space colonization poses significant "suffering risks", where expansion into space will lead to the creation of diverse civilizations and post-human species with conflicting interests. These differences, combined with advanced weaponry and the vast distances between civilizations slowing communications, could result in catastrophic and unresolvable conflicts. Strategies like a "cosmic Leviathan" to impose order or deterrence policies are constrained by the physics of space and the destructive power of future technologies. Torres believes that space colonization should be delayed or avoided altogether.[13]

Magnus Vinding's "astronomical atrocity problem" questions whether vast amounts of happiness can justify extreme suffering from space colonization. He highlights moral concerns such as diminishing returns on positive goods, the potentially incomparable weight of severe suffering, and the priority of preventing misery. He argues that if colonization is inevitable, it should be led by agents deeply committed to minimizing harm.[14]

Malevolent actors and ideologies

A classification of s-risks by cause.[10]

S-risk scenarios may also arise intentionally. Such risks escalate in situations such as warfare or terrorism, especially when advanced technology is involved, as conflicts can amplify destructive tendencies like sadism, tribalism, and retributivism. War often intensifies these dynamics, with the possibility of catastrophic threats being used to force concessions. Agential s-risks are further aggravated by malevolent traits in powerful individuals, such as narcissism or psychopathy. This is exemplified by totalitarian dictators like Hitler and Stalin, whose actions in the 20th century inflicted widespread suffering.[10]

Genetic engineering

David Pearce has argued that genetic engineering is a potential s-risk. Pearce argues that while technological mastery over the pleasure-pain axis could lead to the potential eradication of suffering, it could also potentially be used to create "hyperpain" or "dolorium" that experience levels of suffering beyond the human range.[15]

Mitigation strategies

To mitigate s-risks, efforts focus on researching and understanding the factors that exacerbate them, particularly in emerging technologies and social structures. Targeted strategies include promoting safe AI design, ensuring cooperation among AI developers, and modeling future civilizations to anticipate risks. Broad strategies may advocate for moral norms against large-scale suffering and stable political institutions.[16]

The figure's face is adorned with a face paint that includes a mix of colors, including red, blue, and purple, and the eyes are accentuated with a silver glittery effect. The figure's hair is styled in a complex, ornate arrangement, with what appears to be a crown or headdress at the top. The figure's hands are adorned with what looks like a collection of metallic objects, possibly jewelry or decorative elements, and they are holding a heart-shaped object.

The image is a screenshot of a text-based interface with a yellow background and black text. At the top, there is a question asking, "Are you cleverbot?" followed by a response, "No, you are." The text continues with a statement about the user's memory, "Oh ho ho, I remember you! You've never changed. Good ol cleverbot, I remember the day we first met." The text then transitions to a question about the user's behavior, "When did we first meet?" followed by a response, "Does Ben drowned, or Jadeable ring a bell?" The text concludes with a statement about the user's forgetfulness, "Nope, well, everyone forgets something sometimes." The last line of text is a request for the user's identity, "I can be your domme." The text is arranged in a column format, with each line of text on a separate line. The style of the image is typical of a user interface design, with a focus on clarity and readability.

[65 / 13]The image is a painting that depicts a scene with two figures, one of which appears to be a winged creature with a serpentine body. The winged figure is holding a small object in its hand, which seems to be a baby. The other figure, lying on the ground, has long, flowing hair and is nude. The background is a blend of natural elements, including trees and foliage, and the sky is visible through the trees. The painting style is realistic with a focus on the details of the figures and the natural environment. The colors used are warm and earthy, with a palette that includes shades of brown, green, and blue. The overall mood of the painting is serene and contemplative, with a sense of mystery and wonder.

I've been a devotee to Lilith for a few years now. It's a whole story but essentially I was Christian almost all my life, until I came to the conclusion that God just didn't want me as his child because I never felt his presence, his love, my prayers felt unheard, and it was like the closer I got the worse my life became. So due to this I started looking into other deities, and I found Lilith. She gives me all of those things God never did. When I pray to her, I can feel she hears. When I call upon her, I feel her presence. I love her, and she is my goddess.

But because of said Christian upbringing and life, I gotta admit I do fear going to the eternal rape and torture dungeon called Hell that the "loving god" sends bad boys and girls to. I've read that if the Qliphothic system is the real system, then I'm gonna head to the realm of Gamariel where Lilith rules, but im not sure. It's such a niche system.

Anyways, my hopes is that God is as forgiving as they say he is if he's real, and if he's not my hope is that Lilith won't let me be tortured forever in Hell. Please help me figure this question out

>I've been a devotee to Lilith for a few years now.
Sorry to hear.

>I was Christian almost all my life, until I came to the conclusion that God just didn't want me as his child because I never felt his presence, his love, my prayers felt unheard Keyword "I"
>I came to the conclusion
(You) Came to that conclusion, not God.
To be Christian is to try to imitate Christ, hence the name Christ+ian. Remember Christ in the garden of agony? Remember where He cried and gritted his teeth in prayer, begging for God to spare Him from his fate of crucifixion? Remember how God didn't reply to his prayer? Remember when He was on the cross, and even as He was dying, His didn't answer? Remember where he cried out "Father, why have you forsaken me?" You had been imitating Christ without knowing. And then you stopped, trading Christ in for a demon.

>She gives me all of those things God never did.

Yeah, so does Satan. When I had prayed to Lucifer for things the response time was pretty fast, I got money I got power when I asked. What you don't realize is the price, the hidden cost. By the time you find out, you're close to death. Bodily and spiritually, so just a heads up OP.

>I gotta admit I do fear going to the eternal rape and torture dungeon called Hell
You chose that. You admitted that earlier, you swapped Christ for Lilith, and you did so knowingly. At any rate, you will go to Hell sooner than you think. And it can happen in this life. You plunge into it while alive, from within. And if you die in that state, that's where you go eternally.

>Anyway I hope God is forgiving as they say Forgiveness is a choice, one God makes eternally. Accepting forgiveness is also a choice. Forgiveness require two participants, the one who forgives and the one who is forgiven. And if you refuse to accept the forgiveness you won't be forgiven. If you refuse God, you won't be with God when you die.

>hope is that Lilith won't let me be tortured forever
Lilith lures you there.

>Lilith lures you there

Succubus, Siren, Temptress. All three of them are as sweet as honey, very 'loving'. That's the trap OP, to kill you with a smile. Because demons know you fall for it, demons know you are desperate for it, and they will oblige.

Let's say you hated someone and you know they are alcoholic and depressed. How to do it without appearing obvious in your wicked intent? How do you do it without facing legal consequences? How do you make a man destroy himself without lifting a finger?

Be his friend. Give sweet encouragements, reassurances, let him know his life is hard and he is not to be blamed for drinking, tell him he has a right to regulate his own pain, give him a drink, then a strong one, and a stronger one. Smile while listening to all his woes and give a shoulder for him to cry on. But never tell him how to slay his demons, just tell him how to numb himself. Hand him the drink. Watch him rot, watch him either, watch him die. Exonerate yourself as a hero, a kind "saviour", convince yourself you are "loving" person as you knowingly poison him by proxy, using his own despair as the means to do it.

That's how Lilith works. Of course she is sweet and alluring and comforting, she ha to be. Otherwise you will open your eyes and witness the path to Hell she is slowly pushing you into.

>How could we rid the world of such evil?
The answer is simple. But the problem with it is that its too simple, much too simple. To rid the world of all evil: Man must stop choosing it, that's it. That's the cure right there. If every man on the Earth were to stop choosing it today, in the next hour even, no more evil.

Imagine how funny it is and hilarious it must seem to Satan, that the exit to evil is always in front of man yet he scuttles around aimlessly like a beheaded chicken never finding it.

Humans fancy themselves as “intelligent”, “complex”, and “deep”. So Satan hides the exit on the surface, in simplicity, so that man may never find it.

>How can we responsibly awaken those who have been abandoned to such a degree that they choose to feed their waking thoughts and energy to these things under a false premise?

Pain & suffering is the cure. By that I mean, man must own his own pain rather than giving it to demons. The reason God does not lift our pain is because God does not take what is ours. God would rather we turn suffering into wisdom, and pain into passion. So that we can become more like God and less like a beast. God doesn't answer, because God trusts us with the pain. Yes, just as we are called to put faith in God, it also means God has faith in us. God trusts us to carry our pain, full well knowing it leads to rarifying our souls. Like how a blacksmith trusts the metal as he plunges it into a furnace that it will be as steel one day.

We are to trust that day arrives too. In the meantime, demons will do anything to erode, subvert and snuff out this trust. Which is how & why Lilith showed up into OP's life. She does not want him to be forged into strength. She wants him to break instead.

I understand but if evil was in the room between us right now kicking someone who was down, op for example, i would hope you'd fight it with me.
Your solution is to wait for a world that perpetuates its ways to sort itself out until people who suffer and have nothing else to cling to pull themselves up by the bootstraps, just magically get the idea that they're worthwhile when the environment tells them otherwise.
When the scales are so stacked can we really expect people to leverage whatever glimmer of light might reach them into lasting change for the better?
I feel like we should do something other than to just accept and direct attention elsewhere.
Shouldn't we try to at least make them want something else by the volition left to us?
If evil is doing propaganda and latching itself onto our collective subconscious should we really just let it run rampant and not try to somehow mercifully and responsibly dispel the illusions that plague what are often good people that have been mislead?
Yeah people are stronger than they realize but it doesn't have to be like this, in theory life is so easy that you don't even need to understand the rules but the systems are out of whack, the fail-safes are distant. Are we not supposed to be one of the pillars people could turn to against their own ruin?

The image shows a relief sculpture of a female figure, possibly a goddess, standing on a pedestal. The figure is depicted with a winged headdress, a necklace, and a draped garment. The sculpture is made of a light-colored material, possibly stone or marble, and shows signs of weathering and wear, indicating its age and the passage of time. The figure is surrounded by three smaller figures that resemble cats, each with a different expression. These figures are also made of the same light-colored material and are positioned to the left of the central figure. The background of the sculpture is a dark, textured surface that contrasts with the lighter color of the figures and the figure itself. The style of the sculpture is reminiscent of ancient Egyptian or Assyrian art, characterized by its detailed depiction of the human form and the use of mythological or symbolic imagery. The overall composition and the style of the figures suggest a connection to ancient Egyptian or Assyrian art, possibly from the 1st or 2nd century BCE.

Lilith is a night-demon, similar to the Old Hag, succubi/incubi, or other sleep paralysis creatures. There's no historical or archaeological evidence of worship as a deity, or prayer outside the "Please, leave us alone" sort of begging.

I don't believe in Hell, but I am baffled by people who would worship something that isn't a deity. It feels... small.

Pic semi-related. Sometimes identified as a lilitu, but honestly more likely to be Inanna or (my personal opinion) Ereshkigal.

As yhou can imagine, the road you are on leads fo everalsting punishment. It is never too late to turn back. If you decide to repent, you should recognize that God has perfect knowledge and that He says "no" for a reason. Faith is not just believing in God, it is believing Him to make the right choices. It's not a cure if it's not practically implementable and you presume simplicity because the picture is more complicated thab you can imagine. The very bottomline is that human spirits have been subject of astral abuse and closed themselves off from abusive spiritual influences. Enthralling someones consciousness to the degree where lifechoices are not questioned is done on a daily basis and sticking your head above the field will yield result in amplified attempts. People with notabke spiritual accomplishments can counteract it but you cannot judt blame every individual person for making decisions when they are not their lucid and authentic self.

I understand you want to highlight the importance of people being harder and critical of themselves. I agree. But the world would be better off if the mental realms of people were simply cleansed of that vile influence.

>Pain & suffering is the cure
No, it is a very inefficient route to inner change and a forced route as well. Changing yourself takes one decision and then a series of habitual changes. I would agree that the freedom to choose how you suffer (to grow) is important though.
>We are to trust that day arrives too. In the meantime, demons will do anything to erode, subvert and snuff out this trust.
I think it's ironic that you highlight in one breath the persona of the individual who entices his drunken "friend" and supports them with a smile, while in the next you take on the same mask, say "trust the plan, the demons will erode it but you have to stay the course". As if trading one demon for the other. You already said it yourself: we have a collective sense of apathy. The world can be better if we will it.

The image is a painting that depicts a surrealistic scene. In the foreground, there is a figure with a large, horned head and a muscular body, wearing a gold-colored outfit with white breeches and a white shirt. The figure is in mid-air, with one arm extended and the other bent at the elbow, as if performing a balancing act. The figure's legs are spread apart, and the feet are bare. The figure's face is obscured by a mask, and the eyes are hidden behind a pair of horned spectacles.

apron. The figure is holding a blue object in their hand. To the left of the seated figure, there is a white cat with a long tail, standing on its hind legs. The cat appears to be looking up at the seated figure.
The sky is filled with clouds, and the overall color palette of the painting is dominated by shades of blue, white, and gold. The style of the painting is reminiscent of the Art Nouveau movement, characterized by its use of flowing lines and a sense of movement. The painting is rendered in a realistic style, with attention to detail in the clothing and the naturalistic depiction of the cat and the rock.

"Lilith" as you understand her is a New Age concept conjured up by formerly-practicing Jewish feminists as a call back to the "she-demon" mentioned in the Talmud. It was done as a point of pride, for the same reason other groups reclaim derogatory terms.

Even in her earliest depictions, "she" is just another Lilu (there is no such thing as a "lilītu" these entities are genderless fleshdolls with no genitalia), a pest moreso than anything else. She was certainly not Adam's "first wife" lmao, that's actual New Age nonsense.

Also keep in mind that many of the individuals involved in the creation of her modern image, were also heavily associated with individuals involved in the formation and individual maintenance of the military industrial complex, the five eyes alliance, and the think tank bureaucracy that determines D.C. policy today. The same people who established the current world order, and were also a part of the previous world order, are now laying the groundwork for the next world order after this one collapses.

They create an egregore around "Lilith" turning the demon Lilin into a "Goddess" to tempt the future Champion of Light with. What they do not understand is that Joshua is NOT in fact, Yeshua been Yosef: he just looks and acts incredibly similar to him. They think we are in Revelation - they are wrong.

Yeshua is not actually returning - he already did, and is now running the show in the same position his father once held. Yahweh has been retired for tens of thousands of years now, like his father El before him. The second coming came and went - millennial kingdom too.

We are in the Devil's Little Season right now. Everything you know is wrong.

Definitely Ereshkigal given the historical context of its construction and usage. The only reason there's even a debate still is because we haven't found a note or a sign of some kind that literally says "this is Ereshkigal", so there's still a non-zero chance it could be Inanna.

You are literally a spiritual lolcow/harvestee, most of these monitoring spirits, probably even the ‘Lilith’ you are in contact with, are just lowly pleasure machines and astral jesters, that shift your mindset to certain desires to align with what is being harvested.

Do you really think a ancient ‘highly ranked’ demonic entity is going to take the time to talk, assist and take a deeper interest in some gooner from 4chan? Maybe if you were like some bodhisattva occultist, but playing probability that is not you. Really you are either in communion with the spiritual equivalent of Indian tech support or are being scammed by some jester-maxxed spirit.

>I understand but if evil was in the room between us right now kicking someone who was down, op for example, i would hope you'd fight it with me.
No need for hope, that's what's been done, it's why I bothered to tell OP what needs to be said.

>Your solution is to wait for a world that will sort itself out until people who suffer and have nothing else to cling to pull themselves up by the bootstraps
Not my solution to execute, OP's solution to do so. Ideally it would be nice if people could wake up and face evil before being victim to it. Unfortunately not many do, many only discern it after they've been devoured. That's not my hope or solution, nor God's. That is man's choice.

>I feel like we should do something other than to just accept and direct attention elsewhere.
Agreed. So direction the attention to God first and foremost. Secondly if you must direct attention to the demonic, do it the same way a commander studies his enemy, in a way that learns how the demonic work so as to reverse their tricks and deceptions.

>Shouldn't we try to at least make them want something else by the volition left to us?
We can't make them want anything. We can try, but we'd be playing the same game as the demon. Demons strive to make men want things, to lead them astray. Do you trust humans to do better?

>Are we not supposed to be one of the pillars people could turn to against their own ruin?
We're called to be a light in the dark for others. To help light their candles, share the light. That light a reflection of God's own. Doesn't come from us, we simply reflect it.

>Do you pray to God for money and power too?
No. Instead of praying to God for things, I pray for the strength or wisdom to attain those things if it's in accordance with His will. God would rather give the fishing rod than the fish that way.

As if trading one demon for the other. You already said it yourself: we have a collective sense of apathy. The world can be better if we will it.

They are not comparable. One is to avoid being played by Evil, the other is to invite evil or submit to it. These are not "trading one demon for another". It is the outright rejection of them altogether.

Curious...
How do you generally perceive this ongoing... let's say... "mess"?
Are you from a highly religious country/culture? What does faith even mean to you, and why should higher beings, if they exist, be so petty in their judgments?
(I probably write this often, but personally, I'm from Russia and here, to put it mildly, everything is terrible with this)
For me, what matters most is what people do and what guides them, depending on how severe the actual consequences of their actions are (or the potential consequences that are quite likely when choosing actions). The rituals a person follows are of the least importance.
Doesn't it seem strange to you that there should be a proportionality between punishments and rewards?
Of course, there's the option that "hell" is life without a god (although it doesn't specify which one), but with this assertion, reality is very similar, just "not quite."
The dead-end and meaninglessness of most people's existence also casts doubt on the influence of anyone of any significant magnitude—how many lives have been improved by faith in someone, rather than vice versa? Why is this? Why, seeing all this, do people ask other questions?

>So the issue is partly that you had a materialist mindset
Oh absolutely not. I wish that were the case, would've been much easier to solve. I did not want power or money for the sake of power or money alone. I wanted those things to bend reality to my will and assert myself above the well-being of others full well-knowing about matters of the soul and yet electing not to care. This was at a time that I felt man should appoint himself as God.

>Then scurried away to God and became a good Christian
More like saved. I had no intention to run to God, it was the last thing I had wanted to do. It was not my own doing that God intervened, I did not ask for His help at the time. Someone else asked God on my behalf is what happened, and God intervened in my life.

I blame both my past self and the demonic. You can do both without shirking accountability. Demons don't care if you are self aware or not, they'll hand you the rope to hang yourself with. Yes the choice to hang yourself is your own, but lets not pretend demons don't enable it on purpose, because they do. They prey on trauma, despair, pride, envy, lust, loneliness, whatever it is if it is shaped like a spiritual wound they crawl in. And when they enter your life, they will make sure you never get better, and that you are constantly called to spiritual self harm. And they do this because they hate humans as well as God.

It's not about karma, it's about spiritual warfare. And the way demons fight is they make sure man kills himself one way or the other.

Lilith is not a demonic entity, she is a human, and shouldn't be conflated with Satan. She rejected the premise of subservience to man. She was perfectly willing to submit to God but would not accept submitting to Adam someone she considered an equal. She wasn't even forced out of Eden. She uttered Gods true name voluntarily to cast herself out because SHE could not maintain a covenant with God under those circumstances. She did not try to bring down Adam or the creatures of the Garden with her cough Eve cough. She resides in a place similar to sheol/purgatory as a disembodied pre-fall human. Eves failure is a major reason why lilith appears to have "demonic" powers, but in reality she simply retains the power that humanity had pre-fall. The other demonic claim is from babylonians that did not believe in the premise of equality of genders or self determination. That being said if you believe in hell and the general beliefs of abrahamic religion you will likely go to hell for worshiping her over God. There is some wiggle room if God is your chief diety and you venerate her on the side. But rejection of God in favor of one of his creations breaks the first and second commandment explicitly, and potentially the fifth.

>Unironically worshipping a whore whose unfaithfulness and antics made Adam fuck off from Eden

Protip; Adam never was exiled from Eden by YHWH, he left of his own volition, and it was Lilith who took the apple, not Eve, which is a metaphor that she used the wisdom of life and existence in a vile manner to defend her own behavior rather than truly appreciate the taste of wisdom.

While I hate judaism as is, I despise just as much the catholicucks who changed their own canons to such an extent that most current bibles (there are multiple versions) might as well be fanfics written by generational prudes who couldn't accept the true wisdom of life and had to lie and delude themselves with a shitty interpretation that miss the point of the story entirely. Kind of ironic reallly, by trying to remove her from the canon they became a fascimile of her.

Also on an unretaled note, scientists did expiriments on monkeys by teaching them how to barter and use "money", and one of the first thing they learned to do spontaneously is to whore themselves out to other monkeys for easy food. Not saying its an inherently bad thing, but it's the natural course of things until you get your head out of the gutter and realize sloppy seconds aren't worth the apples brought to someone who won't appreciate the effort you took to bring them, and will eagerly feast on the apples brought by others, uncaring of the means they used to get them.

[5 / 2]The image displays a black and white illustration of a pentagram, which is a symbol often associated with occultism and esotericism. The pentagram is composed of five intersecting lines, each representing a different element or principle. At the center of the pentagram is the letter "A," which is commonly associated with the element of air. Surrounding the pentagram are various other symbols, including stars, a crescent moon, and a cross, each representing different concepts or attributes.

At the top of the pentagram, there is a circular symbol with the text "PRIMEMATON" inscribed around it. Below the pentagram, there is a circular symbol with the text "PRIMAL" inscribed around it. The text on these symbols is not fully legible due to the image resolution and the complexity of the symbols.

The image is a black and white illustration, and the style of the image is reminiscent of early 20th-century occult or esoteric art, which often features intricate and symbolic designs. The image is a digital reproduction, and the text is not clear enough to be read. The overall style of the image is formal and academic, with a focus on the symbolism and meaning of the pentagram and its accompanying symbols.

Just bought I think 70x extract and plan to smoke it. I've tried weed and shrooms before but they always just make me really anxious and don't feel all that spiritual but I hear this stuff hits differently. Any anons have pointers on how to do it right so I can maybe astral project or gain some sort of either mystical powers or insight? I'm hoping to shamanmaxx and come back to share whatever wisdom I gain on this stuff.

ive done 20x salvia and its extremely fun but totally pointless in terms of gaining insight. you might feel as if you are coming to some crazy revelations while the trip is happening and shortly after, but it leaves you like a dream, and whatever of it you can remember afterwards, you realise was totally retarded with 70x though, you're gonna be totally blasted away, it doesnt feel like reality at all even at 20x. you ever been in the shroom pocket, where its just you and your soul? its like that, but your soul doesnt exist either. you'll soon see what i mean.
gone! gone! gone beyond! far beyond! to the shore of enlightenment, hail!

also, to your question of how to do it right, just hold it in for like 30 seconds, or in the words of salvia eric, until your vision starts shaking.
with 70x though, you wont need to worry about doing too little.

I wouldn’t suggest it OP, if weed and shrooms are making you anxious it may just not be for you. No matter what you do, id suggest going easy on the dosage to start to get a feel for it.

its ideal you have someone with you though, or at least do it laying down. you might pass out or something. but its not toxic 70x is insane though, imo. it will hit hard regardless hmm just did shrooms for the first time(uncut penis envy) got like 7g total, ate maybe 1g yesterday, didnt feel much besides maybe slight mood elevation and got the vibe of kinda experiencing smells and tastes like the first time i experienced them instead of it being more dulled from repeat exposure then ate about 1g more about 6 more hours after taking the first, and basically the same feeling kept going till i went to sleep next day(today) was like meh ill try bit more and ate most of a shroom (maybe 2g) and now i'm not exactly sure what reality is anymore, feels like i'm in an artifically created existence that im forced to live in and exist that loops infinitely as some sort of a punishment (kinda like a more complex version of the white christmas black mirror episode) and im not exactly sure what to do now.... feel like now when i am eventually going to fall asleep again, ill go into another loop but felt like posting this....

Salvia is a complete, gritty obliteration of all forms of rationality. I've done it once and had a decent time, but there was nothing particularly spiritual about it other than analyzing how my conscious mind deteriorated into more primitive, core functions: the essence of some faculties of my psyche, like a concern with feeling trapped in a world that I was trying to help, only to be met with apathy.
One guy I vaguely knew thought he was being compressed into a Coke can, I can only assume he has some apprehensions about the artificiality and imprisoning nature of conformity, were I to inspect his trip with those particular lenses.
It's definitely an abstract experience, where your mind is flayed raw into pure psychosis. If weed and shrooms make you uneasy, I don't see any reason why this would prove any different, but go ahead, even bad trips can be beneficial.

felt the same, and any time I trip (on ANYTHING psychoactive) it comes back and worse even at low doses. Trick is to hang up the phone for good. At least that's my takeaway. Maybe there's some good in continuing to dive further, maybe you have to get past that 'oh fuck no I'm dying....no I was always dying....no I am a fractal' and somehow accept it peacefully. But anytime I come back to that place I panic and it gets worse.

But I can pretty much live a normal life. I mean, I'm more depressed and nihilistic, and if I see a thread like this or talk of fractals or see my HPPD symptoms manifest than I start down the rabbithole of thinking on the cosmic joke. But so long as I don't touch drugs it never overwhelms me and I can resume daily life.

(my last trip less than a year ago, I was desperately clawing trying to remember what normal life actually WAS, it was a very slow process of remembering how language works and what my hands are and what a human is and what the black glowing rectangle thing was and whatnot....but this meatsuit wants me to live a normal life so I'll listen to it, even if it's but a lie to keep me from ascending)

When I was like 16 I ordered a shit ton of salvia because I wanted to get enough to never run out. I had like ounces of 20x 60x 80x. I did so much, it’s not that bad at all, people saying it scawwy are pussies. Anyone who jumped out a window was a retard, shit was fun af tho and Sally D lived in my closet for a while. She’s a cool chick.

What you gotta do, is in a fat bowl put a pipe tobacco or weed base, a decent sized salvia layer, then a layer of chronic weed on the top, then on top of that spinkle a mix of cocaine, crumbled hash and kief, then you wanna warm the whole thing up a bit, melt the top kief into the yay, and spork that thing up and really hold it in, it’ll really blast you to the infinite galaga dubstep dimension and keeps you peppy afterward too.

IMO salvia was the perfect trippy drug becuas wit wears off fast so you could literally do it whenever and it’s not a problem.

Damn, so many issues with this post.

First off I’ve only heard bad things about penis envy, I would get literally anything else.

Also, just wait until you have a full day and take an eighth, 3.5, that’s the 1st time ticket dose. Never do a quarter, that’s the retard do too much dose, do 6g max ever. Have the day planned and have woods you can go in and a house you can go back to without having to drive. Have a babysitter or if you can’t, have a plan to follow that gets you in the woods at the beginning, but back home before you really get into it, so you know you’re safe.

Mine's very minor. Basically I have a bit more static overlay in my vision then I used to have before, and if I see contrasty lines (typically bright lines and dark lines together, easiest example would be a dock with really close together planks) they start....idk bending? I really cant describe it, it's like a vibration and bend and distortion and it engrosses me every time. And I can also (this one might be normal and not HPPD) make my eyes start uncontrollably vibrating if I look at high contrast text of a certain size (and maybe scrolling is a part of it idk I try to avoid doing it). ref picrel.
But some people seem to have it much worse, the guy from channel 5 on yt talks about his on occasion.

Put a tiny bit of weed at the bottom of the bowl too and don’t worry about trying to pack a big one you just need one big phat hit and you’ll be able to put the bong down

The image is a surrealistic painting featuring a central figure with a face that resembles a human with elongated, protruding teeth. The figure's eyes are wide open, and the mouth is wide open, revealing sharp teeth. The figure's skin is a deep blue, and it has a white, star-like halo around its head. The halo is composed of numerous small, white, red, and blue dots that radiate outward from the center. The background is a deep blue, with white stars scattered throughout. The painting has a textured appearance, with visible brushstrokes and a sense of movement. There is a signature in the bottom right corner that reads "R.D. 1992." The style of the painting is reminiscent of the Surrealist movement, characterized by dreamlike imagery and a focus on the subconscious.

I think it's to do with what your expectations are of the site, what you believe are possible things people could post there. I think just about anything could be posted here, even the answer to life.
And also I've had some trips where I watched a stream whose hosts were notorious for fucking with high callers so of course they REALLY fucked with me on my trip (I didn't call in, and in reality it was a normal stream and none of the shit that happened in my trip actually happened). So I have this secondary association that the internet will try to fuck with me when tripping (I also always "hear" neighbours complaining about my trip, or someone finding me tripping out or dead, cops coming, etc...but that started at a time when I was meditating alot and very mindful so I'm always able to convince myself I'm just hallucinating).

ngl now I realize my trips really are just schizo as fuck huh.

Anyways, it's the anonymity, the text nature (Easier to see different text then to hear&see different speech, think of how fucked up text is in dreams), the 'randomness', and whatever associations your brain has attached to the site (I will NEVE open this site in public, so that's an extra negative association).

The image is a vibrant and colorful photograph of a temple facade. The facade is adorned with intricate carvings and sculptures, predominantly in shades of blue, green, and red. The carvings feature a variety of shapes and figures, including animals, human figures, and abstract designs. The colors are vivid and varied, with the blue and green hues dominating the scene. The figures are detailed and appear to be in motion, adding a dynamic element to the composition. The overall style of the image is realistic, with a focus on the detailed craftsmanship of the temple facade. There are no visible texts or discernible brands in the image. The photograph is taken from a low angle, which emphasizes the height and grandeur of the temple structure. The image is a testament to the rich cultural heritage and artistic expression found in religious architecture.

I smoked 120x in a bong. I took another bong hit cause I didn't feel anything from initial hit. Then it kicked in. I remember my vision slowly tunneling out of sight then getting whiplashed into a swirling cascade of colors. The colors looked and swirled around like these temples in pic. It was as if every color represented a different local universe you can traverse too. Things spin around so fast and you really have no control where you are going. I definitely remember a hellish HL2 Combine Overwatch/Cthulic tentacle walled nightmare dimension. You eventually come back to your senses. Best to have a trip sitter who is sober around you so you don't risk hurting yourself OP and/or destroying your house while tripping.

That gravity is so weird. Salvia knocked me out of my body while a fairy in my CD player gently taunted me for my temporary predicament which felt quite permanent at the time. I was rattled for three days. I won't forget that experience.

The image is a vibrant and colorful illustration that appears to be a digital artwork. It features a surreal and dreamlike scene with a central spiral-like structure that radiates outwards, filled with various shapes and patterns that resemble eyes and other abstract forms. The colors are bright and varied, with hues of yellow, orange, green, blue, and red creating a sense of energy and movement.
In the foreground, there is a figure sitting on a bed with a blanket and a pillow, seemingly in a state of relaxation. The figure is wearing a red shirt and blue jeans, and the bed is positioned against a backdrop of a yellow wall with a window.
The background of the image is filled with a variety of objects and elements that contribute to the surreal atmosphere. There are houses with multiple windows, a television set, and a lamp, all rendered in a way that suggests they are part of the same scene. The overall style of the image is reminiscent of pop art, with its bold colors and dynamic composition.
There is a watermark on the image that reads "Shinran's Art," indicating the artist's name and possibly the source or creator of the artwork. The watermark is placed at the bottom right corner of the image.

[16 / 4]The image is a simple, black and white line drawing that depicts a character with a large, open mouth, tears streaming down its face, and a hand holding a piece of paper. The character appears to be in a state of distress or frustration, as suggested by the facial expression and the text on the paper. The text on the paper reads, "Get Capsa [1] Use the scroll bar below to find an image that is not like the others, then click Next." The style of the image is reminiscent of a meme or a satirical illustration, often used to convey a humorous or ironic message.

when it comes to the balls, 2 images show 1 ball and the rest show multiple balls.

so i pick whichever has balls spread out the most since the others are packed together if there are multiple but it's wrong.
or i pick the one that has the most amount of balls but that's also wrong.
the part i don't get is we are supposed to pick an image that is not like the others but in case with the ball and also sometimes the letters there are multiple of them that could be considered unlike the others.

nvm, this is my 2nd post today done in the new captcha. i think you just pick the image that has the most amount of balls

The image is a humorous meme featuring a cat in a playful pose. The cat is lying on its back with its paws raised in the air, appearing to be in a state of surprise or excitement. Its eyes are wide open, and its mouth is slightly open, as if it's about to bark or meow. The cat has a light brown coat with white markings on its chest and paws.
The background of the image is a beige-colored wall with a window and a plant. The cat is positioned in the center of the image, with the text "look at my fuckin balls" superimposed over the photo, suggesting a playful or teasing tone. The text is in white and is placed at the top of the image, just above the cat's head.
The overall style of the image is casual and lighthearted, with a focus on the cat's expressive pose and the humorous text. The image is likely intended to be a meme, a form of internet humor that uses images and text to convey a message or evoke a reaction.

The image is a digital graphic with a humorous tone. At the top, there is a stylized text that reads "Cool bug Facts's" in a purple font. Below this, there is a cartoon-style illustration of a bug with a humanoid body, arms, and legs. The bug has a large head with two antennae, a small body, and a long, thin body. It is wearing red boxing gloves and red shoes. The bug appears to be standing upright with its arms crossed.
The text below the illustration reads, "You dumb crotin, you fucking fool absolute fucking buffoon, you bumbling idiot. Fuck you." The text is in a bold, black font and is arranged in a way that it reads vertically, with the first line being the longest and the last line being the shortest. The style of the image is reminiscent of meme-style graphics, often used for humor or to share humorous content.

"Sint míhi déi Acheróntis propítii!"
‡
To Our Great Witch
A Pioneer in the Realms of the Esoteric and the Occult
The Old Adage one cannot help but to remember now and then, goes like this:
Don't Fuck with a Witch!
Tracy R. Twyman Estate, in spirit, dedicates this lawsuit which was brought against Sean Bryan Alger, to the disabled individual whom he belittled and mocked 'laughing' at their unfortunate situation and lot, and betrayed their trust; the "devout Muslim" as S.B. Alger would describe this person

Be it a "devout Muslim", be it a 'devout Christian', be it a 'devout Jew', or a 'devout Atheist'; be it black, or be it white; be it a man, or a woman; be it the Human, whose Light is but a nobler extension of the Divinity and the Divine

The noble among all, with their 'devotion' to what they are "I Am that I Am", to what they believe in, as they believe in themselves and trust that they shall achieve, rather, receive and given what they devote their own life to and seek

All point to the One

Something which is far beyond the comprehension of the Fatherless Bastard, Sean Bryan Alger, and all those alike, who do Hate and act on Hate and who do spread darkness within their soul

After all, the Godless Bastard must understand this:

Nothing goes Unnoticed

"He that loveth not knoweth not God"
Sounds familiar?

Either one Knows, or Knows not

The One remains, the many change and pass;
Heaven's light forever shines, Earth's shadows fly;
Life, like a dome of many-colour'd glass,
Stains the white radiance of Eternity,
Until Death tramples it to fragments.—Die,
If thou wouldst be with that which thou dost seek!
Follow where all is fled!—Rome's azure sky,
Flowers, ruins, statues, music, words, are weak
The glory they transfuse with fitting truth to speak.

From Adonais,
Bysshe Shelley

What a piece of work is a man! how noble in reason! how infinite in faculty! in form and moving how express and admirable! in action how like an angel! in apprehension how like a god! the beauty of the world! the paragon of animals!

From Hamlet,
Act II, Scene II

بَرَاءَةٌ مِنَ اللَّهِ وَرَسُولِهِ

It is the duty of Tracy R. Twyman's Estate, it is the duty of Tracy Twyman's Husband, it is the duty of Tracy's Widower to assure that late Tracy Twyman's is not taken advantage of while dead, as the visionary Tracy was taken advantage of while living by many misogynists filth and low mind Cowards
A bastard shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to his tenth generation shall he not enter into the congregation of the LORD.
Deuteronomy 23:2
يُعَذِّبْهُمُ اللَّهُ بِأَيْدِيكُمْ وَيُخْزِهِمْ وَيَنصُرْكُمْ عَلَيْهِمْ

The Fatherless Bastard, the Son of Trailers Whore Owes Tracy R. Twyman's Husband $1.2 Million

S. B. Alger will pay his dues to Tracy R. Twyman's Husband in Submission and Obedience, (and with a smile), in accordance to the Law, and according to the civil courts that sacrificed him

The Bastard swallowed the bait; as well, delivered the message unto the right hand, as he was supposed to Lack of foresight, the inability to foretell where this is heading to, and who are addressed now and then; misplacing the motives and narrowing them down to match one's own; all of these do contribute to an unseen and undetected confusion even when the decisions that are taken look and seem as a perfect execution and a fit reaction; not seeing the depth of this, the era or two and what overlaps, how far it extends and encompasses; all of these, and many other essential subtleties do have a great benefit and offer a greate advantage: the effect is the cause, nor what one comprehend and see is real -- nothing is real, all is possible, all is allowed

This is not a nation of laws nor rights nor integrity, as shamelessly promoted endlessly and universally; everyone is seeing this by now

The amount and quality of Hate one does experience from the 'community', from every walk of life -- at every interaction, the betrayal, could only attest that tyrannies are having it easy, and shall reign for another thousand years -yet, they won't

What is done to the other, is done to oneself, and to everyone

The bastard, the rotten fruit of whoredom, Sean Bryan Alger allowed others to utilize him and his girlfriend as dispensable tools, as chess-game pawns for an agenda that is much beyond his role and capability of his intelligence

The bastard allowed it, spread himself wide open for it to get where it needs to get to and in, hijacking his life and efforts, like a desease of the mind and body to spread around and infect others of the same type and of the same hatred.

For he will lower himself to any filth just to be given attention, like a typical and severe attention whore
A bastard shall not enter into the congregation of the LORD; even to his tenth generation shall he not enter into the congregation of the LORD.

Deuteronomy 23:2

Welcome to Hell. For where Elysium lies? Is it not in the full midst of Hades?

From their activities and of what moves them, indeed, they do all find Hell as a wonderful place, too attached to Hell and its pleasurable torments; like gnats, which find the flesh of the unburied dead as sweetmeat, a feast not to miss, a symposium of the morbid and of the which of the decaying; thus they continue their tract in disarray, serving the other, serving their masters as servants, and paying a price for it

If the Bigot Bastard who was conceived through whoredom, truly believed in a so called "God", or God©, or God®, or God™, or God vs God, or poↃ, or boӘ, or God, or God, --Prithee.. surely not 'le Gode Supérieur'-- then he, the bastard, should ask God why He, that is God, fucks up by creating other people that are different from him, that is, they look different, or that why he, which is the bastard, is different from the others which He, ie God, hath created, and horribly?

We are all aware, or made aware of, that the Bastard is buddies with God, thus, the bastard is previliged to question and inquire with God about God

--The bastard might as well, in an intimate moment, a very intimate moment within a very private 'session', ask God why was he, that is the bastard, born and birthed out of a whore, and a trailers park whore--

--Since the bastard has an addiction problem with social-media platforms, always chattering onboard, sharing many information with the public, and whoring himself for attention from everyone, the moment the bastard 'hears' God, that is God, answering him back, that is the bastard, in regard his inquiries, everyone will know then why was the bastard born of a whore, and a trailers park whore--

The idiot Bastard then should advise God and instruct Him, that is God, to take permission from him, the Bastard, when He, which is God, creates something else or new thus not to create something that the bastard, even though he sans taste, finds not suitable to his likening

The Bastard should be questioning God for His fuck-ups and bad taste in His craft and art of Creation

Perhaps the Bastard can teach 'God' how to create better things and not to fuck up again

When the Bastard starts feeding and housing himself by himself, being independent, obtaining a "full-time" job, instead of leeching on a hard working Widow and her children, and stealing from Tracy R. Twyman's Estate, and stealing from the dead Tracy R. Twyman, then the Bastard might have a right, within himself, to speak some nonsense and rubbish pretending to be of some worthy mind

The Bastard is not a man; he picks on vulnerable women and immobile disabled individuals, like the coward he is

The resentful bastard lacks the sense of humanity, ie, being inhumane. The abuse and the malice that the trailers bastard had directed against the dead Tracy R. Twyman, and Tracy R. Twyman's widower are of a low mind which knows no God nor humanity, knows nothing from nothing

"Judge not, that ye be not judged"

S.B. Alger is an illegitimate since birth. The Bastard is illegitimate at everything. The day Tracy R. Twyman departed from this world, the thief, and without hesitation, stole Tracy's Fans Mailing List, her address book, and emailed Tracy's Fans pretending to be in charge of Tracy's Estate in hopes to hijack anything that is Tracy Twyman

There was no permission requested from the bastard nor any were granted for the bastard to utilize Tracy Twyman's business address book

The Bastard was on a mission to Cancel and Eliminate everything of Tracy Twyman and what she devoted her life to; emailing Tracy's fans on regular basis, with illegitimate statements and detailing other future plans in regard Tracy's work as if he were the legal heir to Tracy Twyman and being her husband

This requires, as he sees it, canceling Tracy R. Twyman's husband thus to continue to make believe in his sick mind that he is Tracy Twyman's husband and heir

A mentally ill bastard

The son of a whore emailed all Tracy Twyman's fans and declared his plans to republish Tracy R. Twyman work on his own, just like this, like he owns Tracy's writings; This and soliciting 'help' from Tracy's Fans to accomplish such a task, jeopardizing others by inviting them to join and contribute to his illegal endeavor

In a span of two years after Tracy R. Twyman's death, the sick Bastard Sean Bryan Alger hashtagged #TracyTwyman at Twitter 6 Thousand times

The mentally ill Bastard pretends to be an authority in regard to Tracy R. Twyman's image and work, while utilizing the deceased author's name to spread hateful, antisemitism themed agendas and propagate misinformation against Jews in relation to Tracy Twyman's death. This all comes from his girlfriend's house, who is aware of his illegal activities (as she was also sued), who is also an employee of the US federal government

All of this, to bring attention to his replusive face, as if the world owes him some deserved attention

Some of the subjects he hash-tagged were of Religious Fanaticism themes and other rubbish of the same while pretending to be some sort of a theologian

The bastard is a religious fanatic who is obsessing on whom is considered a 'satanist author'. He tries to 'spread the Word' of the 'Devil' to low evolved souls as his, as he is posessed by low mind demons

The bastard cannot handle the slightest exposure to the "occult", thus religions were set and did command 'not to get involved' in no business of their lot

Observe how the bastard further propogates more of his nonsense as he gets fucked by the courts. The demons that do posses him do want the more of the failure that Sean Bryan does expreince; more of that, which have caused a harsh misery to betake him, as well being indebted 'forever' to Tracy R. Twyman's Husband, and more, losing his already shallow path in life

All of this, the attempt to destroy 23 years of Tracy's work and achievements, were for a pettiness of obtaining 'a thousand members' on one of his social media accounts. Also, compulsively to satisfy his Religious Fanaticism and promote the same utilizing the occult author name, Tracy R. Twyman

.. and being an Attention Whore

He got Fucked for doing so

.. as well, having addiction problems. serious addiction problem

This, addiction problem, had cost the bastard his wife and two daughters, losing them and never allowed to contact his daughters

Robotic Alyssia Anna Taylor controlled by the bastard
Obviously she lost her sense of herself

Abused by S.B. Alger, as her sense of 'dignity' as a woman and a mother was obliterated by the bastard

When Tracy Twyman's Estate protested the Bastard's malice and nefarious activities against what rightfully belongs to the Estate, and what was done against his late wife, the son of Cheap Trailers Whore and fuck went on a frenzy spreading misinformation against Tracy R. Twyman's Husband and Widower, initiating a massive organized front for acts of Piracy and Gangstalking

The low life Fatherless Bastard whom almost was aborted for being a despised outcome of early age unbridled whoredom, attempts to appeal to like-minded idiots, that is, other religious fanatics racists heavily inbred fucks, by pretending to be a victim who is persecuted due to his beliefs and religion by the heathen, Tracy's husband

Discord Server, S.B. Alger: "No, I think he's just mentally ill and demon-possessed personally."

As well, the Fatherless Bastard was instigating Skinheads and Neo-Nazi associates to send extremely vile, hateful and racist personal messages and threats to Tracy R. Twyman's Widower where S.B. Alger did give them Tracy's Husband contact information to do so: These actions are what to be classified as 'Hate Crimes'

Due to his motives for his malice, which is Hate, the bastard --as he lacks any sense of manhood, nor fathoms what is it to be a man since he is fatherless-- goes around multiple social media platforms spreading dark rumors against Tracy R. Twyman's husband, preparing other hateful individuals within the same group to 'hate' on Tracy R. Twyman's widower: Tracy's husband now and then receives hateful messages due to S.B. Alger, the bastard, efforts at malice

This comes from Alicia Anna Taylor household, who is on the Pentagon's payroll, the initiation of activities targeting a member of multiple minority groups with Hate crimes

This continues until this day

The Bastard S.B. Alger hates Semites. The bastard hates both Jews and hates Arabs as he broadcast his hatred in public, this is because Sean Bryan Alger, a Bastard, hates God

The Bastard is a God Hater. For the bastard is a Satanist Antisemite, a Necrophiliac Antisemite who harbors ill will against The God of the Semites, the God of Abraham, and the children of Abraham

One of the many reasons for the bastard to Hate God is that God spoke no English. For God had only proven his eloquence within the Semitic languages and letters, but not English, nor American English

The God Hater S.B. Alger thinks of God of the Semites as being a Foreigner, a Foreign Entity, a Semetic Mesopotamian and Iraqi God, from Ur, sourthern Iraq, which doubles the bastard's Hatred towards God

This will be a matter for the FBI to investigate, a case to be brought against many actors who are until this day continuing their thievery and their campaign of disinformation, to promote antisemitism

Of course, this is mixed with other offensive matters as such the absolute trash talk of the Religious Fanatic's religious themes; rubbish and other nonsense of the imbecile and those who do lack intelligence at every level; and relating such nonsense to Tracy Twyman who is at core and throughout her life, an antithesis to this repulsive and base nonsense of the lunatic

This, is to further his Master's agenda in regard 'Satanism and the Elites and the Jews', as such task was handed down to both: a Classic expression of Antisemitism

Like a surrogate mother who is impregnated by a foreign seed and blood, foreign to her will, the bastard is impregnated with concepts that he is nurturing out of his own, which are as foreign as they can be to his self and life style: very of a typical religious fanatic, the brainless, the born brainless

To be sued $1.2 million, for one to be sued at this capacity, he must be involved in something nasty, very nasty; at least from a metaphysical perspective

The Bastard of Boise was satisfying his Master's agenda for the love of Attention and for being a humiliated total Attention Whore

The worthless Bastard thought he was becoming a popular figure, progressing to be a public figure in status, a representative of the posthumous Tracy R. Twyman, as his master encouraged him to further interfere in Tracy Twyman's Estate's business with "sock puppets" who do thank him a million, and admire his 'bravery' for posting much on social media about Tracy Twyman, and for his attacks against Tracy Twyman's husband

The Bastard is fucked in the head, that is, he believed himself to be something of worth. These "sock puppets" were ran by one or two individuals who sacrificed him as well, that is, was tossed away like an old shoe

The psychopath Bastard thinks he is something special, God's gift to the human race. That he has some indispensable talent which mankind cannot be complete without. In fact, the bastard thinks that "God" speaks to him, because he is special and different from the others, a miracle bastard, thus he thinks of himself as being a delegate of God and a theologian of his time

Discord Server: I'm relectant to relay what I know about Tracy and God...

One could only hope -and in good faith and in good spirit- that God had absolutely no interest in sharing his sex toys and kink

Discord Server: like the holy ghost was yelling at me...

Discord Server: "But the spirit was speaking there too."

This is how FUCKED in the head is the Bastard
'..but.. but.. but.. I saw God eating biscuits!'

The head-fucked bastard that attached itself to Tracy R. Twyman's name.. astonishing.. what trash one has to deal with at times

He couldn't get rid of his 'addiction' and cease his senseless activities against Tracy Twyman's widower, even when he realized that he was being viciously fucked legally

A Bastard and an idiot, no surprise he managed to get himself in trouble, serious trouble

..and quoting the Scripture here and there, pretending to be a non-whorish docile grazing sheep, an innocent looking and sounding sheep, a sheep that is only minding its own business, grazing obliviously under the Heavens, rather, a victim whom is 'targeted' by Tracy R. Twyman's Estate for nothing

In his empty skull, the Bastard thinks it is an issue of religion and race, a Crusade.. This is how fucked in the head is he Is the man who is with his ex-wife laughing with S.B. Alger's ex-wife, the mother of his two daughters, at his Major Public Fuck Up & Humiliation?

Are they laughing at a loser who messed up his life at a time when he should had retired with ease (just by leeching on vulnerable women, widows and their victimized families like a cowardly cunt)?

Surely he is, the man who is dominating what was once his household, as well his ex-Wife, the "crazy bitch", laughing at Sean Bryan Alger, as both are in what was his bed at one time

S. B. Alger is a Failure. He lost his family, lost his wife, lost his two daughters; and now, he lost his money, future money and assets including future inheritance, and lost any of the prospects of marriage to the self-disrespecting needy girlfriend, the "Fiancé"

Alicia Anna Taylor & Gluttony

"chubby" and "traditional"
Fat and smelly, and a Religious Fanatic perhaps as the bastard tries to portray his girlfriend to justify his obession with Tracy R. Twyman?
In speculation of this proverb, and to give everything its deserved measure, and in consideration of the understanding of human nature of times before-- this line is addressed to 'man'. For a woman creates life into the corporal which necessitates a 'belly' that would 'want'. What triggers such 'want' within or wihtout the occasion thus would be originating from such cravings rather than the described 'gluttony'

Are these the main reasons for Alicia Anna Taylor which compells her to allow her boyfriend to drool on another man's dead wife publicly even when it is pointed out to the Bastard in public such is an unacceptable behavior?

Gluttony?

Does Alicia suffer from the consequences of the Sin of Gluttony?

The 'Camp' never worked out for her? Still suffering from the effects of Gluttony, physical and psychological?

Lack of self confidence?

She's OK with the Bastard's obsession with another man's wife? to a degree of ruining one's own life?

She has no 'say' in this?

Alicia pays the mortage, not S.B. Alger, she must have a say in this, she must

The usual of the ill-begotten Bastard, it is someone else to blame for the situation he is in

Since S. B. Alger is a Fatherless Bastard, no male figure initiated him into one of the fundamental passages unto Manhood, and being a Man: Taking responsibility of one's own Action and Decision; taking Ownership of oneself

Who is to blame this time? God? The chattering spirit issuing commands audible only to him? Nurse Alicia Anna Taylor, his girlfriend? ..to blame for this major burden that fell on him?

Indeed, the cheap trailers fuck will blame Alicia this time: For she had not paid nor 'lent' S.B. Alger the money to pay for a lawyer on the first round..

Alicia stood up for herself, for once

Moments of sanity, a phase of clarity, priorities rearranged, which were short lived, Alicia ejected the Bastard out of her house, sending him back to Walla Walla, protecting her self and her family from his creepy fuck ups

Why does not Alicia see that S.B. Alger is deprived from his own two daughters by law for a valid reason? Why would she admit such toxic psycopath back into her house, leeching on her and her family?

How would Ryan feel about it?

Alicia did not pay for a lawyer to clean up after the bastard's own mess and for the results of his obsession with a dead married woman..

What will Alicia tell her sister, family, friends, neighbors, co-workers, church members in regard Sean Bryan Alger? Would she tell them that her "boyfriend" had been sued $1.2 million by a "crazy Arab" because her creepy boyfriend was obsessing over his dead wife publicly and making a scene of it? This.. while disregarding Alicia, humiliating her publicly?

How would she tackle this degradation without having her family looking down on her, that she is allowing her creepy and mentally ill boyfriend tread all over her, and without a sense of shame, provoking the "crazy Arab" by being indecent and repulsive towards his dead wife's memory?

The Irony or the worst of it is this deceased author is an author of 'Statnist' books, or the least, of the "occult". What Alicia thinks of this? Both of them claim to be 'religious' and etc, yet she allows her boyfriend to be invovled in a 'satainist' world and work, and the world of the 'satanist's' husband who they think of as a "niqqa" and a heathen; a brute; indeed a brute and wild

It is already backfiring. They, the bastard and his "chubby" abused (i.e. "traditional") girlfriend, thought that tickling the devil's balls is a matter that can be taken lightly

Balls of Hot Steel which burns those who touch these Red Balls with their finger tips feeling them or hold these Hot Balls with their palm

Did not God advise, and command them not to be involved with Witchcraft nor Witches?

Are they both deaf to God's Commandments?

They Listen not to God?

Why not Repent from this 'occult' business?

In summa, Alicia Lee Taylor had betrayed the Bastard Sean Bryan Alger and let him down, forsaken him and his fate unto the hands of the "crazy Arab" husband:

It is Alicia fault that Sean Bryan Alger has to pay $1.2 Million for this thievery (Thou Shalt not Steal.. rings a bell?).. he is a victim, it is not his fault.. not at all.. a victim.. a 'targeted individual'.. it is the "crazy Arab" who is the bad guy, may be it is his fault.. the Bastard is a good guy and a poor victim...

The son of a whore won't recover from this

S.B. Alger did intrude in Tracy R. Twyman's private life. No respect was given to the dead nor to her grieving widower neither

A disgusting and predictable hypocrite and Religious Fanatic. What brought him to this then?

The hypocrite preaches about God while being actively deprived and lacking any knowledge of theology and the spiritual

Such is very the obvious from the Bastard's behavior which resembles nothing but Ignorance

Should he not think of God instead, and not of the dark side? Should he think not of God instead of obsessing on Tracy's husband wife, even while being dead? Nor the idiot was cut to tread the path of the infernal; look where is the idiot at now

A hateful Bastard: may Hate eats further into his so-called soul, and may his Hate damn his days and nights

He goes around like a maniac and vomits all around his disease out, 'Oh people, God sayeth this.. God also shat this there.. Prithee, would you like to find God'? He's stuck inside someone's ass.. wait! I will pull Him out for you.. here.. then I will say 'You found God!'.. I can show you the way, only I can do that.. Hark! The End is Near! Oh Repent to God! Oh, I just heard an angel fart in my ear, and another blasted the first away..!'

..and so forth with this nonsense that you hear now and then in the city's square, where the idiot thinks he is doing himself and the world a favour.. forcing himself and a sorry spectacle of his deficiencies on everyone..

It was once heard said like this at Downtown:

"Ye Sinners! Ye Fuckers! Ye Shitters! Motherfuckers! Repent Motherfuckers! Repent! Repent to the Motherfucker God! Ye shall all go to Hell.. Ye Motherfuckers are Heathens, Sinners!~ All of you shall be punished by Hell to dwell in and bathe naked before all in Lakes of Fire.. and bar-be-qued without an end forever and forever and forever with Zeno of Elea a Heathen! Motherfu.."

Of course, the idiot's case of chronic hemorrhoid condition got worse after this; it was very bad

Besides his blistering hemorrhoid malady, the idiot had not seen an unshaved pussy for many and many moons where he forgot when it happened or that it happened

Haters

Yet, while whoring God around high and low, the Narcissist Psychopath acts like a sick person as he is abusing Disabled Individuals, who came to him seeking a service as the bastard was entrusted to perform such a service; and then goes online writes about it like it is an achievement to brag about

Because the other person, the disabled individual and human being, a human with emotions and needs and above all with Dignity like everyone else was a "Muslim"

This extends, the Bastard's Hateful malice, towards and against Tracy R. Twyman's Husband and Widower

A degenerate, lowest of the low, base of a person never have been witnessed before, a coward and inhumane filth and trash

His upbringing in Trailers and being fatherless, had rendered him oblivious to what is it to respect his own private life and of the others. An upbringing which taught him not the importance of 'self respect', as he lacks any sense of himself

One cannot move like this in life without crossing the wrong person. And S.B. Alger did

To the many, it is a 'turn on' to see a supreme Idiot fucking up himself

Indeed, it is a turn on to see the vanquished in the act of being subdued in utter humiliation and succumbing to a lower and a degraded status in life

For "God is Good", as well is the show..

For how many of an idiot does the reader know, those who do fuck up themselves by owing $1.2 Million for Nothing?

I met a traveller from an antique land
Who said: Two vast and trunkless legs of stone
Stand in the desart. Near them, on the sand,
Half sunk, a shattered visage lies, whose frown,
And wrinkled lip, and sneer of cold command,
Tell that its sculptor well those passions read
Which yet survive, stamped on these lifeless things,
The hand that mocked them and the heart that fed:
And on the pedestal these words appear:
"My name is Ozymandias, King of Kings:
Look on my works, ye Mighty, and despair!"
No thing beside remains. Round the decay
Of that colossal wreck, boundless and bare
The lone and level sands stretch far away.
—Percy Bysshe Shelley, "Ozymandias", 1819 edition
But the eternal world
Contains at once the evil and the cure.
Some eminent in virtue shall start up,
Even in perversest time;
The truths of their pure lips, that never die,
Shall bind the scorpion falsehood with a wreath
Of ever-living flame,
Until the monster sting itself to death.

—Percy Bysshe Shelley, from his early "Queen Mab"

When he moves the whole world moves in hectic awakening, shaking all foundations of every perverse Tyranny on earth that thought of itself eternal, heralding the promise of sounds of breaking of the chains that enslaved mankind for centuries.

What is Genocide?

The legal term “genocide” refers to certain acts committed with the intent to destroy, in whole or in part, a national, ethnic, racial, or religious group. Genocide is an international crime, according to the Convention on the Prevention and Punishment of the Crime of Genocide (1948). The acts that constitute genocide fall into five categories:

- Killing members of the group

- Causing serious bodily or mental harm to members of the group

- Deliberately inflicting on the group conditions of life calculated to bring about its physical destruction, in whole or in part

- Imposing measures intended to prevent births within the group

- Forcibly transferring children of the group to another group

Although the term “genocide” is often used, its commission is rare when compared to other serious crimes that are not defined by an intent to destroy a targeted group, such as crimes against humanity and war crimes.

This, while the state and courts are protecting his ex-wife and two daughters from his harm and malice.
S.B. Alger is loathed and shunned by his own family that he had once and there is a reason for so.

It would had made more sense, had S. B. Alger focused on his own affairs and his dysfunctional life, lost family, perhaps to regain his wife and daughters once again; on his own 'belief system' and life after death; and not to interfere in others' life (nor others' 'life after death').

Rather, he made his situation much worse on himself with his own hands.

Of course, his girlfriend allows this and 'supports' his mental illness and other unforgiving deficiencies, demonstrating that she has no pride in herself as a Woman nor as a Mother, nor as a federal government employee.

It caught up with him very bad

Alger @sewneo @CoolStuff21 @HyCearnaidh @diamondmind311 @SloanBella He's a very strange and jealous and controlling person. I assume he imagines he should be the only one in control of how Tracy might be represented in the world.
Perhaps someone needs to explain to him that not all are into Cuckoldry.. or derive pleasure from such, and other activities of the self loathing
His Sickly Obsession led S. B. Alger to his Ruin

What is it that the Religious Fanatic does not understand in this; that Tracy R. Twyman was not his wife, nor he owns her work?

..such a bitch
LOL

Why is S. B. Alger Shocked? Why Perturbed? What was he expecting (or not expecting for the matter)?

That his malice and actions have no consequences, dire legal consequences?

..No Respect was Shown to the Dead, nor the Living

What was gained by being a Racist Bigot against Tracy Twyman's husband in Public?
What was accomplished by the Hateful acts & efforts & emotions directed and displayed against Tracy Twyman's husband in Public?
Was it how S. B. Alger showed respect to his God?
Beneath the shadow of the many of contradictions, S. B. Alger forgets that the God he deifies is the continuous invention of Tracy Twyman's Husband ancestors, as the foreign 'Middle Eastern' God speaks in the same tongue & language.
IF anything, there was no gain for S.B. Alger, rather, he owes a Fortune to Tracy Twyman's Widower, as well devolving his soul further into a habitat of a cheap Hell in life as a result of his Intentions and Acts of Malice motivated by Hate.
There are no Limits to Folly
